[5. Amendment Adding Debtor Name. Many states have enacted statutes governing the "conversion" of one organization organized under the law of that state, e.g., a corporation, into another such organization, e.g., a limited liability company. This Article defers to those statutes to determine whether the resulting organization is the same legal person as the initial, converting organization (albeit with a different name) or whether the resulting organization is a different legal person. When the governing statute does not clearly resolve the question, a secured party whose debtor is the converting organization may wish to proceed as if the statute provides for both results. In these circumstances, an amendment adding to the initial financing statement the name of the resulting organization may be preferable to an amendment substituting that name for the name of the debtor provided on the initial financing statement. In the event the governing statute is construed as providing that the resulting organization is the same legal person as the converting organization, but with a different name, the timely filing of such an amendment would satisfy the requirement of Section 9-507(c)(2). If, however, the governing statute is construed as providing that the resulting organization is a different legal person, the financing statement (which continues to provide the name of the original debtor) would be effective as to collateral acquired by the resulting organization ("new debtor") before, and within four months after, the conversion. See Section 9-508(b)(1). Inasmuch as it is the first financing statement filed against the resulting organization by the secured party, the record adding the name of the resulting organization as a debtor would constitute "an initial financing statement providing the name of the new debtor " under Section 9-508(b)(2). The secured party also may wish to file another financing statement naming the resulting organization as debtor. See Comment 4.]

Note: The bracketed language takes effect July 1, 2013.

5. Deletion of All Debtors or Secured Parties of Record. Subsection (e) assures that there will be a debtor and secured party of record for every financing statement.

Note: This paragraph 5. will be renumbered as 6. effective July 1, 2013.

Example: A filed financing statement names A and B as secured parties of record and covers inventory and equipment. An amendment deletes equipment and purports to delete A and B as secured parties of record without adding a substitute secured party. The amendment is ineffective to the extent it purports to delete the secured parties of record but effective with respect to the deletion of collateral. As a consequence, the financing statement, as amended, covers only inventory, but A and B remain as secured parties of record.

4-9-513. Termination statement. (a) A secured party shall cause the secured party of record for a financing statement to file a termination statement for the financing statement if the financing statement covers consumer goods and:

(1) There is no obligation secured by the collateral covered by the financing statement and no commitment to make an advance, incur an obligation, or otherwise give value; or

(2) The debtor did not authorize the filing of the initial financing statement.

(b) To comply with subsection (a) of this section, a secured party shall cause the secured party of record to file the termination statement:

(1) Within one month after there is no obligation secured by the collateral covered by the financing statement and no commitment to make an advance, incur an obligation, or otherwise give value; or

(2) If earlier, within twenty days after the secured party receives an authenticated demand from a debtor.

(c) In cases not governed by subsection (a) of this section, within twenty days after a secured party receives an authenticated demand from a debtor, the secured party shall cause the secured party of record for a financing statement to send to the debtor a termination statement for the financing statement or file the termination statement in the filing office if:

(1) Except in the case of a financing statement covering accounts or chattel paper that has been sold or goods that are the subject of a consignment, there is no obligation secured by the collateral covered by the financing statement and no commitment to make an advance, incur an obligation, or otherwise give value;

(2) The financing statement covers accounts or chattel paper that has been sold but as to which the account debtor or other person obligated has discharged its obligation;

(3) The financing statement covers goods that were the subject of a consignment to the debtor but are not in the debtor's possession; or

(4) The debtor did not authorize the filing of the initial financing statement.

(d) Except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-510, upon the filing of a termination statement with the filing office, the financing statement to which the termination statement relates ceases to be effective. Except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-510, for purposes of sections 4-9-519 (g), 4-9-522 (a), and 4-9-523 (c), the filing with the filing office of a termination statement relating to a financing statement that indicates that the debtor is a transmitting utility also causes the effectiveness of the financing statement to lapse.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado added the last sentence of subsection (d).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-404.

2. Duty to File or Send. This section specifies when a secured party must cause the secured party of record to file or send to the debtor a termination statement for a financing statement. Because most financing statements expire in five years unless a continuation statement is filed (Section 9-515), no compulsion is placed on the secured party to file a termination statement unless demanded by the debtor, except in the case of consumer goods. Because many consumers will not realize the importance to them of clearing the public record, an affirmative duty is put on the secured party in that case. But many purchase-money security interests in consumer goods will not be filed, except for motor vehicles. See Section 9-309(1). Under Section 9-311(b), compliance with a certificate-of-title statute is "equivalent to the filing of a financing statement under this article." Thus, this section applies to a certificate of title unless the section is superseded by a certificate-of-title statute that contains a specific rule addressing a secured party's duty to cause a notation of a security interest to be removed from a certificate of title. In the context of a certificate of title, however, the secured party could comply with this section by causing the removal itself or providing the debtor with documentation sufficient to enable the debtor to effect the removal.

Subsections (a) and (b) apply to a financing statement covering consumer goods. Subsection (c) applies to other financing statements. Subsection (a) and (c) each makes explicit what was implicit under former Article 9: If the debtor did not authorize the filing of a financing statement in the first place, the secured party of record should file or send a termination statement. The liability imposed upon a secured party that fails to comply with subsection (a) or (c) is identical to that imposed for the filing of an unauthorized financing statement or amendment. See Section 9-625(e).

3. "Bogus" Filings. A secured party's duty to send a termination statement arises when the secured party "receives" an authenticated demand from the debtor. In the case of an unauthorized financing statement, the person named as debtor in the financing statement may have no relationship with the named secured party and no reason to know the secured party's address. Inasmuch as the address in the financing statement is "held out by [the person named as secured party in the financing statement] as the place for receipt of such communications [i.e., communications relating to security interests]," the putative secured party is deemed to have "received" a notification delivered to that address. See Section 1-201(26). If a termination statement is not forthcoming, the person named as debtor itself may authorize the filing of a termination statement, which will be effective if it indicates that the person authorized it to be filed. See Sections 9-509(d)(2), 9-510(c).
Note:"1-201(26)." in the fourth sentence will be replaced with "1-202(e)." effective July 1, 2013.

4. Buyers of Receivables. Applied literally, former Section 9-404(1) would have required many buyers of receivables to file a termination statement immediately upon filing a financing statement because "there is no outstanding secured obligation and no commitment to make advances, incur obligations, or otherwise give value." Subsections (c)(1) and (2) remedy this problem. While the security interest of a buyer of accounts or chattel paper (B-1) is perfected, the debtor is not deemed to retain an interest in the sold receivables and thus could transfer no interest in them to another buyer (B-2) or to a lien creditor (LC). However, for purposes of determining the rights of the debtor's creditors and certain purchasers of accounts or chattel paper from the debtor, while B-1's security interest is unperfected, the debtor-seller is deemed to have rights in the sold receivables, and a competing security interest or judicial lien may attach to those rights. See Sections 9-318, 9-109, Comment 5. Suppose that B-1's security interest in certain accounts and chattel paper is perfected by filing, but the effectiveness of the financing statement lapses. Both before and after lapse, B-1 collects some of the receivables. After lapse, LC acquires a lien on the accounts and chattel paper. B-1's unperfected security interest in the accounts and chattel paper is subordinate to LC's rights. See Section 9-317(a)(2). But collections on accounts and chattel paper are not "accounts" or "chattel paper." Even if B-1's security interest in the accounts and chattel paper is or becomes unperfected, neither the debtor nor LC acquires rights to the collections that B-1 collects (and owns) before LC acquires a lien.

5. Effect of Filing. Subsection (d) states the effect of filing a termination statement: the related financing statement ceases to be effective. If one of several secured parties of record files a termination statement, subsection (d) applies only with respect to the rights of the person who authorized the filing of the termination statement. See Section 9-510(b). The financing statement remains effective with respect to the rights of the others. However, even if a financing statement is terminated (and thus no longer is effective) with respect to all secured parties of record, the financing statement, including the termination statement, will remain of record until at least one year after it lapses with respect to all secured parties of record. See Section 9-519(g).

4-9-514. Assignment of powers of secured party of record. (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c) of this section, an initial financing statement may reflect an assignment of all of the secured party's power to authorize an amendment to the financing statement by providing the name and mailing address of the assignee as the name and address of the secured party.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c) of this section, a secured party of record may assign of record all or part of its power to authorize an amendment to a financing statement by filing in the filing office an amendment of the financing statement that:

(1) Identifies, by its file number, the initial financing statement to which it relates;

(1.5) Provides the date that the initial financing statement was filed or recorded;

(2) Provides the name of the assignor; and

(3) Provides the name and mailing address of the assignee.

(c) An assignment of record of a security interest in a fixture covered by a record of a mortgage which is effective as a financing statement filed as a fixture filing under section 4-9-502 (c) may be made only by an assignment of record of the mortgage in the manner provided by law of this state other than this title.

(d) An assignment that was filed in accordance with this section prior to August 5, 2009, and that is on file in the filing office as of August 5, 2009, whether or not it provides the date that the initial financing statement was filed or recorded, shall be deemed to have been filed pursuant to and in accordance with this section as amended and shall have the same effect as if filed pursuant to this section as amended.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 4-9-405 as it existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado added the phrase "and the name of one of the debtors" to subsection (b)(2).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-405.

2. Assignments. This section provides a permissive device whereby a secured party of record may effectuate an assignment of its power to affect a financing statement. It may also be useful for a secured party who has assigned all or part of its security interest or agricultural lien and wishes to have the fact noted of record, so that inquiries concerning the transaction would be addressed to the assignee. See Section 9-502, Comment 2. Upon the filing of an assignment, the assignee becomes the "secured party of record" and may authorize the filing of a continuation statement, termination statement, or other amendment. Note that under Section 9-310(c) no filing of an assignment is required as a condition of continuing the perfected status of the security interest against creditors and transferees of the original debtor. However, if an assignment is not filed, the assignor remains the secured party of record, with the power (even if not the right) to authorize the filing of effective amendments. See Sections 9-511(c), 9-509(d).

Where a record of a mortgage is effective as a financing statement filed as a fixture filing (Section 9-502(c)), then an assignment of record of the security interest may be made only in the manner in which an assignment of record of the mortgage may be made under local real-property law.

3. Comparison to Prior Law. Most of the changes reflected in this section are for clarification or to embrace medium-neutral drafting. As a general matter, this section preserves the opportunity given by former Section 9-405 to assign a security interest of record in one of two different ways. Under subsection (a), a secured party may assign all of its power to affect a financing statement by naming an assignee in the initial financing statement. The secured party of record may accomplish the same result under subsection (b) by making a subsequent filing. Subsection (b) also may be used for an assignment of only some of the secured party of record's power to affect a financing statement, e.g., the power to affect the financing statement as it relates to particular items of collateral or as it relates to an undivided interest in a security interest in all the collateral. An initial financing statement may not be used to change the secured party of record under these circumstances. However, an amendment adding the assignee as a secured party of record may be used.

4-9-515. Duration and effectiveness of financing statement - effect of lapsed financing statement. (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (b), (e), (f), and (g) of this section and section 4-9-528, a filed financing statement is effective for a period of five years after the date of filing.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (e), (f), and (g) of this section, an initial financing statement filed in connection with a manufactured-home transaction is effective for a period of thirty years after the date of filing if it indicates that it is filed in connection with a manufactured-home transaction.

(c) The effectiveness of a filed financing statement lapses on the expiration of the period of its effectiveness unless before the lapse a continuation statement is filed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section. Upon lapse, a financing statement ceases to be effective and any security interest or agricultural lien that was perfected by the financing statement becomes unperfected, unless the security interest is perfected otherwise. If the security interest or agricultural lien becomes unperfected upon lapse, it is deemed never to have been perfected as against a purchaser of the collateral for value.

(d) A continuation statement may be filed only within six months before the expiration of the five-year period specified in subsection (a) of this section, the thirty-year period specified in subsection (b) of this section, or the five-year period specified in section 4-9-528 (a) (1), whichever is applicable.

(e) Except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-510, upon timely filing of a continuation statement, the effectiveness of the initial financing statement continues for a period of five years commencing on the day on which the financing statement would have become ineffective in the absence of the filing. Upon the expiration of the five-year period, the financing statement lapses in the same manner as provided in subsection (c) of this section, unless, before the lapse, another continuation statement is filed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section. Succeeding continuation statements may be filed in the same manner to continue the effectiveness of the initial financing statement.

(f) If a debtor is a transmitting utility and a filed financing statement so indicates, the financing statement is effective until a termination statement is filed.

Editor's note: This version of subsection (f) is effective until July 1, 2013.

(f) If a debtor is a transmitting utility and a filed initial financing statement so indicates, the financing statement is effective until a termination statement is filed.

Editor's note: This version of subsection (f) is effective July 1, 2013.

(g) A record of a mortgage that is effective as a financing statement filed as a fixture filing under section 4-9-502 (c) remains effective as a financing statement filed as a fixture filing until the mortgage is released or satisfied of record or its effectiveness otherwise terminates as to the real property.

Source: L. 2001: Entire article R&RE, p. 1386, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2012: (f) amended, (HB 12-1262), ch. 170, p. 602, § 12, effective July 1, 2013.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 4-9-403 as it existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado added the reference to section 4-9-528 in subsection (a) and the phrase "or the five-year period specified in section 4-9-528 (a)(1)" in subsection (d).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-403(2), (3), (6).

2. Period of Financing Statement's Effectiveness. Subsection (a) states the general rule: a financing statement is effective for a five-year period unless its effectiveness is continued under this section or terminated under Section 9-513. Subsection (b) provides that if the financing statement relates to a public-finance transaction or a manufactured-home transaction and so indicates, the financing statement is effective for 30 years. These financings typically extend well beyond the standard, five-year period. Under subsection (f), a financing statement filed against a transmitting utility remains effective indefinitely, until a termination statement is filed. Likewise, under subsection (g), a mortgage effective as a fixture filing remains effective until its effectiveness terminates under real-property law.

3. Lapse. When the period of effectiveness under subsection (a) or (b) expires, the effectiveness of the financing statement lapses. The last sentence of subsection (c) addresses the effect of lapse. The deemed retroactive unperfection applies only with respect to purchasers for value; unlike former Section 9-403(2), it does not apply with respect to lien creditors.

Example 1: SP-1 and SP-2 both hold security interests in the same collateral. Both security interests are perfected by filing. SP-1 filed first and has priority under Section 9-322(a)(1). The effectiveness of SP-1's filing lapses. As long as SP-2's security interest remains perfected thereafter, SP-2 is entitled to priority over SP-1's security interest, which is deemed never to have been perfected as against a purchaser for value (SP-2). See Section 9-322(a)(2).

Example 2: SP holds a security interest perfected by filing. On July 1, LC acquires a judicial lien on the collateral. Two weeks later, the effectiveness of the financing statement lapses. Although the security interest becomes unperfected upon lapse, it was perfected when LC acquired its lien. Accordingly, notwithstanding the lapse, the perfected security interest has priority over the rights of LC, who is not a purchaser. See Section 9-317(a)(2).

4. Effect of Debtor's Bankruptcy. Under former Section 9-403(2), lapse was tolled if the debtor entered bankruptcy or another insolvency proceeding. Nevertheless, being unaware that insolvency proceedings had been commenced, filing offices routinely removed records from the files as if lapse had not been tolled. Subsection (c) deletes the former tolling provision and thereby imposes a new burden on the secured party: to be sure that a financing statement does not lapse during the debtor's bankruptcy. The secured party can prevent lapse by filing a continuation statement, even without first obtaining relief from the automatic stay. See Bankruptcy Code Section 362(b)(3). Of course, if the debtor enters bankruptcy before lapse, the provisions of this Article with respect to lapse would be of no effect to the extent that federal bankruptcy law dictates a contrary result (e.g., to the extent that the Bankruptcy Code determines rights as of the date of the filing of the bankruptcy petition).

5. Continuation Statements. Subsection (d) explains when a continuation statement may be filed. A continuation statement filed at a time other than that prescribed by subsection (d) is ineffective, see Section 9-510(c), and the filing office may not accept it. See Sections 9-520(a), 9-516(b). Subsection (e) specifies the effect of a continuation statement and provides for successive continuation statements.

4-9-516. What constitutes filing - effectiveness of filing. (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this section, communication of a record to a filing office and tender of the filing fee or acceptance of the record by the filing office constitutes filing.

(b) Filing does not occur with respect to a record that a filing office refuses to accept because:

(1) The record is not communicated by a method or medium of communication authorized by the filing office;

(2) An amount equal to or greater than the applicable filing fee is not tendered;

(3) The filing office is unable to index the record because:

(A) In the case of an initial financing statement, the record does not provide a name for the debtor;

(B) In the case of an amendment or correction statement, the record:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to subparagraph (B) is effective until July 1, 2013.

(B) In the case of an amendment or information statement, the record:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to subparagraph (B) is effective July 1, 2013.

(i) Does not identify the initial financing statement as required by section 4-9-512 or 4-9-518, as applicable; or

(ii) Identifies an initial financing statement whose effectiveness has lapsed under section 4-9-515;

(C) In the case of an initial financing statement that provides the name of a debtor identified as an individual or an amendment that provides a name of a debtor identified as an individual which was not previously provided in the financing statement to which the record relates, the record does not identify the debtor's last name; or

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (C) is effective until July 1, 2013.

(C) In the case of an initial financing statement that provides the name of a debtor identified as an individual or an amendment that provides a name of a debtor identified as an individual that was not previously provided in the financing statement to which the record relates, the record does not identify the debtor's surname; or

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (C) is effective July 1, 2013.

(D) In the case of a record filed or recorded in the filing office described in section 4-9-501 (a) (1), the record does not provide a sufficient description of the real property to which it relates;

(4) In the case of an initial financing statement or an amendment that adds a secured party of record, the record does not provide a name and mailing address for the secured party of record;

(5) In the case of an initial financing statement or an amendment that provides a name of a debtor which was not previously provided in the financing statement to which the amendment relates, the record does not:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to paragraph (5) is effective until July 1, 2013.

(5) In the case of an initial financing statement or an amendment that provides a name of a debtor that was not previously provided in the financing statement to which the amendment relates, the record does not:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to paragraph (5) is effective July 1, 2013.

(A) Provide a mailing address for the debtor;

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (A) is effective until July 1, 2013.

(A) Provide a mailing address for the debtor; or

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (A) is effective July 1, 2013.

(B) Indicate whether the debtor is an individual or an organization; or

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (B) is effective until July 1, 2013.

(B) Indicate whether the debtor is an individual or an organization.

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (B) is effective July 1, 2013.

(C) If the financing statement indicates that the debtor is an organization, provide:
(i) A type of organization for the debtor;
(ii) A jurisdiction of organization for the debtor; or
(iii) An organizational identification number for the debtor or indicate that the debtor has none;

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (C) is effective until July 1, 2013.

(C) Repealed.

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (C) is effective July 1, 2013.

(6) In the case of an assignment reflected in an initial financing statement under section 4-9-514 (a) or an amendment filed under section 4-9-514 (b), the record does not provide a name and mailing address for the assignee; or

(7) In the case of a continuation statement, the record is not filed within the six-month period prescribed by section 4-9-515 (d).

(c) For purposes of subsection (b) of this section:

(1) A record does not provide information if the filing office is unable to read or decipher the information; and

(2) A record that does not indicate that it is an amendment or identify an initial financing statement to which it relates, as required by section 4-9-512, 4-9-514, or 4-9-518, is an initial financing statement.

(d) A record that is communicated to the filing office with tender of the filing fee, but which the filing office refuses to accept for a reason other than one set forth in subsection (b) of this section, is effective as a filed record except as against a purchaser of the collateral which gives value in reasonable reliance upon the absence of the record from the files.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Subsection (a): former Section 9-403(1); the remainder is new.

2. What Constitutes Filing. Subsection (a) deals generically with what constitutes filing of a record, including an initial financing statement and amendments of all kinds (e.g., assignments, termination statements, and continuation statements). It follows former Section 9-403(1), under which either acceptance of a record by the filing office or presentation of the record and tender of the filing fee constitutes filing.

3. Effectiveness of Rejected Record. Subsection (b) provides an exclusive list of grounds upon which the filing office may reject a record. See Section 9-520(a). Although some of these grounds would also be grounds for rendering a filed record ineffective (e.g., an initial financing statement does not provide a name for the debtor), many others would not be (e.g., an initial financing statement does not provide a mailing address for the debtor or secured party of record). Neither this section nor Section 9-520 requires or authorizes the filing office to determine, or even consider, the accuracy of information provided in a record. [For example, the State A filing office may not reject under subsection (b)(5)(C) an initial financing statement indicating that the debtor is a State A corporation and providing a three-digit organizational identification number, even if all State A organizational identification numbers contain at least five digits and two letters. Some organizations that are not registered organizations (such as foreign corporations) have a readily determinable jurisdiction of organization. When that is not the case, for purposes of this section, the jurisdiction of organization for a debtor that is an organization but not a registered organization is any jurisdiction that bears a reasonable relation to the debtor. For example, the jurisdiction of organization may be the jurisdiction in which the debtor is located under Section 9-307(b) (i.e., its place of business or chief executive office) or the jurisdiction stated in any organizational document or agreement for the debtor as the jurisdiction under whose law the organization is formed or as the jurisdiction whose law is the governing law. Thus, for purposes of this section, more than one jurisdiction may qualify as the debtor's jurisdiction of organization. See Comment 9.]

Note: The bracketed language is deleted, effective July 1, 2013.

A financing statement or other record that is communicated to the filing office but which the filing office refuses to accept provides no public notice, regardless of the reason for the rejection. However, this section distinguishes between records that the filing office rightfully rejects and those that it wrongfully rejects. A filer is able to prevent a rightful rejection by complying with the requirements of subsection (b). No purpose is served by giving effect to records that justifiably never find their way into the system, and subsection (b) so provides.

Subsection (d) deals with the filing office's unjustified refusal to accept a record. Here, the filer is in no position to prevent the rejection and as a general matter should not be prejudiced by it. Although wrongfully rejected records generally are effective, subsection (d) contains a special rule to protect a third-party purchaser of the collateral (e.g., a buyer or competing secured party) who gives value in reliance upon the apparent absence of the record from the files. As against a person who searches the public record and reasonably relies on what the public record shows, subsection (d) imposes upon the filer the risk that a record failed to make its way into the filing system because of the filing office's wrongful rejection of it. (Compare Section 9-517, under which a mis-indexed financing statement is fully effective.) This risk is likely to be small, particularly when a record is presented electronically, and the filer can guard against this risk by conducting a post-filing search of the records. Moreover, Section 9-520(b) requires the filing office to give prompt notice of its refusal to accept a record for filing.

4. Method or Medium of Communication. Rejection pursuant to subsection (b)(1) for failure to communicate a record properly should be understood to mean noncompliance with procedures relating to security, authentication, or other communication-related requirements that the filing office may impose. Subsection (b)(1) does not authorize a filing office to impose additional substantive requirements. See Section 9-520, Comment 2.

5. Address for Secured Party of Record. Under subsection (b)(4) and Section 9-520(a), the lack of a mailing address for the secured party of record requires the filing office to reject an initial financing statement. The failure to include an address for the secured party of record no longer renders a financing statement ineffective. See Section 9-502(a). The function of the address is not to identify the secured party of record but rather to provide an address to which others can send required notifications, e.g., of a purchase-money security interest in inventory or of the disposition of collateral. Inasmuch as the address shown on a filed financing statement is an "address that is reasonable under the circumstances," a person required to send a notification to the secured party may satisfy the requirement by sending a notification to that address, even if the address is or becomes incorrect. See Section 9-102 (definition of "send"). Similarly, because the address is "held out by [the secured party] as the place for receipt of such communications [i.e., communications relating to security interests]," the secured party is deemed to have received a notification delivered to that address. See Section 1-201(26).

Note: "1-201(26)." will be replaced with "1-202(e)." effective July 1, 2013.

6. Uncertainty Concerning Individual Debtor's Last Name. Subsection (b)(3)(C) requires the filing office to reject an initial financing statement or amendment adding an individual debtor if the office cannot index the record because it does not identify the debtor's last name (e.g., it is unclear whether the debtor's name is Elton John or John Elton).

Note: This version of paragraph 6. is effective until July 1, 2013.

6. Uncertainty Concerning Individual Debtor's Surname. Subsection (b)(3)(C) requires the filing office to reject an initial financing statement or amendment adding an individual debtor if the office cannot index the record because it does not identify the debtor's surname (e.g., it is unclear whether the debtor's surname is Elton or John).

Note: This version of paragraph 6. is effective July 1, 2013.

7. Inability of Filing Office to Read or Decipher Information. Under subsection (c)(1), if the filing office cannot read or decipher information, the information is not provided by a record for purposes of subsection (b).

8. Classification of Records. For purposes of subsection (b), a record that does not indicate it is an amendment or identify an initial financing statement to which it relates is deemed to be an initial financing statement. See subsection (c)(2).

9. Effectiveness of Rejectable But Unrejected Record. Section 9-520(a) requires the filing office to refuse to accept an initial financing statement for a reason set forth in subsection (b). However, if the filing office accepts such a financing statement nevertheless, the financing statement generally is effective if it complies with the requirements of Section 9-502(a) and (b). See Section 9-520(c). Similarly, an otherwise effective financing statement generally remains so even though the information in the financing statement becomes incorrect. See Section 9-507(b). (Note that if the information required by subsection (b)(5) is incorrect when the financing statement is filed, Section 9-338 applies.)

4-9-517. Effect of indexing errors. The failure of the filing office to index a record correctly does not affect the effectiveness of the filed record.

2. Effectiveness of Mis-Indexed Records. This section provides that the filing office's error in mis-indexing a record does not render ineffective an otherwise effective record. As did former Section 9-401, this section imposes the risk of filing-office error on those who search the files rather than on those who file.

4-9-518. Claim concerning inaccurate or wrongfully filed record. (a) (1) Any person named as a debtor may file in the filing office a correction statement with respect to a record indexed there under the debtor's name if the person believes that the record is inaccurate or was wrongfully filed.

(2) Any person named as a secured party may file in the filing office a correction statement with respect to a record filed there in which the person is identified as a secured party, consignor, lessor, or the like if the person believes the record is inaccurate or was wrongfully filed.

(3) Any person who incorrectly files an amendment affecting a record may file a correction statement with respect to the record.

(b) A correction statement must:

(1) Identify the record to which it relates by:

(A) The file number assigned to the initial financing statement to which the record relates; and

(B) If the correction statement relates to a record filed or recorded in a filing office described in section 4-9-501 (a) (1), the date that the initial financing statement was filed or recorded;

(2) Indicate that it is a correction statement; and

(3) Provide the basis for the person's belief that the record is inaccurate and indicate the manner in which the person believes the record should be amended to cure any inaccuracy or provide the basis for the person's belief that the record was wrongfully filed.

(c) The filing of a correction statement does not affect the effectiveness of an initial financing statement or other filed record.

(d) The filing of a correction statement is not effective as an amendment to a filed financing statement and is not sufficient to effect a change in the manner in which the filing office has indexed a financing statement or information contained in a financing statement.

Editor's note: This version of this section is effective until July 1, 2013.

4-9-518. Claim concerning inaccurate or wrongfully filed record. (a) (1) Any person named as a debtor may file in the filing office an information statement with respect to a record indexed there under the debtor's name if the person believes that the record is inaccurate or was wrongfully filed.

(2) Any person named as a secured party may file in the filing office an information statement with respect to a record filed there in which the person is identified as a secured party, consignor, lessor, or the like if the person believes the record is inaccurate or was wrongfully filed.

(3) Any person who incorrectly files an amendment affecting a record may file an information statement with respect to the record.

(b) An information statement under subsection (a) of this section must:

(1) Identify the record to which it relates by:

(A) The file number assigned to the initial financing statement to which the record relates; and

(B) If the information statement relates to a record filed or recorded in a filing office described in section 4-9-501 (a) (1), the date that the initial financing statement was filed or recorded;

(2) Indicate that it is an information statement; and

(3) Provide the basis for the person's belief that the record is inaccurate and indicate the manner in which the person believes the record should be amended to cure any inaccuracy or provide the basis for the person's belief that the record was wrongfully filed.

(c) A person may file in the filing office an information statement with respect to a record filed there if the person is a secured party of record with respect to the financing statement to which the record relates and believes that the person that filed the record was not entitled to do so under section 4-9-509 (d).

(d) An information statement under subsection (c) of this section must:

(1) Identify the record to which it relates by:

(A) The file number assigned to the initial financing statement to which the record relates; and

(B) If the information statement relates to a record filed or recorded in a filing office described in section 4-9-501 (a) (1), the date that the initial financing statement was filed or recorded;

(2) Indicate that it is an information statement; and

(3) Provide the basis for the person's belief that the person that filed the record was not entitled to do so under section 4-9-509 (d).

(e) The filing of an information statement does not affect the effectiveness of an initial financing statement or other filed record.

(f) The filing of an information statement is not effective as an amendment to a filed financing statement and is not sufficient to effect a change in the manner in which the filing office has indexed a financing statement or information contained in a financing statement.

2. Correction Statements. Former Article 9 did not afford a nonjudicial means for a debtor to correct a financing statement or other record that was inaccurate or wrongfully filed. Subsection (a) affords the debtor the right to file a correction statement. Among other requirements, the correction statement must provide the basis for the debtor's belief that the public record should be corrected. See subsection (b). These provisions, which resemble the analogous remedy in the Fair Credit Reporting Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1681i, afford an aggrieved person the opportunity to state its position on the public record. They do not permit an aggrieved person to change the legal effect of the public record. Thus, although a filed correction statement becomes part of the "financing statement," as defined in Section 9-102, the filing does not affect the effectiveness of the initial financing statement or any other filed record. See subsection (c).

This section does not displace other provisions of this Article that impose liability for making unauthorized filings or failing to file or send a termination statement (see Section 9-625(e)), nor does it displace any available judicial remedies.

Note: This version of this paragraph 2. is effective until July 1, 2013.

2. Information Statements. Former Article 9 did not afford a nonjudicial means for a debtor to indicate that a financing statement or other record was inaccurate or wrongfully filed. Subsection (a) affords the debtor the right to file information statement. Among other requirements, the information statement must provide the basis for the debtor's belief that the public record should be corrected. See subsection (b). These provisions, which resemble the analogous remedy in the Fair Credit Reporting Act, 15 U.S.C. 1681i, afford an aggrieved person the opportunity to state its position on the public record. They do not permit an aggrieved person to change the legal effect of the public record. Thus, although a filed information statement becomes part of the "financing statement," as defined in Section 9-102, the filing does not affect the effectiveness of the initial financing statement or any other filed record. See subsection (e).

Note: This version of this paragraph 2. takes effect July 1, 2013.

[Sometimes a person files a termination statement or other record relating to a filed financing statement without being entitled to do so. A secured party of record with respect to the financing statement who believes that such a record has been filed may, but need not, file an information statement indicating that the person that filed the record was not entitled to do so. See subsection (c). An information statement has no legal effect. Its sole purpose is to provide some limited public notice that the efficacy of a filed record is disputed. If the person that filed the record was not entitled to do so, the filed record is ineffective, regardless of whether the secured party of record files an information statement. Likewise, if the person that filed the record was entitled to do so, the filed record is effective, even if the secured party of record files an information statement. See Section 9-510(a), 9-518(e). Because an information statement filed under subsection (c) has no legal effect, a secured party of record — even one who is aware of the unauthorized filing of a record — has no duty to file one. Just as searchers bear the burden of determining whether the filing of initial financing statement was authorized, searchers bear the burden of determining whether the filing of every subsequent record was authorized.]

[Inasmuch as the filing of an information statement has no legal effect, this section does not provide a mechanism by which a secured party can correct an error that it discovers in its own financing statement.]

This section does not displace other provisions of this Article that impose liability for making unauthorized filings or failing to file or send a termination statement (see Section 9-625(e)), nor does it displace any available judicial remedies.

3. Resort to Other Law. This Article cannot provide a satisfactory or complete solution to problems caused by misuse of the public records. The problem of "bogus" filings is not limited to the UCC filing system but extends to the real-property records, as well. A summary judicial procedure for correcting the public record and criminal penalties for those who misuse the filing and recording systems are likely to be more effective and put less strain on the filing system than provisions authorizing or requiring action by filing and recording offices.

4-9-519. Numbering, maintaining, and indexing records - communicating information provided in records. (a) For each record filed in a filing office, the filing office shall:

(1) Assign a unique number to the filed record;

(2) Create a record that bears the number assigned to the filed record and the date and time of filing;

(3) Maintain the filed record for public inspection; and

(4) Index the filed record in accordance with subsections (c), (d), and (e) of this section.

(b) Repealed.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (d) and (e) of this section, the filing office shall:

(1) Index an initial financing statement according to the name of the debtor and index all filed records relating to the initial financing statement in a manner that associates with one another an initial financing statement and all filed records relating to the initial financing statement; and

(2) Index a record that provides a name of a debtor which was not previously provided in the financing statement to which the record relates also according to the name that was not previously provided.

(d) If a financing statement is filed as a fixture filing or covers as-extracted collateral or timber to be cut, it must be filed for record and the filing office shall index it:

(1) Under the names of the debtor and of each owner of record shown on the financing statement as if they were the mortgagors under a mortgage of the real property described; and

(2) To the extent that the law of this state provides for indexing of records of mortgages under the name of the mortgagee, under the name of the secured party as if the secured party were the mortgagee thereunder, or, if indexing is by description, as if the financing statement were a record of a mortgage of the real property described.

(e) If a financing statement is filed as a fixture filing or covers as-extracted collateral or timber to be cut, the filing office shall index an assignment filed under section 4-9-514 (a) or an amendment filed under section 4-9-514 (b):

(1) Under the name of the assignor as grantor; and

(2) To the extent that the law of this state provides for indexing a record of the assignment of a mortgage under the name of the assignee, under the name of the assignee.

(f) The filing office shall maintain a capability:

(1) To retrieve a record by the name of the debtor and:

(A) If the filing office is described in section 4-9-501 (a) (1), by the file number assigned to the initial financing statement to which the record relates and the date that the record was filed or recorded; or

(B) If the filing office is described in section 4-9-501 (a) (2), by the file number assigned to the initial financing statement to which the record relates; and

(2) To associate and retrieve with one another an initial financing statement and each filed record relating to the initial financing statement.

(g) The filing office may not remove a debtor's name from the index until one year after the effectiveness of a financing statement naming the debtor lapses under section 4-9-515 with respect to all secured parties of record.

(h) The filing office shall perform the acts required by subsections (a) to (e) of this section at the time and in the manner prescribed by filing-office rule, but not later than five business days after the filing office receives the record in question.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado did not adopt subsection (i).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Sections 9-403(4), (7), 9-405(2).

2. Filing Office's Duties. Subsections (a) through (e) set forth the duties of the filing office with respect to filed records. Subsection (h), which is new, imposes a minimum standard of performance for those duties. Prompt indexing is crucial to the effectiveness of any filing system. An accepted but un-indexed record affords no public notice. Subsection (f) requires the filing office to maintain appropriate storage and retrieval facilities, and subsection (g) contains minimum requirements for the retention of records.

3. File Number. Subsection (a)(1) requires the filing office to assign a unique number to each filed record. That number is the "file number" only if the record is an initial financing statement. See Section 9-102.

4. Time of Filing. Subsection (a)(2) and Section 9-523 refer to the "date and time" of filing. The statutory text does not contain any instructions to a filing office as to how the time of filing is to be determined. The method of determining or assigning a time of filing is an appropriate matter for filing-office rules to address.

5. Related Records. Subsections (c) and (f) are designed to ensure that an initial financing statement and all filed records relating to it are associated with one another, indexed under the name of the debtor, and retrieved together. To comply with subsection (f), a filing office (other than a real-property recording office in a State that enacts subsection (f), Alternative B) must be capable of retrieving records in each of two ways: by the name of the debtor and by the file number of the initial financing statement to which the record relates.

6. Prohibition on Deleting Names from Index. This Article contemplates that the filing office will not delete the name of a debtor from the index until at least one year passes after the effectiveness of the financing statement lapses as to all secured parties of record. See subsection (g). This rule applies even if the filing office accepts an amendment purporting to delete or modify the name of a debtor or terminate the effectiveness of the financing statement. If an amendment provides a modified name for a debtor, the amended name should be added to the index, see subsection (c)(2), but the pre-amendment name should remain in the index.

Compared to former Article 9, the rule in subsection (g) increases the amount of information available to those who search the public records. The rule also contemplates that searchers not the filing office will determine the significance and effectiveness of filed records.

4-9-520. Acceptance and refusal to accept record. (a) A filing office shall refuse to accept a record for filing for a reason set forth in section 4-9-516 (b) and may refuse to accept a record for filing only for a reason set forth in section 4-9-516 (b).

(b) If a filing office refuses to accept a record for filing, it shall communicate to the person that presented the record the fact of and reason for the refusal and the date and time the record would have been filed had the filing office accepted it. The communication must be made at the time and in the manner prescribed by filing-office rule but in no event more than five business days after the filing office receives the record.

(c) A filed financing statement satisfying section 4-9-502 (a) and (b) is effective, even if the filing office is required to refuse to accept it for filing under subsection (a) of this section. However, section 4-9-338 applies to a filed financing statement providing information described in section 4-9-516 (b) (5) which is incorrect at the time the financing statement is filed.

(d) If a record communicated to a filing office provides information that relates to more than one debtor, this part 5 applies as to each debtor separately.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: In subsection (b), Colorado did not adopt the phrase "in the case of a filing office described in section 4-9-501(a)(2)," after the word "but" and changed "two" to "five".

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Refusal to Accept Record for Filing. In some States, filing offices considered themselves obligated by former Article 9 to review the form and content of a financing statement and to refuse to accept those that they determine are legally insufficient. Some filing offices imposed requirements for or conditions to filing that do not appear in the statute. Under this section, the filing office is not expected to make legal judgments and is not permitted to impose additional conditions or requirements.

Subsection (a) both prescribes and limits the bases upon which the filing office must and may reject records by reference to the reasons set forth in Section 9-516(b). For the most part, the bases for rejection are limited to those that prevent the filing office from dealing with a record that it receives because some of the requisite information (e.g., the debtor's name) is missing or cannot be deciphered, because the record is not communicated by a method (e.g., it is MIME- rather than UU-encoded) or medium (e.g., it is written rather than electronic) that the filing office accepts, or because the filer fails to tender an amount equal to or greater than the filing fee.

3. Consequences of Accepting Rejectable Record. Section 9-516(b) includes among the reasons for rejecting an initial financing statement the failure to give certain information that is not required as a condition of effectiveness. In conjunction with Section 9-516(b)(5), this section requires the filing office to refuse to accept a financing statement that is legally sufficient to perfect a security interest under Section 9-502 but does not contain a mailing address for the debtor, does not disclose whether the debtor is an individual or an organization (e.g., a partnership or corporation) or, if the debtor is an organization, does not give certain specified information concerning the organization. The information required by Section 9-516(b)(5) assists searchers in weeding out "false positives," i.e., records that a search reveals but which do not pertain to the debtor in question. It assists filers by helping to ensure that the debtor's name is correct and that the financing statement is filed in the proper jurisdiction.

Note: This version of paragraph 3. is effective until July 1, 2013.

3. Consequences of Accepting Rejectable Record. Section 9-516(b) includes among the reasons for rejecting an initial financing statement the failure to give certain information that is not required as a condition of effectiveness. In conjunction with Section 9-516(b)(5), this section requires the filing office to refuse to accept a financing statement that is legally sufficient to perfect a security interest under Section 9-502 but does not contain a mailing address for the debtor, or disclose whether the debtor is an individual or an organization. The information required by Section 9-516(b)(5) assists searchers in weeding out "false positives," i.e., records that a search reveals but which do not pertain to the debtor in question. It assists filers by helping to ensure that the debtor's name is correct and that the financing statement is filed in the proper jurisdiction.

Note: This version of paragraph 3. is effective July 1, 2013.

If the filing office accepts a financing statement that does not give this information at all, the filing is fully effective. Section 9-520(c). The financing statement also generally is effective if the information is given but is incorrect; however, Section 9-338 affords protection to buyers and holders of perfected security interests who give value in reasonable reliance upon the incorrect information.

4. Filing Office's Duties with Respect to Rejected Record. Subsection (b) requires the filing office to communicate the fact of rejection and the reason therefor within a fixed period of time. Inasmuch as a rightfully rejected record is ineffective and a wrongfully rejected record is not fully effective, prompt communication concerning any rejection is important.

5. Partial Effectiveness of Record. Under subsection (d), the provisions of this Part apply to each debtor separately. Thus, a filing office may reject an initial financing statement or other record as to one named debtor but accept it as to the other.

Example: An initial financing statement is communicated to the filing office. The financing statement names two debtors, John Smith and Jane Smith. It contains all of the information described in Section 9-516(b)(5) with respect to John but lacks some of the information with respect to Jane. The filing office must accept the financing statement with respect to John, reject it with respect to Jane, and notify the filer of the rejection.

4-9-521. Uniform form of written financing statement and amendment. (a) A filing office that accepts written records may not refuse to accept a written initial financing statement in the form and format adopted from time to time by the secretary of state, except for a reason set forth in section 4-9-516 (b).

(b) A filing office that accepts written records may not refuse to accept a written record in the form and format adopted from time to time by the secretary of state, except for a reason set forth in section 4-9-516 (b).

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: Colorado substituted the phrase "form and format adopted from time to time by the secretary of state," for the phrase "following form and format" in subsections (a) and (b).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. "Safe Harbor" Written Forms. Although Section 9-520 limits the bases upon which the filing office can refuse to accept records, this section provides sample written forms that must be accepted in every filing office in the country, as long as the filing office's rules permit it to accept written communications. By completing one of the forms in this section, a secured party can be certain that the filing office is obligated to accept it.

The forms in this section are based upon national financing statement forms that were in use under former Article 9. Those forms were developed over an extended period and reflect the comments and suggestions of filing officers, secured parties and their counsel, and service companies. The formatting of those forms and of the ones in this section has been designed to reduce error by both filers and filing offices.

A filing office that accepts written communications may not reject, on grounds of form or format, a filing using these forms. Although filers are not required to use the forms, they are encouraged and can be expected to do so, inasmuch as the forms are well designed and avoid the risk of rejection on the basis of form or format. As their use expands, the forms will rapidly become familiar to both filers and filing-office personnel. Filing offices may and should encourage the use of these forms by declaring them to be the "standard" (but not exclusive) forms for each jurisdiction, albeit without in any way suggesting that alternative forms are unacceptable.

The multi-purpose form in subsection (b) covers changes with respect to the debtor, the secured party, the collateral, and the status of the financing statement (termination and continuation). A single form may be used for several different types of amendments at once (e.g., both to change a debtor's name and continue the effectiveness of the financing statement).

4-9-522. Maintenance and destruction of records. (a) The filing office shall maintain a record of the information provided in a filed financing statement for at least one year after the effectiveness of the financing statement has lapsed under section 4-9-515 with respect to all secured parties of record. The record must be retrievable by using the name of the debtor and the file number assigned to the initial financing statement to which the record relates and the date that the record was filed or recorded.

(b) Except to the extent that a statute governing disposition of public records provides otherwise, the filing office immediately may destroy any written record evidencing a financing statement. However, if the filing office destroys a written record, it shall maintain another record of the financing statement which complies with subsection (a) of this section.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 4-9-403 (3) as it existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado did not adopt the phrase "by using" after the phrase "debtor and" and added the phrase "and the date that the record was filed or recorded" in subsection (a).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-403(3), revised substantially.

2. Maintenance of Records. Section 9-523 requires the filing office to provide information concerning certain lapsed financing statements. Accordingly, subsection (a) requires the filing office to maintain a record of the information in a financing statement for at least one year after lapse. During that time, the filing office may not delete any information with respect to a filed financing statement; it may only add information. This approach relieves the filing office from any duty to determine whether to substitute or delete information upon receipt of an amendment. It also assures searchers that they will receive all information with respect to financing statements filed against a debtor and thereby be able themselves to determine the state of the public record.

The filing office may maintain this information in any medium. Subsection (b) permits the filing office immediately to destroy written records evidencing a financing statement, provided that the filing office maintains another record of the information contained in the financing statement as required by subsection (a).

4-9-523. Information from filing office - sale or license of records. (a) If a person that files a written record requests an acknowledgment of the filing, the filing office shall send to the person an image of the record showing the number assigned to the record pursuant to section 4-9-519 (a) (1), the name of the debtor and the date and time of the filing of the record. However, if the person furnishes a copy of the record to the filing office, the filing office may instead:

(1) Note upon the copy the number assigned to the record pursuant to section 4-9-519 (a) (1) and the date and time of the filing of the record; and

(2) Send the copy to the person.

(b) If a person files a record other than a written record, the filing office shall communicate to the person an acknowledgment that provides:

(1) The information in the record;

(2) The number assigned to the record pursuant to section 4-9-519 (a) (1); and

(3) The date and time of the filing of the record.

(c) The filing office shall communicate or otherwise make available in a record the following information to any person that requests it:

(1) Whether there is on file on a date and time specified by the filing office, but not a date earlier than three business days before the filing office receives the request, any financing statement that:

(A) Designates a particular debtor;

(B) Has not lapsed under section 4-9-515 with respect to all secured parties of record; and

(C) If the request so states, has lapsed under section 4-9-515 and a record of which is maintained by the filing office under section 4-9-522 (a);

(2) The date and time of filing of each financing statement; and

(3) The information provided in each financing statement.

(d) In complying with its duty under subsection (c) of this section, the filing office may communicate information in any medium. However, if requested, the filing office shall communicate information by issuing a record that can be admitted into evidence in the courts of this state without extrinsic evidence of its authenticity.

(e) The filing office shall perform the acts required by subsections (a) to (d) of this section at the time and in the manner prescribed by filing-office rule, but not later than five business days after the filing office receives the request.

(f) At least weekly, the filing office shall offer to sell or license to the public on a nonexclusive basis, in bulk, copies of all records filed in it under this part 5, in such digital or electronic medium as is from time to time available to the filing office.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 4-9-407 as it existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado added the phrase "the name of the debtor and" in subsection (a), added a reference to "federal tax lien notice" in subsections (c)(1), (c)(2), and (c)(3), changed "two" to "five" in subsection (e), and substituted the phrase "such digital or electronic medium as is" for the phrase "every medium" in subsection (f).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-407; subsections (d) and (e) are new.

2. Filing Office's Duty to Provide Information. Former Section 9-407, dealing with obtaining information from the filing office, was bracketed to suggest to legislatures that its enactment was optional. Experience has shown that the method by which interested persons can obtain information concerning the public records should be uniform. Accordingly, the analogous provisions of this Article are not in brackets.

Most of the other changes from former Section 9-407 are for clarification, to embrace medium-neutral drafting, or to impose standards of performance on the filing office.

3. Acknowledgments of Filing. Subsections (a) and (b) require the filing office to acknowledge the filing of a record. Under subsection (a), the filing office is required to acknowledge the filing of a written record only upon request of the filer. Subsection (b) requires the filing office to acknowledge the filing of a non-written record even in the absence of a request from the filer.

4. Response to Search Request. Subsection (c)(3) requires the filing office to provide "the information contained in each financing statement" to a person who requests it. This requirement can be satisfied by providing copies, images, or reports. The requirement does not in any manner inhibit the filing office from also offering to provide less than all of the information (presumably for a lower fee) to a person who asks for less. Thus, subsection (c) accommodates the practice of providing only the type of record (e.g., initial financing statement, continuation statement), number assigned to the record, date and time of filing, and names and addresses of the debtor and secured party when a requesting person asks for no more (i.e., when the person does not ask for copies of financing statements). In contrast, the filing office's obligation under subsection (b) to provide an acknowledgment containing "the information contained in the record" is not defined by a customer's request. Thus unless the filer stipulates otherwise, to comply with subsection (b) the filing office's acknowledgment must contain all of the information in a record.

Subsection (c) assures that a minimum amount of information about filed records will be available to the public. It does not preclude a filing office from offering additional services.

5. Lapsed and Terminated Financing Statements. This section reflects the policy that terminated financing statements will remain part of the filing office's data base. The filing office may remove from the data base only lapsed financing statements, and then only when at least a year has passed after lapse. See Section 9-519(g). Subsection (c)(1)(C) requires a filing office to conduct a search and report as to lapsed financing statements that have not been removed from the data base, when requested.

6. Search by Debtor's Address. Subsection (c)(1)(A) contemplates that, by making a single request, a searcher will receive the results of a search of the entire public record maintained by any given filing office. Addition of the bracketed language in subsection (c)(1)(A) would permit a search report limited to financing statements showing a particular address for the debtor, but only if the search request is so limited. With or without the bracketed language, this subsection does not permit the filing office to compel a searcher to limit a request by address.

7. Medium of Communication; Certificates. Former Article 9 provided that the filing office respond to a request for information by providing a certificate. The principle of medium-neutrality would suggest that the statute not require a written certificate. Subsection (d) follows this principle by permitting the filing office to respond by communicating "in any medium." By permitting communication "in any medium," subsection (d) is not inconsistent with a system in which persons other than filing office staff conduct searches of the filing office's (computer) records.

Some searchers find it necessary to introduce the results of their search into evidence. Because official written certificates might be introduced into evidence more easily than official communications in another medium, subsection (d) affords States the option of requiring the filing office to issue written certificates upon request. The alternative bracketed language in subsection (d) recognizes that some States may prefer to permit the filing office to respond in another medium, as long as the response can be admitted into evidence in the courts of that State without extrinsic evidence of its authenticity.

8. Performance Standard. The utility of the filing system depends on the ability of searchers to get current information quickly. Accordingly, subsection (e) requires that the filing office respond to a request for information no later than two business days after it receives the request. The information contained in the response must be current as of a date no earlier than three business days before the filing office receives the request. See subsection (c)(1). The failure of the filing office to comply with performance standards, such as subsection (e), has no effect on the private rights of persons affected by the filing of records.

9. Sales of Records in Bulk. Subsection (f), which is new, mandates that the appropriate official or the filing office sell or license the filing records to the public in bulk, on a nonexclusive basis, in every medium available to the filing office. The details of implementation are left to filing-office rules.

4-9-524. Delay by filing office. Delay by the filing office beyond a time limit prescribed by this part 5 is excused if:

(1) The delay is caused by interruption of communication or computer facilities, war, emergency conditions, failure of equipment, or other circumstances beyond control of the filing office; and

(2) The filing office exercises reasonable diligence under the circumstances.

Source. New; derived from Section 4-109.

4-9-525. Fees. (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (f) of this section and subject to section 24-75-402, C.R.S., fees for services rendered by the secretary of state under this part 5 shall be determined and collected pursuant to section 24-21-104, C.R.S.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (f) of this section, the fee for filing and indexing a record under this part 5 in a filing office described in section 4-9-501 (a) (1) shall not exceed:

(1) Ten dollars if the record is communicated in writing and consists of one or two pages;

(2) Fifteen dollars if the record is communicated in writing and consists of more than two pages; and

(3) Five dollars if the record is communicated by another medium authorized by filing-office rule.

(c) The number of names required to be indexed does not affect the amount of the fee in subsections (a) and (b) of this section.

(d) The secretary of state must set the fee for responding to a request for information from the secretary of state, including the fee for issuing a certificate showing whether there is on file any financing statement naming a particular debtor. The secretary of state need not set a fee for remote access to the secretary of state's data base.

(e) The fee for responding to a request for information from a filing office described in section 4-9-501 (a) (1), including for issuing a certificate showing whether there is on file any financing statement naming a particular debtor, shall not exceed:

(1) Five dollars if the request is communicated in writing; and

(2) Three dollars if the request is communicated by another medium authorized by filing-office rule.

(f) This section does not require a fee with respect to a record of a mortgage which is effective as a financing statement filed as a fixture filing or as a financing statement covering as-extracted collateral or timber to be cut under section 4-9-502 (c). However, the recording and satisfaction fees that otherwise would be applicable to the record of the mortgage apply.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: This section contains numerous alterations from the uniform act.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Various sections of former Part 4.

2. Fees. This section contains all fee requirements for filing, indexing, and responding to requests for information. Uniformity in the fee structure (but not necessarily in the amount of fees) makes this Article easier for secured parties to use and reduces the likelihood that a filed record will be rejected for failure to pay at least the correct amount of the fee. See Section 9-516(b)(2).

The costs of processing electronic records are less than those with respect to written records. Accordingly, this section mandates a lower fee as an incentive to file electronically and imposes the additional charge (if any) for multiple debtors only with respect to written records. When written records are used, this Article encourages the use of the uniform forms in Section 9-521. The fee for filing these forms should be no greater than the fee for other written records.

To make the relevant information included in a filed record more accessible once the record is found, this section mandates a higher fee for longer written records than for shorter ones. Finally, recognizing that financing statements naming more than one debtor are most often filed against a husband and wife, any additional charge for multiple debtors applies to records filed with respect to more than two debtors, rather than with respect to more than one.

4-9-526. Filing-office rules. (a) The secretary of state shall adopt and publish rules to implement this article. The filing-office rules must be:

(1) Consistent with this article; and

(2) Adopted and published in accordance with the "State Administrative Procedure Act", article 4 of title 24, C.R.S.

(b) To keep the filing-office rules and practices of the filing office in harmony with the rules and practices of filing offices in other jurisdictions that enact substantially this part 5, and to keep the technology used by the filing office compatible with the technology used by filing offices in other jurisdictions that enact substantially this part 5, the secretary of state, so far as is consistent with the purposes, policies, and provisions of this article, in adopting, amending, and repealing filing-office rules, shall:

(1) Consult with filing offices in other jurisdictions that enact substantially this part 5; and

(2) Consult the most recent version of the model rules promulgated by the international association of commercial administrators or any successor organization; and

(3) Take into consideration the rules and practices of, and the technology used by, filing offices in other jurisdictions that enact substantially this part 5.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New; subsection (b) derives in part from the Uniform Consumer Credit Code (1974).

2. Rules Required. Operating a filing office is a complicated business, requiring many more rules and procedures than this Article can usefully provide. Subsection (a) requires the adoption of rules to carry out the provisions of Article 9. The filing-office rules must be consistent with the provisions of the statute and adopted in accordance with local procedures. The publication requirement informs secured parties about filing-office practices, aids secured parties in evaluating filing-related risks and costs, and promotes regularity of application within the filing office.

3. Importance of Uniformity. In today's national economy, uniformity of the policies and practices of the filing offices will reduce the costs of secured transactions substantially. The International Association of Corporate Administrators (IACA), referred to in subsection (b), is an organization whose membership includes filing officers from every State. These individuals are responsible for the proper functioning of the Article 9 filing system and have worked diligently to develop model filing-office rules, with a view toward efficiency and uniformity.

Although uniformity is an important desideratum, subsection (a) affords considerable flexibility in the adoption of filing-office rules. Each State may adopt a version of subsection (a) that reflects the desired relationship between the statewide filing office described in Section 9-501(a)(2) and the local filing offices described in Section 9-501(a)(1) and that takes into account the practices of its filing offices. Subsection (a) need not designate a single official or agency to adopt rules applicable to all filing offices, and the rules applicable to the statewide filing office need not be identical to those applicable to the local filing office. For example, subsection (a) might provide for the statewide filing office to adopt filing-office rules, and, if not prohibited by other law, the filing office might adopt one set of rules for itself and another for local offices. Or, subsection (a) might designate one official or agency to adopt rules for the statewide filing office and another to adopt rules for local filing offices.

4-9-527. Duty to report. The secretary of state shall report annually on or before June 30 to the governor and legislature on the operation of the filing office. The report must contain a statement of the extent to which:

(1) The filing-office rules are not in harmony with the rules of filing offices in other jurisdictions that enact substantially this part 5 and the reasons for these variations; and

(2) The filing-office rules are not in harmony with the most recent version of the model rules promulgated by the international association of commercial administrators, or any successor organization, and the reasons for these variations.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New; derived in part from the Uniform Consumer Credit Code (1974).

2. Duty to Report. This section is designed to promote compliance with the standards of performance imposed upon the filing office and with the requirement that the filing office's policies, practices, and technology be consistent and compatible with the policies, practices, and technology of other filing offices.

4-9-528. Refiling required. (a) (1) The effectiveness of a financing statement that was filed before July 1, 1996, and that has not otherwise lapsed by December 31, 1997, shall lapse in the manner provided in section 4-9-403 (2) of former article 9 of this title on December 31, 1997, unless a continuation statement was filed on or after July 1, 1996, but on or before December 31, 1997, that identified the original statement by filing office, file number, and date of filing and contains a statement indicating the types or describing the items of collateral indicated in the financing statement. If a continuation statement was filed in accordance with this paragraph (1), the effectiveness of the original financing statement is continued for five years after the last date to which the filing would otherwise have been effective, whereupon it lapses in the manner provided in section 4-9-515 unless another continuation statement is filed pursuant to section 4-9-515 prior to such lapse.

(2) No continuation statement filed pursuant to this subsection (a) on or after July 1, 1996, shall be ineffective solely because it:

(A) Failed to identify the original statement by county, if the filing office was the office of the secretary of state and the statement so stated, or by time of filing;

(B) Indicated the types or described the items of the collateral indicated in the financing statement instead of listing the collateral of the original filing; or

(C) Failed to include a statement that the original financing statement is still effective.

(b) For purposes of the refiling provisions of this section only, a continuation statement does not have to be filed during the period beginning July 1, 1996, to December 31, 1997, when the only collateral on a financing statement is timber to be cut; minerals or other substances of value which may be extracted from the earth; fixtures; a mortgage or deed of trust effective as a fixture filing; collateral, including fixtures, of a transmitting utility; or accounts subject to section 4-9-103 (5) of former article 9 of this title.

(c) References in this section to "former article 9 of this title" are to article 9 of this title as in effect immediately before July 1, 2001.

4-9-529. Electronic and other filings.

(b) The secretary of state shall ensure that presentation for filing may be accomplished electronically, without the necessity for the presentation of a physical original document or the image thereof, if all required information is included and readily retrievable from the data transmitted. All electronic filings shall be retained in a form that facilitates location of the information so filed and production of a true and accurate physical printout or other representation of the information so filed.

(c) The secretary of state is hereby specifically authorized to establish prepaid accounts, an electronic debit system, a system for the acceptance of credit cards or electronic funds transfers, or any combination thereof.

(d) To facilitate the filing of documents in the office of the secretary of state electronically, the secretary of state is hereby specifically authorized to adopt, by rule, technical standards governing such filings and to reject documents that do not comply with such standards. Such standards may include, without limitation, the specification of commercially available software or the dissemination of software compatible with the secretary of state's reception, storage, and retrieval system. Where national standards are available and have been promulgated by a recognized professional organization, the secretary of state shall consider and may use such national standards as the basis for the rules.

(2) Section 9 of chapter 84, Session Laws of Colorado 2008, provides that the act amending subsections (a), (d), and (e) is effective simultaneously with Senate Bill 06-188. The revisor of statutes received notice on February 29, 2012, that the requirements set forth in section 9 of chapter 84, Session Laws of Colorado 2008, have been met.

4-9-531. Removal of social security numbers from financing statements in the custody of the secretary of state. (a) As soon as feasible, but no later than July 1, 2003, the secretary of state shall remove social security numbers from the publicly accessible electronic records of all financing statements in the custody of the secretary that were filed with a filing office on or after April 6, 1989, and before July 1, 2001, pursuant to repealed provisions of this article that required that any such financing statement contain a social security number.

(b) A financing statement from which the secretary of state removes a social security number pursuant to subsection (a) of this section shall not be rendered insufficient or ineffective by such removal.

Editor's note: Section 3 of chapter 336, Session Laws of Colorado 2009, provides that the act repealing subsection (c) applies to any secured transaction record in the possession of the secretary of state before, on, or after June 1, 2009.

PART 6

DEFAULT

4-9-601. Rights after default - judicial enforcement - consignor or buyer of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes. (a) After default, a secured party has the rights provided in this part 6 and, except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-602, those provided by agreement of the parties. A secured party:

(1) May reduce a claim to judgment, foreclose, or otherwise enforce the claim, security interest, or agricultural lien by any available judicial procedure; and

(2) If the collateral is documents, may proceed either as to the documents or as to the goods they cover.

(b) A secured party in possession of collateral or control of collateral under section 4-7-106, 4-9-104, 4-9-105, 4-9-106, or 4-9-107 has the rights and duties provided in section 4-9-207.

(c) The rights under subsections (a) and (b) of this section are cumulative and may be exercised simultaneously.

(d) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (g) of this section and section 4-9-605, after default, a debtor and an obligor have the rights provided in this part 6 and by agreement of the parties.

(e) If a secured party has reduced its claim to judgment, the lien of any levy that may be made upon the collateral by virtue of an execution based upon the judgment relates back to the earliest of:

(1) The date of perfection of the security interest or agricultural lien in the collateral;

(2) The date of filing a financing statement covering the collateral; or

(3) Any date specified in a statute under which the agricultural lien was created.

(f) A sale pursuant to an execution is a foreclosure of the security interest or agricultural lien by judicial procedure within the meaning of this section. A secured party may purchase at the sale and thereafter hold the collateral free of any other requirements of this article.

(g) Except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-607 (c), this part 6 imposes no duties upon a secured party that is a consignor or is a buyer of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes.

(h) For purposes of this part 6, in taking possession of collateral by self-help, "breach of the peace" includes, but is not limited to, engaging in the following actions without the contemporaneous permission of the debtor:

(1) Entering a locked or unlocked residence or residential garage;

(2) Breaking, opening, or moving any lock, gate, or other barrier to enter enclosed real property; or

(3) Using or threatening to use violent means.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-501(1), (2), (5).

2. Enforcement: In General. The rights of a secured party to enforce its security interest in collateral after the debtor's default are an important feature of a secured transaction. (Note that the term "rights," as defined in Section 1-201, includes "remedies.") This Part provides those rights as well as certain limitations on their exercise for the protection of the defaulting debtor, other creditors, and other affected persons. However, subsections (a) and (d) make clear that the rights provided in this Part do not exclude other rights provided by agreement.

3. When Remedies Arise. Under subsection (a) the secured party's rights arise "[a]fter default." As did former Section 9-501, this Article leaves to the agreement of the parties the circumstances giving rise to a default. This Article does not determine whether a secured party's post-default conduct can constitute a waiver of default in the face of an agreement stating that such conduct shall not constitute a waiver. Rather, it continues to leave to the parties' agreement, as supplemented by law other than this Article, the determination whether a default has occurred or has been waived. See Section 1-103.

4. Possession of Collateral; Section 9-207. After a secured party takes possession of collateral following a default, there is no longer any distinction between a security interest that before default was nonpossessory and a security interest that was possessory before default, as under a common-law pledge. This Part generally does not distinguish between the rights of a secured party with a nonpossessory security interest and those of a secured party with a possessory security interest. However, Section 9-207 addresses rights and duties with respect to collateral in a secured party's possession. Under subsection (b) of this section, Section 9-207 applies not only to possession before default but also to possession after default. Subsection (b) also has been conformed to Section 9-207, which, unlike former Section 9-207, applies to secured parties having control of collateral.

5. Cumulative Remedies. Former Section 9-501(1) provided that the secured party's remedies were cumulative, but it did not explicitly provide whether the remedies could be exercised simultaneously. Subsection (c) permits the simultaneous exercise of remedies if the secured party acts in good faith. The liability scheme of Subpart 2 affords redress to an aggrieved debtor or obligor. Moreover, permitting the simultaneous exercise of remedies under subsection (c) does not override any non-UCC law, including the law of tort and statutes regulating collection of debts, under which the simultaneous exercise of remedies in a particular case constitutes abusive behavior or harassment giving rise to liability.

6. Judicial Enforcement. Under subsection (a) a secured party may reduce its claim to judgment or foreclose its interest by any available procedure outside this Article under applicable law. Subsection (e) generally follows former Section 9-501(5). It makes clear that any judicial lien that the secured party may acquire against the collateral effectively is a continuation of the original security interest (if perfected) and not the acquisition of a new interest or a transfer of property on account of a preexisting obligation. Under former Section 9-501(5), the judicial lien was stated to relate back to the date of perfection of the security interest. Subsection (e), however, provides that the lien relates back to the earlier of the date of filing or the date of perfection. This provides a secured party who enforces a security interest by judicial process with the benefit of the "first-to-file-or-perfect" priority rule of Section 9-322(a)(1).

7. Agricultural Liens. Part 6 provides parallel treatment for the enforcement of agricultural liens and security interests. Because agricultural liens are statutory rather than consensual, this Article does draw a few distinctions between these liens and security interests. Under subsection (e), the statute creating an agricultural lien would govern whether and the date to which an execution lien relates back. Section 9-606 explains when a "default" occurs in the agricultural lien context.

8. Execution Sales. Subsection (f) also follows former Section 9-501(5). It makes clear that an execution sale is an appropriate method of foreclosure contemplated by this Part. However, the sale is governed by other law and not by this Article, and the limitations under Section 9-610 on the right of a secured party to purchase collateral do not apply.

9. Sales of Receivables; Consignments. Subsection (g) provides that, except as provided in Section 9-607(c), the duties imposed on secured parties do not apply to buyers of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes. Although denominated "secured parties," these buyers own the entire interest in the property sold and so may enforce their rights without regard to the seller ("debtor") or the seller's creditors. Likewise, a true consignor may enforce its ownership interest under other law without regard to the duties that this Part imposes on secured parties. Note, however, that Section 9-615 governs cases in which a consignee's secured party (other than a consignor) is enforcing a security interest that is senior to the security interest (i.e., ownership interest) of a true consignor.

Annotator's note. Since § 4-9-601 is similar to § 4-9-501 as it existed prior to the 2001 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

In an action to recover a deficiency judgment, the burden is upon the secured party to prove the amount of the deficiency. Cmty. Mgt. Ass'n of Colo. Springs, Inc. v. Tousley, 32 Colo. App. 33, 505 P.2d 1314 (1973).

A secured creditor need not "elect" his choice of remedies. He may pursue those methods of collection afforded under the code or through judicial processes otherwise available. Nor by effectuating the latter course of action does the creditor relinquish any rights obtained by virtue of his security interest. Bilar, Inc. v. Sherman, 40 Colo. App. 38, 572 P.2d 489 (1977).

Creditor is not required to make election of remedies, as rights and remedies of subsection (1) are cumulative. Wiley v. Bank of Fountain Valley, 632 P.2d 282 (Colo. App. 1981); Flexisystems, Inc. v. Am. Standards Testing Bureau, Inc., 847 P.2d 207 (Colo. App. 1992).

Creditor may proceed against real and personal property separately. Subsection (4) does not prohibit a creditor from proceeding against both real and personal property collateral simultaneously in separate proceedings. Wiley v. Bank of Fountain Valley, 632 P.2d 282 (Colo. App. 1981).

"Debtor" includes a guarantor and, as a debtor, the guarantor may not waive debtor's right to insist on a commercially reasonable disposition of collateral. May v. Women's Bank, N.A., 807 P.2d 1145 (Colo. 1991).

Section 4-9-504 is made inoperative by this section with respect to water stock foreclosed as a part of real estate security. Kinoshita v. North Denver Bank, 181 Colo. 183, 508 P.2d 1264 (1973).

Possession of chattels subject to security agreement. Secured party should have been granted immediate possession of chattels which were subject to the security agreement where the memorandum of agreement between the parties provided for foreclosure under the uniform commercial code. Alexander Dawson, Inc. v. Sage Creek Canyon Co., 37 Colo. App. 339, 546 P.2d 969 (1976).

A secured creditor who does not have possession of his security need not be granted a hearing before seizure of his security under a prior tax lien. Antonoff v. City & County of Denver, 195 Colo. 227, 577 P.2d 281 (1978).

Notice required under § 4-9-504 (3) may not be waived. United Bank v. Reed, 635 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1981).

Presumption that proceeds from sale without notice equal balance owing. Where there is no notice prior to sale of collateral, it is rebuttably presumed that the value of the collateral sold is equal to the balance owing on any notes. To rebut the presumption, the secured party has the burden of proving, by other evidence, the market value of the collateral and that, after application of that amount, there was a balance still owing on the notes. United Bank v. Reed, 635 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1981).

Applied in First Nat'l Bank v. Cillessen, 622 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1980); Hollemon v. Murray, 666 P.2d 1107 (Colo. App. 1982).

4-9-602. Waiver and variance of rights and duties. Except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-624, to the extent that they give rights to a debtor or obligor and impose duties on a secured party, the debtor or obligor may not waive or vary the rules stated in the following listed sections:

(1) Section 4-9-207 (b) (4) (C), which deals with use and operation of the collateral by the secured party;

(2) Section 4-9-210, which deals with requests for an accounting and requests concerning a list of collateral and statement of account;

(3) Section 4-9-607 (c), which deals with collection and enforcement of collateral;

(4) Sections 4-9-608 (a) and 4-9-615 (c) to the extent that they deal with application or payment of noncash proceeds of collection, enforcement, or disposition;

(5) Sections 4-9-608 (a) and 4-9-615 (d) to the extent that they require accounting for or payment of surplus proceeds of collateral;

(6) Section 4-9-609 to the extent that it imposes upon a secured party that takes possession of collateral without judicial process the duty to do so without breach of the peace;

(7) Sections 4-9-610 (b), 4-9-611, 4-9-613, and 4-9-614, which deal with disposition of collateral;

(8) Section 4-9-615 (f), which deals with calculation of a deficiency or surplus when a disposition is made to the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor;

(9) Section 4-9-616, which deals with explanation of the calculation of a surplus or deficiency;

(10) Section 4-9-620, 4-9-621, and 4-9-622, which deal with acceptance of collateral in satisfaction of obligation;

(11) Section 4-9-623, which deals with redemption of collateral;

(12) Section 4-9-624, which deals with permissible waivers; and

(13) Sections 4-9-625 and 4-9-626, which deal with the secured party's liability for failure to comply with this article.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-501(3).

2. Waiver: In General. Section 1-102(3) addresses which provisions of the UCC are mandatory and which may be varied by agreement. With exceptions relating to good faith, diligence, reasonableness, and care, immediate parties, as between themselves, may vary its provisions by agreement. However, in the context of rights and duties after default, our legal system traditionally has looked with suspicion on agreements that limit the debtor's rights and free the secured party of its duties. As stated in former Section 9-501, Comment 4, "no mortgage clause has ever been allowed to clog the equity of redemption." The context of default offers great opportunity for overreaching. The suspicious attitudes of the courts have been grounded in common sense. This section, like former Section 9-501(3), codifies this long-standing and deeply rooted attitude. The specified rights of the debtor and duties of the secured party may not be waived or varied except as stated. Provisions that are not specified in this section are subject to the general rules in Section 1-102(3).

3. Nonwaivable Rights and Duties. This section revises former Section 9-501(3) by restricting the ability to waive or modify additional specified rights and duties: (i) duties under Section 9-207(b)(4)(C), which deals with the use and operation of consumer goods, (ii) the right to a response to a request for an accounting, concerning a list of collateral, or concerning a statement of account (Section 9-210), (iii) the duty to collect collateral in a commercially reasonable manner (Section 9-607), (iv) the implicit duty to refrain from a breach of the peace in taking possession of collateral under Section 9-609, (v) the duty to apply noncash proceeds of collection or disposition in a commercially reasonable manner (Sections 9-608 and 9-615), (vi) the right to a special method of calculating a surplus or deficiency in certain dispositions to a secured party, a person related to secured party, or a secondary obligor (Section 9-615), (vii) the duty to give an explanation of the calculation of a surplus or deficiency (Section 9-616), (viii) the right to limitations on the effectiveness of certain waivers (Section 9-624), and (ix) the right to hold a secured party liable for failure to comply with this Article (Sections 9-625 and 9-626). For clarity and consistency, this Article uses the term "waive or vary" instead of "renounc[e] or modify[]," which appeared in former Section 9-504(3).

This section provides generally that the specified rights and duties "may not be waived or varied." However, it does not restrict the ability of parties to agree to settle, compromise, or renounce claims for past conduct that may have constituted a violation or breach of those rights and duties, even if the settlement involves an express "waiver."

[Section 9-610(c) limits the circumstances under which a secured party may purchase at its own private disposition. Transactions of this kind are equivalent to "strict foreclosures" and are governed by Sections 9-620, 9-621, and 9-622. The provisions of these sections can be waived only to the extent provided in Section 9-624(b). See Section 9-602.]

Note: The bracketed language takes effect July 1, 2013.

4. Waiver by Debtors and Obligors. The restrictions on waiver contained in this section apply to obligors as well as debtors. This resolves a question under former Article 9 as to whether secondary obligors, assuming that they were "debtors" for purposes of former Part 5, were permitted to waive, under the law of suretyship, rights and duties under that Part.

5. Certain Post-Default Waivers. Section 9-624 permits post-default waivers in limited circumstances. These waivers must be made in agreements that are authenticated. Under Section 1-201, an "'agreement' means the bargain of the parties in fact." In considering waivers under Section 9-624 and analogous agreements in other contexts, courts should carefully scrutinize putative agreements that appear in records that also address many additional or unrelated matters.

4-9-603. Agreement on standards concerning rights and duties. (a) The parties may determine by agreement the standards measuring the fulfillment of the rights of a debtor or obligor and the duties of a secured party under a rule stated in section 4-9-602 if the standards are not unreasonable.

(b) Subsection (a) of this section does not empower the parties to set standards affecting the duty under section 4-9-609 to refrain from breaching the peace.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 4-9-501 (3) as it existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado did not adopt the word "manifestly" before the word "unreasonable" in subsection (a) and substituted the phrase "empower the parties to set standards affecting" for the phrase "apply to" in subsection (b).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-501(3).

2. Limitation on Ability to Set Standards. Subsection (a), like former Section 9-501(3), permits the parties to set standards for compliance with the rights and duties under this Part if the standards are not "manifestly unreasonable." Under subsection (b), the parties are not permitted to set standards measuring fulfillment of the secured party's duty to take collateral without breaching the peace.

4-9-604. Procedure if security agreement covers real property or fixtures. (a) If a security agreement covers both personal and real property, a secured party may proceed:

(1) Under this part 6 as to the personal property without prejudicing any rights with respect to the real property; or

(2) As to both the personal property and the real property in accordance with the rights with respect to the real property, in which case the other provisions of this part 6 do not apply.

(b) Subject to subsection (c) of this section, if a security agreement covers goods that are or become fixtures, a secured party may proceed:

(1) Under this part 6; or

(2) In accordance with the rights with respect to real property, in which case the other provisions of this part 6 do not apply.

(c) Subject to the other provisions of this part 6, if a secured party holding a security interest in fixtures has priority over all owners and encumbrancers of the real property, the secured party, after default, may remove the collateral from the real property.

(d) A secured party that removes collateral shall promptly reimburse any encumbrancer or owner of the real property for the cost of repair of any physical injury caused by the removal. The secured party need not reimburse the encumbrancer or owner for any diminution in value of the real property caused by the absence of the goods removed or by any necessity of replacing them. A person entitled to reimbursement may refuse permission to remove until the secured party gives adequate assurance for the performance of the obligation to reimburse.

Editor's note: (1) The provisions of this section are similar to former §§ 4-9-313 (8) and 4-9-501 (4) as they existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado did not adopt the phrase "other than the debtor" after the word "property" in the first sentence in subsection (d).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Sections 9-501(4), 9-313(8).

2. Real-Property-Related Collateral. The collateral in many transactions consists of both real and personal property. In the interest of simplicity, speed, and economy, subsection (a), like former Section 9-501(4), permits (but does not require) the secured party to proceed as to both real and personal property in accordance with its rights and remedies with respect to the real property. Subsection (a) also makes clear that a secured party who exercises rights under Part 6 with respect to personal property does not prejudice any rights under real-property law.

This Article does not address certain other real-property-related problems. In a number of States, the exercise of remedies by a creditor who is secured by both real property and non-real property collateral is governed by special legal rules. For example, under some anti-deficiency laws, creditors risk loss of rights against personal property collateral if they err in enforcing their rights against the real property. Under a "one-form-of-action" rule (or rule against splitting a cause of action), a creditor who judicially enforces a real property mortgage and does not proceed in the same action to enforce a security interest in personalty may (among other consequences) lose the right to proceed against the personalty. Although statutes of this kind create impediments to enforcement of security interests, this Article does not override these limitations under other law.

3. Fixtures. Subsection (b) is new. It makes clear that a security interest in fixtures may be enforced either under real-property law or under any of the applicable provisions of Part 6, including sale or other disposition either before or after removal of the fixtures (see subsection (c)). Subsection (b) also serves to overrule cases holding that a secured party's only remedy after default is the removal of the fixtures from the real property. See, e.g., Maplewood Bank & Trust v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 625 A.2d 537 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1993).

Subsection (c) generally follows former Section 9-313(8). It gives the secured party the right to remove fixtures under certain circumstances. A secured party whose security interest in fixtures has priority over owners and encumbrancers of the real property may remove the collateral from the real property. However, subsection (d) requires the secured party to reimburse any owner (other than the debtor) or encumbrancer for the cost of repairing any physical injury caused by the removal. This right to reimbursement is implemented by the last sentence of subsection (d), which gives the owner or encumbrancer a right to security or indemnity as a condition for giving permission to remove.

4-9-605. Unknown debtor or secondary obligor. A secured party does not owe a duty based on its status as secured party:

(1) To a person that is a debtor or obligor, unless the secured party knows:

(A) That the person is a debtor or obligor;

(B) The identity of the person; and

(C) How to communicate with the person; or

(2) To a secured party or lienholder that has filed a financing statement against a person, unless the secured party knows:

(A) That the person is a debtor; and

(B) The identity of the person.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Duties to Unknown Persons. This section relieves a secured party from duties owed to a debtor or obligor, if the secured party does not know about the debtor or obligor. Similarly, it relieves a secured party from duties owed to a secured party or lienholder who has filed a financing statement against the debtor, if the secured party does not know about the debtor. For example, a secured party may be unaware that the original debtor has sold the collateral subject to the security interest and that the new owner has become the debtor. If so, the secured party owes no duty to the new owner (debtor) or to a secured party who has filed a financing statement against the new owner. This section should be read in conjunction with the exculpatory provisions in Section 9-628. Note that it relieves a secured party not only from duties arising under this Article but also from duties arising under other law by virtue of the secured party's status as such under this Article, unless the other law otherwise provides.

4-9-606. Time of default for agricultural lien. For purposes of this part 6, a default occurs in connection with an agricultural lien at the time the secured party becomes entitled to enforce the lien in accordance with the statute under which it was created.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Time of Default. Remedies under this Part become available upon the debtor's "default." See Section 9-601. This section explains when "default" occurs in the agricultural-lien context. It requires one to consult the enabling statute to determine when the lienholder is entitled to enforce the lien.

4-9-607. Collection and enforcement by secured party. (a) If so agreed, and in any event after default, a secured party:

(1) May notify an account debtor or other person obligated on collateral to make payment or otherwise render performance to or for the benefit of the secured party;

(2) May take any proceeds to which the secured party is entitled under section 4-9-315;

(3) May enforce the obligations of an account debtor or other person obligated on collateral and exercise the rights of the debtor with respect to the obligation of the account debtor or other person obligated on collateral to make payment or otherwise render performance to the debtor, and with respect to any property that secures the obligations of the account debtor or other person obligated on the collateral;

(4) If it holds a security interest in a deposit account perfected by control under section

4-9-104 (a) (1), may apply the balance of the deposit account to the obligation secured by the deposit account; and

(5) If it holds a security interest in a deposit account perfected by control under section 4-9-104 (a) (2) or (3), may instruct the bank to pay the balance of the deposit account to or for the benefit of the secured party.

(b) If necessary to enable a secured party to exercise under paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this section the right of a debtor to enforce a mortgage nonjudicially, the secured party may record in the office in which a record of the mortgage is recorded:

(1) A copy of the security agreement that creates or provides for a security interest in the obligation secured by the mortgage; and

(2) The secured party's sworn affidavit in recordable form stating that:

(A) A default has occurred; and

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (A) is effective until July 1, 2013.

(A) A default has occurred with respect to the obligation secured by the mortgage; and

Editor's note: This version of subparagraph (A) is effective July 1, 2013.

(B) The secured party is entitled to enforce the mortgage nonjudicially.

(c) A secured party shall proceed in a commercially reasonable manner if the secured party:

(1) Undertakes to collect from or enforce an obligation of an account debtor or other person obligated on collateral; and

(2) Is entitled to charge back uncollected collateral or otherwise to full or limited recourse against the debtor or a secondary obligor.

(d) A secured party may deduct from the collections made pursuant to subsection (c) of this section reasonable expenses of collection and enforcement, including reasonable attorney's fees and reasonable legal expenses incurred by the secured party.

(e) This section does not determine whether an account debtor, bank, or other person obligated on collateral owes a duty to a secured party.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-502; subsections (b), (d), and (e) are new.

2. Collections: In General. Collateral consisting of rights to payment is not only the most liquid asset of a typical debtor's business but also is property that may be collected without any interruption of the debtor's business This situation is far different from that in which collateral is inventory or equipment, whose removal may bring the business to a halt. Furthermore, problems of valuation and identification, present with collateral that is tangible personal property, frequently are not as serious in the case of rights to payment and other intangible collateral. Consequently, this section, like former Section 9-502, recognizes that financing through assignments of intangibles lacks many of the complexities that arise after default in other types of financing. This section allows the assignee to liquidate collateral by collecting whatever may become due on the collateral, whether or not the method of collection contemplated by the security arrangement before default was direct (i.e., payment by the account debtor to the assignee, "notification" financing) or indirect (i.e., payment by the account debtor to the assignor, "nonnotification" financing).

3. Scope. The scope of this section is broader than that of former Section 9-502. It applies not only to collections from account debtors and obligors on instruments but also to enforcement more generally against all persons obligated on collateral. It explicitly provides for the secured party's enforcement of the debtor's rights in respect of the account debtor's (and other third parties') obligations and for the secured party's enforcement of supporting obligations with respect to those obligations. (Supporting obligations are components of the collateral under Section 9-203(f).) The rights of a secured party under subsection (a) include the right to enforce claims that the debtor may enjoy against others.

For example, the claims might include a breach-of-warranty claim arising out of a defect in equipment that is collateral or a secured party's action for an injunction against infringement of a patent that is collateral. Those claims typically would be proceeds of original collateral under Section 9-315.

4. Collection and Enforcement Before Default. Like Part 6 generally, this section deals with the rights and duties of secured parties following default. However, as did former Section 9-502 with respect to collection rights, this section also applies to the collection and enforcement rights of secured parties even if a default has not occurred, as long as the debtor has so agreed. It is not unusual for debtors to agree that secured parties are entitled to collect and enforce rights against account debtors prior to default.

5. Collections by Junior Secured Party. A secured party who holds a security interest in a right to payment may exercise the right to collect and enforce under this section, even if the security interest is subordinate to a conflicting security interest in the same right to payment. Whether the junior secured party has priority in the collected proceeds depends on whether the junior secured party qualifies for priority as a purchaser of an instrument (e.g., the account debtor's check) under Section 9-330(d), as a holder in due course of an instrument under Sections 3-305 and 9-331(a), or as a transferee of money under Section 9-332(a). See Sections 9-330, Comment 7; 9-331, Comment 5; and 9-332.

6. Relationship to Rights and Duties of Persons Obligated on Collateral. This section permits a secured party to collect and enforce obligations included in collateral in its capacity as a secured party. It is not necessary for a secured party first to become the owner of the collateral pursuant to a disposition or acceptance. However, the secured party's rights, as between it and the debtor, to collect from and enforce collateral against account debtors and others obligated on collateral under subsection (a) are subject to Section 9-341, Part 4, and other applicable law. Neither this section nor former Section 9-502 should be understood to regulate the duties of an account debtor or other person obligated on collateral. Subsection (e) makes this explicit. For example, the secured party may be unable to exercise the debtor's rights under an instrument if the debtor is in possession of the instrument, or under a non-transferable letter of credit if the debtor is the beneficiary. Unless a secured party has control over a letter-of-credit right and is entitled to receive payment or performance from the issuer or a nominated person under Article 5, its remedies with respect to the letter-of-credit right may be limited to the recovery of any identifiable proceeds from the debtor. This section establishes only the baseline rights of the secured party vis-a-vis the debtor the secured party is entitled to enforce and collect after default or earlier if so agreed.

7. Deposit Account Collateral. Subsections (a)(4) and (5) set forth the self-help remedy for a secured party whose collateral is a deposit account. Subsection (a)(4) addresses the rights of a secured party that is the bank with which the deposit account is maintained. That secured party automatically has control of the deposit account under Section 9-104(a)(1). After default, and otherwise if so agreed, the bank/secured party may apply the funds on deposit to the secured obligation.

If a security interest of a third party is perfected by control (Section 9-104(a)(2) or (a)(3)), then after default, and otherwise if so agreed, the secured party may instruct the bank to pay out the funds in the account. If the third party has control under Section 9-104(a)(3), the depositary institution is obliged to obey the instruction because the secured party is its customer. See Section 4-401. If the third party has control under Section 9-104(a)(2), the control agreement determines the depositary institution's obligation to obey.

If a security interest in a deposit account is unperfected, or is perfected by filing by virtue of the proceeds rules of Section 9-315, the depositary institution ordinarily owes no obligation to obey the secured party's instructions. See Section 9-341. To reach the funds without the debtor's cooperation, the secured party must use an available judicial procedure.

8. Rights Against Mortgagor of Real Property. Subsection (b) addresses the situation in which the collateral consists of a mortgage note (or other obligation secured by a mortgage on real property). After the debtor's (mortgagee's) default, the secured party (assignee) may wish to proceed with a nonjudicial foreclosure of the mortgage securing the note but may be unable to do so because it has not become the assignee of record. The assignee/secured party may not have taken a recordable assignment at the commencement of the transaction (perhaps the mortgage note in question was one of hundreds assigned to the secured party as collateral). Having defaulted, the mortgagee may be unwilling to sign a recordable assignment. This section enables the secured party (assignee) to become the assignee of record by recording in the applicable real-property records the security agreement and an affidavit certifying default. Of course, the secured party's rights derive from those of its debtor. Subsection (b) would not entitle the secured party to proceed with a foreclosure unless the mortgagor also were in default or the debtor (mortgagee) otherwise enjoyed the right to foreclose.

9. Commercial Reasonableness. Subsection (c) provides that the secured party's collection and enforcement rights under subsection (a) must be exercised in a commercially reasonable manner. These rights include the right to settle and compromise claims against the account debtor. The secured party's failure to observe the standard of commercial reasonableness could render it liable to an aggrieved person under Section 9-625, and the secured party's recovery of a deficiency would be subject to Section 9-626. Subsection (c) does not apply if, as is characteristic of most sales of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, and promissory notes, the secured party (buyer) has no right of recourse against the debtor (seller) or a secondary obligor. However, if the secured party does have a right of recourse, the commercial-reasonableness standard applies to collection and enforcement even though the assignment to the secured party was a "true" sale. The obligation to proceed in a commercially reasonable manner arises because the collection process affects the extent of the seller's recourse liability, not because the seller retains an interest in the sold collateral (the seller does not). Concerning classification of a transaction, see Section 9-109, Comment 4.

10. Attorney's Fees and Legal Expenses. The phrase "reasonable attorney's fees and legal expenses," which appears in subsection (d), includes only those fees and expenses incurred in proceeding against account debtors or other third parties. The secured party's right to recover these expenses from the collections arises automatically under this section. The secured party also may incur other attorney's fees and legal expenses in proceeding against the debtor or obligor. Whether the secured party has a right to recover those fees and expenses depends on whether the debtor or obligor has agreed to pay them, as is the case with respect to attorney's fees and legal expenses under Sections 9-608(a)(1)(A) and 9-615(a)(1). The parties also may agree to allocate a portion of the secured party's overhead to collection and enforcement under subsection (d) or Section 9-608(a).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Secured Transactions — Part I: Attachment, Perfection and Priorities", see 11 Colo. Law. 2939 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 4-9-607 is similar to § 4-9-502 as it existed prior to the 2001 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Bank's security interest in taxpayer's accounts payable and contract rights was not choate under Colorado law so as to have priority over federal tax lien because bank failed to take action required under this section before the notice and filing of the federal tax lien. U.S. v. Central Bank of Denver, 843 F.2d 1300 (10th Cir. 1988).

Applied in First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 653 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982).

4-9-608. Application of proceeds of collection or enforcement - liability for deficiency and right to surplus. (a) If a security interest or agricultural lien secures payment or performance of an obligation, the following rules apply:

(1) A secured party shall apply or pay over for application the cash proceeds of collection or enforcement under section 4-9-607 in the following order to:

(A) The reasonable expenses of collection and enforcement and, to the extent provided for by agreement and not prohibited by law, reasonable attorney's fees and reasonable legal expenses incurred by the secured party;

(B) The satisfaction of obligations secured by the security interest or agricultural lien under which the collection or enforcement is made; and

(C) The satisfaction of obligations secured by any subordinate security interest in or other lien on the collateral subject to the security interest or agricultural lien under which the collection or enforcement is made if the secured party receives an authenticated demand for proceeds before distribution of the proceeds is completed.

(2) If requested by a secured party, a holder of a subordinate security interest or other lien shall furnish reasonable proof of the interest or lien within a reasonable time. Unless the holder complies, the secured party need not comply with the holder's demand under subparagraph (C) of paragraph (1) of this subsection (a).

(3) A secured party need not apply or pay over for application noncash proceeds of collection and enforcement under section 4-9-607 unless the failure to do so would be commercially unreasonable. A secured party that applies or pays over for application noncash proceeds shall do so in a commercially reasonable manner.

(4) A secured party shall account to and pay a debtor for any surplus, and the obligor is liable for any deficiency.

(b) If the underlying transaction is a sale of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes, the debtor is not entitled to any surplus, and the obligor is not liable for any deficiency.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: Colorado substituted the phrase "section 4-9-607" for the phrase "this section" in subsections (a)(1) and (a)(3) and added the word "reasonable" in subsection (a)(1)(A).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Subsection (a) is new; subsection (b) derives from former Section 9-502(2).

2. Modifications of Prior Law. Subsections (a) and (b) modify former Section 9-502(2) by explicitly providing for the application of proceeds recovered by the secured party in substantially the same manner as provided in Section 9-615(a) and (e) for dispositions of collateral.

3. Surplus and Deficiency. Subsections (a)(4) and (b) omit, as unnecessary, the references contained in former Section 9-502(2) to agreements varying the baseline rules on surplus and deficiency. The parties are always free to agree that an obligor will not be liable for a deficiency, even if the collateral secures an obligation, and that an obligor is liable for a deficiency, even if the transaction is a sale of receivables. For parallel provisions, see Section 9-615(d) and (e).

4. Noncash Proceeds. Subsection (a)(3) addresses the situation in which an enforcing secured party receives noncash proceeds.

Example: An enforcing secured party receives a promissory note from an account debtor who is unable to pay an account when it is due. The secured party accepts the note in exchange for extending the date on which the account debtor's obligation is due. The secured party may wish to credit its debtor (the assignor) with the principal amount of the note upon receipt of the note, but probably will prefer to credit the debtor only as and when the note is paid.

Under subsection (a)(3), the secured party is under no duty to apply the note or its value to the outstanding obligation unless its failure to do so would be commercially unreasonable. If the secured party does apply the note to the outstanding obligation, however, it must do so in a commercially reasonable manner. The parties may provide for the method of application of noncash proceeds by agreement, if the method is not manifestly unreasonable. See Section 9-603. This section does not explain when the failure to apply noncash proceeds would be commercially unreasonable; it leaves that determination to case-by-case adjudication. In the example, the secured party appears to have accepted the account debtor's note in order to increase the likelihood of payment and decrease the likelihood that the account debtor would dispute its obligation. Under these circumstances, it may well be commercially reasonable for the secured party to credit its debtor's obligations only as and when cash proceeds are collected from the account debtor, especially given the uncertainty that attends the account debtor's eventual payment. For an example of a secured party's receipt of noncash proceeds in which it may well be commercially unreasonable for the secured party to delay crediting its debtor's obligations with the value of noncash proceeds, see Section 9-615, Comment 3.

When the secured party is not required to "apply or pay over for application noncash proceeds," the proceeds nonetheless remain collateral subject to this Article. If the secured party were to dispose of them, for example, appropriate notification would be required (see Section 9-611), and the disposition would be subject to the standards provided in this Part (see Section 9-610). Moreover, a secured party in possession of the noncash proceeds would have the duties specified in Section 9-207.

5. No Effect on Priority of Senior Security Interest. The application of proceeds required by subsection (a) does not affect the priority of a security interest in collateral which is senior to the interest of the secured party who is collecting or enforcing collateral under Section 9-607. Although subsection (a) imposes a duty to apply proceeds to the enforcing secured party's expenses and to the satisfaction of the secured obligations owed to it and to subordinate secured parties, that duty applies only among the enforcing secured party and those persons. Concerning the priority of a junior secured party who collects and enforces collateral, see Section 9-607, Comment 5.

4-9-609. Secured party's right to take possession after default. (a) After default, a secured party:

(1) May take possession of the collateral; and

(2) Without removal, may render equipment unusable and dispose of collateral on a debtor's premises under section 4-9-610.

(b) A secured party may proceed under subsection (a) of this section:

(1) Pursuant to judicial process; or

(2) Without judicial process, if it proceeds without breach of the peace.

(c) If so agreed, and in any event after default, a secured party may require the debtor to assemble the collateral and make it available to the secured party at a place to be designated by the secured party which is reasonably convenient to both parties.

(d) If the collateral is a manufactured home or trailer coach, as defined in section 42-1-102 (106), C.R.S., and is used and occupied by the debtor as a place of residence, the secured party may take possession of the collateral pursuant to this section without judicial process only if there is clear and convincing evidence that the debtor has vacated or abandoned the collateral or the debtor voluntarily surrenders the collateral to the secured party.

(e) In exercising its rights under paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this section with respect to collateral, a secured party may not disable or render unusable any computer program or other similar device embedded in the collateral if immediate injury to any person or property is a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such action. Any secured party who disables or renders unusable such a computer program or other similar device in such circumstances shall be liable in accordance with applicable rules of law to any person who sustains an injury to person or property as a reasonably foreseeable result of the secured party's action.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-503.

2. Secured Party's Right to Possession. This section follows former Section 9-503 and earlier uniform legislation. It provides that the secured party is entitled to take possession of collateral after default.

3. Judicial Process; Breach of Peace. Subsection (b) permits a secured party to proceed under this section without judicial process if it does so "without breach of the peace." Although former Section 9-503 placed the same condition on a secured party's right to take possession of collateral, subsection (b) extends the condition to the right provided in subsection (a)(2) as well. Like former Section 9-503, this section does not define or explain the conduct that will constitute a breach of the peace, leaving that matter for continuing development by the courts. In considering whether a secured party has engaged in a breach of the peace, however, courts should hold the secured party responsible for the actions of others taken on the secured party's behalf, including independent contractors engaged by the secured party to take possession of collateral.

This section does not authorize a secured party who repossesses without judicial process to utilize the assistance of a law-enforcement officer. A number of cases have held that a repossessing secured party's use of a law-enforcement officer without benefit of judicial process constituted a failure to comply with former Section 9-503.

4. Damages for Breach of Peace. Concerning damages that may be recovered based on a secured party's breach of the peace in connection with taking possession of collateral, see Section 9-625, Comment 3.

5. Multiple Secured Parties. More than one secured party may be entitled to take possession of collateral under this section. Conflicting rights to possession among secured parties are resolved by the priority rules of this Article. Thus, a senior secured party is entitled to possession as against a junior claimant. Non-UCC law governs whether a junior secured party in possession of collateral is liable to the senior in conversion. Normally, a junior who refuses to relinquish possession of collateral upon the demand of a secured party having a superior possessory right to the collateral would be liable in conversion.

6. Secured Party's Right to Disable and Dispose of Equipment on Debtor's Premises. In the case of some collateral, such as heavy equipment, the physical removal from the debtor's plant and the storage of the collateral pending disposition may be impractical or unduly expensive. This section follows former Section 9-503 by providing that, in lieu of removal, the secured party may render equipment unusable or may dispose of collateral on the debtor's premises. Unlike former Section 9-503, however, this section explicitly conditions these rights on the debtor's default. Of course, this section does not validate unreasonable action by a secured party. Under Section 9-610, all aspects of a disposition must be commercially reasonable.

7. Debtor's Agreement to Assemble Collateral. This section follows former Section 9-503 also by validating a debtor's agreement to assemble collateral and make it available to a secured party at a place that the secured party designates. Similar to the treatment of agreements to permit collection prior to default under Section 9-607 and former 9-502, however, this section validates these agreements whether or not they are conditioned on the debtor's default. For example, a debtor might agree to make available to a secured party, from time to time, any instruments or negotiable documents that the debtor receives on account of collateral. A court should not infer from this section's validation that a debtor's agreement to assemble and make available collateral would not be enforceable under other applicable law.

8. Agreed Standards. Subject to the limitation imposed by Section 9-603(b), this section's provisions concerning agreements to assemble and make available collateral and a secured party's right to disable equipment and dispose of collateral on a debtor's premises are likely topics for agreement on standards as contemplated by Section 9-603.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 4-9-609 is similar to § 4-9-503 as it existed prior to the 2001 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

As applied to facts of case section not unconstitutional. Where the secured creditor gave the debtor every opportunity to avoid default, and only after the debtor refused to make any effort to pay and he was informed by the creditor that the creditor had no choice but to repossess, did the creditor resort to repossession, as applied to these facts, this section is not unconstitutional for violating due process. John Deere Co. v. Catalano, 186 Colo. 101, 525 P.2d 1153 (1974).

Authorization of self-help repossessions is not enough to sufficiently involve the state in the acts of repossessors for their acts to be action "under color of" state law. Kirksey v. Theilig, 351 F. Supp. 727 (D. Colo. 1972).

Article 9 does not determine location of title after default. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 619 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1980).

Traditional state rule allows repossession of security. In Colorado, as elsewhere, the state's traditional rule has been to allow the secured creditor to repossess the security if the contract so provides and the repossession does not "breach the peace". John Deere Co. v. Catalano, 186 Colo. 101, 525 P.2d 1153 (1974).

Right to possession is not limited by this section to the creditor whose security interest has the higher priority. Western Nat'l Bank v. ABC Drilling Co., 42 Colo. App. 407, 599 P.2d 942 (1979).

Section adds nothing if parties previously agree on such remedy. While the enactment of this section provides for self-help repossession in absence of contrary contract provisions, it adds nothing to the situation where the parties have previously agreed on such a remedy and the procedure is carried out without significant state help. John Deere Co. v. Catalano, 186 Colo. 101, 525 P.2d 1153 (1974).

No right to jury trial before repossession. Although C.R.C.P. 38 provides that a party is entitled to a jury trial upon demand in an action for the recovery of specific real or personal property, the rule is not intended to extend to actions involving the repossession of collateral by a secured party. Western Nat'l Bank v. ABC Drilling Co., 42 Colo. App. 407, 599 P.2d 942 (1979).

In event of default, voluntary delivery of collateral to creditor constitutes a repossession and does not remove the matter from the UCC. Tajalli v. Gharibi, 758 P.2d 190 (Colo. App. 1988).

Applied in First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 653 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); Layne v. Fort Carson Nat'l Bank, 655 P.2d 856 (Colo. App. 1982); Wynn v. Adams County Bank, 761 P.2d 234 (Colo. App. 1988).

4-9-610. Disposition of collateral after default. (a) After default, a secured party may sell, lease, license, or otherwise dispose of any or all of the collateral in its present condition or following any commercially reasonable preparation or processing.

(b) Every aspect of a disposition of collateral, including the method, manner, time, place, and other terms, must be commercially reasonable. If commercially reasonable, a secured party may dispose of collateral by public or private proceedings, by one or more contracts, as a unit or in parcels, and at any time and place and on any terms.

(c) A secured party may purchase collateral:

(1) At a public disposition; or

(2) At a private disposition only if the collateral is of a kind that is customarily sold on a recognized market or the subject of widely distributed standard price quotations.

(d) A contract for sale, lease, license, or other disposition includes the warranties relating to title, possession, quiet enjoyment, and the like which by operation of law accompany a voluntary disposition of property of the kind subject to the contract.

(e) A secured party may disclaim or modify warranties under subsection (d) of this section:

(1) In a manner that would be effective to disclaim or modify the warranties in a voluntary disposition of property of the kind subject to the contract of disposition; or

(2) By communicating to the purchaser, prior to completion of the transaction, a record evidencing the contract for disposition and including an express disclaimer or modification of the warranties.

(f) A record is sufficient to disclaim warranties under subsection (e) of this section if it indicates "There is no warranty relating to title, possession, quiet enjoyment, or the like in this disposition" or uses words of similar import.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-504(1), (3).

2. Commercially Reasonable Dispositions. Subsection (a) follows former Section 9-504 by permitting a secured party to dispose of collateral in a commercially reasonable manner following a default. Although subsection (b) permits both public and private dispositions, [including public and private dispositions conducted over the Internet,] "every aspect of a disposition . . . must be commercially reasonable." This section encourages private dispositions on the assumption that they frequently will result in higher realization on collateral for the benefit of all concerned. Subsection (a) does not restrict dispositions to sales; collateral may be sold, leased, licensed, or otherwise disposed. Section 9-627 provides guidance for determining the circumstances under which a disposition is "commercially reasonable."

Note: The bracketed language takes effect July 1, 2013.

3. Time of Disposition. This Article does not specify a period within which a secured party must dispose of collateral. This is consistent with this Article's policy to encourage private dispositions through regular commercial channels. It may, for example, be prudent not to dispose of goods when the market has collapsed. Or, it might be more appropriate to sell a large inventory in parcels over a period of time instead of in bulk. Of course, under subsection (b) every aspect of a disposition of collateral must be commercially reasonable. This requirement explicitly includes the "method, manner, time, place and other terms." For example, if a secured party does not proceed under Section 9-620 and holds collateral for a long period of time without disposing of it, and if there is no good reason for not making a prompt disposition, the secured party may be determined not to have acted in a "commercially reasonable" manner. See also Section 1-203 (general obligation of good faith).

4. Pre-Disposition Preparation and Processing. Former Section 9-504(1) appeared to give the secured party the choice of disposing of collateral either "in its then condition or following any commercially reasonable preparation or processing." Some courts held that the "commercially reasonable" standard of former Section 9-504(3) nevertheless could impose an affirmative duty on the secured party to process or prepare the collateral prior to disposition. Subsection (a) retains the substance of the quoted language. Although courts should not be quick to impose a duty of preparation or processing on the secured party, subsection (a) does not grant the secured party the right to dispose of the collateral "in its then condition" under all circumstances. A secured party may not dispose of collateral "in its then condition" when, taking into account the costs and probable benefits of preparation or processing and the fact that the secured party would be advancing the costs at its risk, it would be commercially unreasonable to dispose of the collateral in that condition.

5. Disposition by Junior Secured Party. Disposition rights under subsection (a) are not limited to first-priority security interests. Rather, any secured party as to whom there has been a default enjoys the right to dispose of collateral under this subsection. The exercise of this right by a secured party whose security interest is subordinate to that of another secured party does not of itself constitute a conversion or otherwise give rise to liability in favor of the holder of the senior security interest. Section 9-615 addresses application of the proceeds of a disposition by a junior secured party. Under Section 9-615(a), a junior secured party owes no obligation to apply the proceeds of disposition to the satisfaction of obligations secured by a senior security interest. Section 9-615(g) builds on this general rule by protecting certain juniors from claims of a senior concerning cash proceeds of the disposition. Even if a senior were to have a non-Article 9 claim to proceeds of a junior's disposition, Section 9-615(g) would protect a junior that acts in good faith and without knowledge that its actions violate the rights of a senior party. Because the disposition by a junior would not cut off a senior's security interest or other lien (see Section 9-617), in many (probably most) cases the junior's receipt of the cash proceeds would not violate the rights of the senior.

The holder of a senior security interest is entitled, by virtue of its priority, to take possession of collateral from the junior secured party and conduct its own disposition, provided that the senior enjoys the right to take possession of the collateral from the debtor. See Section 9-609. The holder of a junior security interest normally must notify the senior secured party of an impending disposition. See Section 9-611. Regardless of whether the senior receives a notification from the junior, the junior's disposition does not of itself discharge the senior's security interest. See Section 9-617. Unless the senior secured party has authorized the disposition free and clear of its security interest, the senior's security interest ordinarily will survive the disposition by the junior and continue under Section 9-315(a). If the senior enjoys the right to repossess the collateral from the debtor, the senior likewise may recover the collateral from the transferee.

When a secured party's collateral is encumbered by another security interest or other lien, one of the claimants may seek to invoke the equitable doctrine of marshaling. As explained by the Supreme Court, that doctrine "rests upon the principle that a creditor having two funds to satisfy his debt, may not by his application of them to his demand, defeat another creditor, who may resort to only one of the funds." Meyer v. United States, 375 U.S. 233, 236 (1963), quoting Sowell v. Federal Reserve Bank, 268 U.S. 449, 456-57 (1925). The purpose of the doctrine is "to prevent the arbitrary action of a senior lienor from destroying the rights of a junior lienor or a creditor having less security." Id. at 237. Because it is an equitable doctrine, marshaling "is applied only when it can be equitably fashioned as to all of the parties" having an interest in the property. Id. This Article leaves courts free to determine whether marshaling is appropriate in any given case. See Section 1-103.

6. Security Interests of Equal Rank. Sometimes two security interests enjoy the same priority. This situation may arise by contract, e.g., pursuant to "equal and ratable" provisions in indentures, or by operation of law. See Section 9-328(6). This Article treats a security interest having equal priority like a senior security interest in many respects. Assume, for example, that SP-X and SP-Y enjoy equal priority, SP-W is senior to them, and SP-Z is junior. If SP-X disposes of the collateral under this section, then (i) SP-W's and SP-Y's security interests survive the disposition but SP-Z's does not, see Section 9-617, and (ii) neither SP-W nor SP-Y is entitled to receive a distribution of proceeds, but SP-Z is. See Section 9-615(a)(3).

When one considers the ability to obtain possession of the collateral, a secured party with equal priority is unlike a senior secured party. As the senior secured party, SP-W should enjoy the right to possession as against SP-X. See Section 9-609, Comment 5. If SP-W takes possession and disposes of the collateral under this section, it is entitled to apply the proceeds to satisfy its secured claim. SP-Y, however, should not have such a right to take possession from SP-X; otherwise, once SP-Y took possession from SP-X, SP-X would have the right to get possession from SP-Y, which would be obligated to redeliver possession to SP-X, and so on. Resolution of this problem is left to the parties and, if necessary, the courts.

7. Public vs. Private Dispositions. This Part maintains two distinctions between "public" and other dispositions: (i) the secured party may buy at the former, but normally not at the latter (Section 9-610(c)), and (ii) the debtor is entitled to notification of "the time and place of a public disposition" and notification of "the time after which" a private disposition or other intended disposition is to be made (Section 9-613(1)(E)).

It does not retain the distinction under former Section 9-504(4), under which transferees in a noncomplying public disposition could lose protection more easily than transferees in other noncomplying dispositions. Instead, Section 9-617(b) adopts a unitary standard. Although the term is not defined, as used in this Article, a "public disposition" is one at which the price is determined after the public has had a meaningful opportunity for competitive bidding. "Meaningful opportunity" is meant to imply that some form of advertisement or public notice must precede the sale (or other disposition) and that the public must have access to the sale (disposition).

[A secured party's purchase of collateral at its own private disposition is equivalent to a "strict foreclosure" and is governed by Sections 9-620, 9-621, and 9-622. The provisions of these sections can be waived only to the extent provided in Section 9-624(b). See Section 9-602.]

Note: The bracketed language takes effect July 1, 2013.

8. Investment Property. Dispositions of investment property may be regulated by the federal securities laws. Although a "public" disposition of securities under this Article may implicate the registration requirements of the Securities Act of 1933, it need not do so. A disposition that qualifies for a "private placement" exemption under the Securities Act of 1933 nevertheless may constitute a "public" disposition within the meaning of this section. Moreover, the "commercially reasonable" requirements of subsection (b) need not prevent a secured party from conducting a foreclosure sale without the issuer's compliance with federal registration requirements.

9. "Recognized Market." A "recognized market," as used in subsection (c) and Section 9-611(d), is one in which the items sold are fungible and prices are not subject to individual negotiation. For example, the New York Stock Exchange is a recognized market. A market in which prices are individually negotiated or the items are not fungible is not a recognized market, even if the items are the subject of widely disseminated price guides or are disposed of through dealer auctions.

10. Relevance of Price. While not itself sufficient to establish a violation of this Part, a low price suggests that a court should scrutinize carefully all aspects of a disposition to ensure that each aspect was commercially reasonable. Note also that even if the disposition is commercially reasonable, Section 9-615(f) provides a special method for calculating a deficiency or surplus if (i) the transferee in the disposition is the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor, and (ii) the amount of proceeds of the disposition is significantly below the range of proceeds that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought.

11. Warranties. Subsection (d) affords the transferee in a disposition under this section the benefit of any title, possession, quiet enjoyment, and similar warranties that would have accompanied the disposition by operation of non-Article 9 law had the disposition been conducted under other circumstances. For example, the Article 2 warranty of title would apply to a sale of goods, the analogous warranties of Article 2A would apply to a lease of goods, and any common-law warranties of title would apply to dispositions of other types of collateral. See, e.g., Restatement (2d), Contracts 333 (warranties of assignor).

Subsection (e) explicitly provides that these warranties can be disclaimed either under other applicable law or by communicating a record containing an express disclaimer. The record need not be written, but an oral communication would not be sufficient. See Section 9-102 (definition of "record"). Subsection (f) provides a sample of wording that will effectively exclude the warranties in a disposition under this section, whether or not the exclusion would be effective under non-Article 9 law.

The warranties incorporated by subsection (d) are those relating to "title, possession, quiet enjoyment, and the like." Depending on the circumstances, a disposition under this section also may give rise to other statutory or implied warranties, e.g., warranties of quality or fitness for purpose. Law other than this Article determines whether such other warranties apply to a disposition under this section. Other law also determines issues relating to disclaimer of such warranties. For example, a foreclosure sale of a car by a car dealer could give rise to an implied warranty of merchantability (Section 2-314) unless effectively disclaimed or modified (Section 2-316).

This section's approach to these warranties conflicts with the former Comment to Section 2-312. This Article rejects the baseline assumption that commercially reasonable dispositions under this section are out of the ordinary commercial course or peculiar. The Comment to Section 2-312 has been revised accordingly.

Issuance of title certificate to repossessor involves no deprivation of due process as contemplated by the fourteenth amendment or state constitution. It may be that repossession of automobiles or any other property sold on time payment with an express agreement permitting such repossession without notice may be resulting in great abuses, and controls are needed. If so, the regulation of this abuse is a matter for the general assembly, not the courts. Sifuentes v. Weed, 186 Colo. 109, 525 P.2d 1157 (1974).

Authorization of self-help repossessions is not enough to sufficiently involve the state in the acts of repossessors for their acts to be action "under color of" state law. Kirksey v. Theilig, 351 F. Supp. 727 (D. Colo. 1972).

"Disposition" of collateral connotes receipt of "proceeds". Where collateral was released to the debtor, and the creditor did not receive "proceeds", no "disposition" of the collateral took place. Silverberg v. Colantuno, 991 P.2d 280 (Colo. App. 1998).

Presumption that proceeds from sale without notice equal balance owing. Where there is no notice prior to sale of collateral, it is rebuttably presumed that the value of the collateral sold is equal to the balance owing on any notes. To rebut the presumption, the secured party has the burden of proving, by other evidence, that the market value of the collateral and that, after application of that amount, there was a balance still owing on the notes. United Bank v. Reed, 635 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1981); Gapter v. Kocjancic, 703 P.2d 660 (Colo. App. 1985); Tajalli v. Gharibi, 758 P.2d 190 (Colo. App. 1988).

The reason for exempting from the notice requirement a transaction where there is a recognized market is that the price on the recognized market represents the fair market value from day to day, so if there is a recognized market, theoretically, the best price at any given time is the current market price. Since there is no recognized market for the sale of repossessed automobiles, debtors are entitled to notice of sale of the repossessed automobile. Cmty. Mgt. Ass'n of Colo. Springs, Inc. v. Tousley, 32 Colo. App. 33, 505 P.2d 1314 (1973).

The right of a secured party to a deficiency judgment is established, so that failure of secured party to give reasonable notice of sale does not result in a forfeiture of the right to recover a deficiency judgment. Cmty. Mgt. Ass'n of Colo. Springs, Inc. v. Tousley, 32 Colo. App. 33, 505 P.2d 1314 (1973).

Failure to give notice of the disposition of the collateral does not preclude the creditor from recovering a deficiency if it can prove the amount thereof. First Nat'l Bank v. Cillessen, 622 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1980); Zimmerman v. Cook, 651 P.2d 910 (Colo. App. 1982).

Director of revenue not involved in repossession and transfer of ownership. The activity of the director of revenue in the issuance of a new title to a repossessor of a motor vehicle is strictly limited to the ministerial duty of providing prima facie evidence of what has already occurred by purely private action, namely, the transfer of title from the debtor to the creditor in a manner specifically provided for by their agreement. It does not in any meaningful way involve the director in the repossession and subsequent transfer of ownership to the repossessor. Sifuentes v. Weed, 186 Colo. 109, 525 P.2d 1157 (1974).

Sufficient evidence that notice sent. The existence of a business custom is sufficient to warrant a presumption that notice was sent. It is then up to the court to decide if that presumption is overcome by other evidence. Greeley Nat. Bank v. Sloan, 677 P.2d 409 (Colo. App. 1983).

Amount received at sale as evidence of market value of collateral. If the sale of the collateral has been conducted in accordance with the requirements of the UCC, the amount received at the sale will be competent evidence of the market value. First Nat'l Bank v. Cillessen, 622 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1980).

Amount received at sale is not evidence of market value if sale is not conducted in compliance with law. Where, because of lack of notice, the sale is not conducted in compliance with the law, the amount received is not evidence of the market value, and the secured party has to prove value by other evidence. First Nat'l Bank v. Cillessen, 622 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1980).

Debtor entitled to market value offset against balance due. The debtors are entitled to have the market value of the collateral at the time and place of sale offset against any balance due on the indebtedness. First Nat'l Bank v. Cillessen, 622 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1980).

Evidence of purchaser's lack of good faith. Knowledge that the holder of a subordinate security interest had not been given the notice required by this section might be evidence of a want of good faith on the part of a purchaser. Young v. Golden State Bank, 39 Colo. App. 45, 560 P.2d 855 (1977).

"Debtor" construed. Accommodation comakers and those others who will be called upon to pay deficiencies are "debtors" within the meaning of § 4-9-105 (1)(d) and subsection (3) of this section, and are entitled to notice of the disposition of the collateral. First Nat'l Bank v. Cillessen, 622 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1980).

Subsection (3) deals with both the collateral and the obligation and, accordingly, the term "debtor" includes both the owner of the collateral and the obligor when they are not the same person. First Nat'l Bank v. Cillessen, 622 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1980).

"Debtor" includes a guarantor and, as a debtor, the guarantor may not waive debtor's right to insist on a commercially reasonable disposition of collateral. May v. Women's Bank, N.A., 807 P.2d 1145 (Colo. 1991).

A guarantor is treated as a debtor for purposes of article 9 of the Colorado Uniform Commercial Code. The protections afforded by subsection (3) that collateral be disposed of in a commercially reasonable manner are also provided to a guarantor. FBS AG Credit, Inc. v. Estate of Walker, 906 F. Supp. 1427 (D. Colo. 1995).

In proving "commercial reasonableness", the burden of proof is on the creditor. In re Wells, 51 Bankr. 563 (D. Colo. 1985).

Creditor's sale of property used as collateral to themselves is not commercially reasonable when there is expert testimony that there was no recognized market for the property and it was not subject to widely distributed standard price quotation. Cooper Investments v. Conger, 775 P.2d 76 (Colo. App. 1989).

The retention of collateral by a creditor for an excessive period of time without disposition may be commercially unreasonable in violation of this section. The question of reasonableness is one of fact for the trial court. Tajalli v. Gharibi, 758 P.2d 190 (Colo. App. 1988).

Presumption of no deficiency following repossession. There is a presumption that the value of the repossessed collateral is equal to the amount of the outstanding debt and that, therefore, there is no deficiency. First Nat'l Bank v. Cillessen, 622 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1980).

This section provides that reasonable notification of sale must be made unless the collateral is either perishable, threatens to decline speedily in value, or is of a type customarily sold on a recognized market. Cmty. Mgt. Ass'n of Colo. Springs, Inc. v. Tousley, 32 Colo. App. 33, 505 P.2d 1314 (1973).

Article 9 does not determine location of title after default. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 619 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1980).

This section is made inoperative by § 4-9-501 with respect to water stock foreclosed as a part of real estate security. Kinoshita v. North Denver Bank, 181 Colo. 183, 508 P.2d 1264 (1973).

The purpose of the notice requirement in subsection (3) is to give all persons having interests in the collateral or facing possible deficiency claims an opportunity to protect their interests and to utilize all practicable means of reducing to eliminating their potential liability. Western Nat'l Bank v. VFW Post 8103, 660 P.2d 919 (Colo. App. 1983).

A post-default waiver by the defendant of the notice requirement of subsection (3) can be made only when the debtor knowingly and specifically agrees to waive right to such notice. Burdick v. Tucker, 780 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1989).

If a secured party fails to give proper notice under subsection (3), a presumption arises that the value of the collateral at the time of sale was equal to the amount of the outstanding debt, so that no deficiency results. Colo. Leasing Corp. v. Borquez, 738 P.2d 377 (Colo. 1986).

Notice required under subsection (3) may not be waived. United Bank v. Reed, 635 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1981).

Fulfillment of notice requirement for private sale. In the case of a private sale, the statutory notice requirement is fulfilled when the creditor sends reasonable notification stating the date after which the collateral will be sold. Western Nat'l Bank v. VFW Post 8103, 660 P.2d 919 (Colo. App. 1983).

Under plain language of this section, sale of wraparound promissory note transferred all debtor's rights to purchaser at foreclosure sale and discharged creditor's security interest therein; accordingly, purchaser took free of restrictions contained in security agreement. Western Group Nurseries v. Pomeranz, 867 P.2d 12 (Colo. App. 1993).

Failure of creditor to comply with the notice requirements of this section did not prevent new buyer from taking all of the debtor's rights in the repossessed car even though the certificate of title had not been transferred to the buyer prior to the automatic stay provided for by 11 U.S.C. § 362. In re Duffy, 186 Bankr. 503 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1995).

Section 4-9-105 (1)(d) does not require "debtor" to be owner or have rights in the collateral. First Nat'l Bank v. Cillessen, 622 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1980).

Applied in Western Nat'l Bank v. ABC Drilling Co., 42 Colo. App. 407, 599 P.2d 942 (1979); First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 653 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982).

4-9-611. Notification before disposition of collateral. (a) In this section, "notification date" means the earlier of the date on which:

(1) A secured party sends to the debtor and any secondary obligor an authenticated notification of disposition; or

(2) The debtor and any secondary obligor waive the right to notification as provided in section 4-9-624 (a).

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d) of this section, a secured party that disposes of collateral under section 4-9-610 shall send to the persons specified in subsection (c) of this section a reasonable authenticated notification of disposition.

(c) To comply with subsection (b) of this section, the secured party shall send an authenticated notification of disposition to:

(1) The debtor;

(2) Any secondary obligor; and

(3) If the collateral is other than consumer goods:

(A) Any other person from which the secured party has received, before the notification date, an authenticated notification of a claim of an interest in the collateral;

(B) Any other secured party or lienholder that, ten days before the notification date, held a security interest in or other lien on the collateral perfected by the filing of a financing statement that:

(i) Identified the collateral;

(ii) Was indexed under the debtor's name as of that date; and

(iii) Was filed in the office in which to file a financing statement against the debtor covering the collateral as of that date; and

(C) Any other secured party that, ten days before the notification date, held a security interest in the collateral perfected by compliance with a statute, regulation, or treaty described in section 4-9-311 (a).

(d) Subsection (b) of this section does not apply if the collateral is perishable or the creditor in good faith believes that the collateral threatens to decline speedily in value or is of a type customarily sold on a recognized market. The specific reference to good faith in this subsection (d) does not abrogate the general obligation of the secured party to proceed in a commercially reasonable manner.

(e) A secured party complies with the requirement for notification prescribed by subparagraph (B) of paragraph (3) of subsection (c) of this section if:

(1) Not later than twenty days or earlier than thirty days before the notification date, the secured party requests, in a commercially reasonable manner, information concerning financing statements indexed under the debtor's name in the office indicated in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (3) of subsection (c) of this section; and

(2) Before the notification date, the secured party:

(A) Did not receive a response to the request for information; or

(B) Received a response to the request for information and sent an authenticated notification of disposition to each secured party or other lienholder named in that response whose financing statement covered the collateral.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 4-9-504 (3) as it existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado added the phrase "as provided in section 4-9-624 (a)" to subsection (a)(2) and added the references to good faith in subsection (d).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-504(3).

2. Reasonable Notification. This section requires a secured party who wishes to dispose of collateral under Section 9-610 to send "a reasonable authenticated notification of disposition" to specified interested persons, subject to certain exceptions. The notification must be reasonable as to the manner in which it is sent, its timeliness (i.e., a reasonable time before the disposition is to take place), and its content. See Sections 9-612 (timeliness of notification), 9-613 (contents of notification generally), 9-614 (contents of notification in consumer-goods transactions).

3. Notification to Debtors and Secondary Obligors. This section imposes a duty to send notification of a disposition not only to the debtor but also to any secondary obligor. Subsections (b) and (c) resolve an uncertainty under former Article 9 by providing that secondary obligors (sureties) are entitled to receive notification of an intended disposition of collateral, regardless of who created the security interest in the collateral. If the surety created the security interest, it would be the debtor. If it did not, it would be a secondary obligor. (This Article also resolves the question of the secondary obligor's ability to waive, pre-default, the right to notification waiver generally is not permitted. See Section 9-602.) Section 9-605 relieves a secured party from any duty to send notification to a debtor or secondary obligor unknown to the secured party.

Under subsection (b), the principal obligor (borrower) is not always entitled to notification of disposition.

Example: Behnfeldt borrows on an unsecured basis, and Bruno grants a security interest in her car to secure the debt. Behnfeldt is a primary obligor, not a secondary obligor. As such, she is not entitled to notification of disposition under this section.

4. Notification to Other Secured Parties. Prior to the 1972 amendments to Article 9, former Section 9-504(3) required the enforcing secured party to send reasonable notification of the disposition: except in the case of consumer goods to any other person who has a security interest in the collateral and who has duly filed a financing statement indexed in the name of the debtor in this State or who is known by the secured party to have a security interest in the collateral.

The 1972 amendments eliminated the duty to give notice to secured parties other than those from whom the foreclosing secured party had received written notice of a claim of an interest in the collateral.

Many of the problems arising from dispositions of collateral encumbered by multiple security interests can be ameliorated or solved by informing all secured parties of an intended disposition and affording them the opportunity to work with one another. To this end, subsection (c)(3)(B) expands the duties of the foreclosing secured party to include the duty to notify (and the corresponding burden of searching the files to discover) certain competing secured parties. The subsection imposes a search burden that in some cases may be greater than the pre-1972 burden on foreclosing secured parties but certainly is more modest than that faced by a new secured lender.

To determine who is entitled to notification, the foreclosing secured party must determine the proper office for filing a financing statement as of a particular date, measured by reference to the "notification date," as defined in subsection (a). This determination requires reference to the choice-of-law provisions of Part 3. The secured party must ascertain whether any financing statements covering the collateral and indexed under the debtor's name, as the name existed as of that date, in fact were filed in that office. The foreclosing secured party generally need not notify secured parties whose effective financing statements have become more difficult to locate because of changes in the location of the debtor, proceeds rules, or changes in the debtor's name [that is sufficient as the name of the debtor under Section 9-503(a).]

Note: "Debtor's" in the last sentence will be deleted and the bracketed language takes effect July 1, 2013.

Under subsection (c)(3)(C), the secured party also must notify a secured party who has perfected a security interest by complying with a statute or treaty described in Section 9-311(a), such as a certificate-of-title statute.

Subsection (e) provides a "safe harbor" that takes into account the delays that may be attendant to receiving information from the public filing offices. It provides, generally, that the secured party will be deemed to have satisfied its notification duty under subsection (c)(3)(B) if it requests a search from the proper office at least 20 but not more than 30 days before sending notification to the debtor and if it also sends a notification to all secured parties (and other lienholders) reflected on the search report. The secured party's duty under subsection (c)(3)(B) also will be satisfied if the secured party requests but does not receive a search report before the notification is sent to the debtor. Thus, if subsection (e) applies, a secured party who is entitled to notification under subsection (c)(3)(B) has no remedy against a foreclosing secured party who does not send the notification. The foreclosing secured party has complied with the notification requirement. Subsection (e) has no effect on the requirements of the other paragraphs of subsection (c). For example, if the foreclosing secured party received a notification from the holder of a conflicting security interest in accordance with subsection (c)(3)(A) but failed to send to the holder a notification of the disposition, the holder of the conflicting security interest would have the right to recover any loss under Section 9-625(b).

5. Authentication Requirement. Subsections (b) and (c) explicitly provide that a notification of disposition must be "authenticated." Some cases read former Section 9-504(3) as validating oral notification.

6. Second Try. This Article leaves to judicial resolution, based upon the facts of each case, the question whether the requirement of "reasonable notification" requires a "second try," i.e., whether a secured party who sends notification and learns that the debtor did not receive it must attempt to locate the debtor and send another notification.

7. Recognized Market; Perishable Collateral. New subsection (d) makes it clear that there is no obligation to give notification of a disposition in the case of perishable collateral or collateral customarily sold on a recognized market (e.g., marketable securities). Former Section 9-504(3) might be read (incorrectly) to relieve the secured party from its duty to notify a debtor but not from its duty to notify other secured parties in connection with dispositions of such collateral.

8. Failure to Conduct Notified Disposition. Nothing in this Article prevents a secured party from electing not to conduct a disposition after sending a notification. Nor does this Article prevent a secured party from electing to send a revised notification if its plans for disposition change. This assumes, however, that the secured party acts in good faith, the revised notification is reasonable, and the revised plan for disposition and any attendant delay are commercially reasonable.

9. Waiver. A debtor or secondary obligor may waive the right to notification under this section only by a post-default authenticated agreement. See Section 9-624(a).

[10. Other Law. Other State or federal law may contain requirements concerning notification of a disposition of property by a secured party. For example, federal law imposes notification requirements with respect to the enforcement of mortgages on federally documented vessels. Principles of statutory interpretation and, in the context of federal law, supremacy and preemption determine whether and to what extent law other than this Article supplements, displaces, or is displaced by this Article. See Sections 1-103, 1-104, 9-109(c)(1).]

4-9-612. Timeliness of notification before disposition of collateral. (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this section, whether a notification is sent within a reasonable time is a question of fact.

(b) In a transaction other than a consumer transaction, a notification of disposition sent after default and ten days or more before the earliest time of disposition set forth in the notification is sent within a reasonable time before the disposition.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Reasonable Notification. Section 9-611(b) requires the secured party to send a "reasonable authenticated notification." Under that section, as under former Section 9-504(3), one aspect of a reasonable notification is its timeliness. This generally means that the notification must be sent at a reasonable time in advance of the date of a public disposition or the date after which a private disposition is to be made. A notification that is sent so near to the disposition date that a notified person could not be expected to act on or take account of the notification would be unreasonable.

3. Timeliness of Notification: Safe Harbor. The 10-day notice period in subsection (b) is intended to be a "safe harbor" and not a minimum requirement. To qualify for the "safe harbor" the notification must be sent after default. A notification also must be sent in a commercially reasonable manner. See Section 9-611(b) ("reasonable authenticated notification"). These requirements prevent a secured party from taking advantage of the "safe harbor" by, for example, giving the debtor a notification at the time of the original extension of credit or sending the notice by surface mail to a debtor overseas.

4-9-613. Contents and form of notification before disposition of collateral: general.

(a) Except in a consumer-goods transaction, the following rules apply:

(1) The contents of a notification of disposition are sufficient if the notification:

(A) Describes the debtor and the secured party;

(B) Describes the collateral that is the subject of the intended disposition;

(C) States the method of intended disposition;

(D) States that the debtor is entitled to an accounting of the unpaid indebtedness and states the charge, if any, for an accounting; and

(E) States the time and place of a public disposition or the time after which any other disposition is to be made.

(2) Whether the contents of a notification that lacks any of the information specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection (a) are nevertheless sufficient is a question of fact.

(3) The contents of a notification providing substantially the information specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection (a) are sufficient, even if the notification includes:

(A) Information not specified by said paragraph (1); or

(B) Minor errors that do not cause damages to a person who relies on the information.

(4) A particular phrasing of the notification is not required.

(5) The following form of notification and the form appearing in section 4-9-614 (3), when completed, each provides sufficient information:

NOTIFICATION OF DISPOSITION OF COLLATERAL

To: [Name of debtor, obligor, or other person to which the notification is sent]

From: [Name, address, and telephone number of secured party]

Name of Debtor(s): [Include only if debtor(s) are not an addressee]

[For a public disposition:]

We will sell [or lease or license, as applicable] the [describe collateral] [to the highest qualified bidder] in public as follows:

Day and Date: ____________________
Time: ____________________
Place: ____________________

[For a private disposition:]

We will sell [or lease or license, as applicable] the [describe collateral] privately sometime after [day and date].

You are entitled to an accounting of the unpaid indebtedness secured by the property that we intend to sell [or lease or license, as applicable] [for a charge of $__________]. You may request an accounting by calling us at [telephone number] or writing us at [address].

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: Colorado substituted the word "disposition" for the word "sale" in subsection (a)(1)(E) and substituted the phrase "cause damages to a person who relies on the information" for the phrase "seriously misleading" in subsection (a)(3)(B). Colorado added the phrase "or writing us at [address]" at the end of the notification form contained in subsection (a)(5).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Contents of Notification. To comply with the "reasonable authenticated notification" requirement of Section 9-611(b), the contents of a notification must be reasonable. Except in a consumer-goods transaction, the contents of a notification that includes the information set forth in paragraph (1) are sufficient as a matter of law, unless the parties agree otherwise. (The reference to "time" of disposition means here, as it did in former Section 9-504(3), not only the hour of the day but also the date.) Although a secured party may choose to include additional information concerning the transaction or the debtor's rights and obligations, no additional information is required unless the parties agree otherwise. A notification that lacks some of the information set forth in paragraph (1) nevertheless may be sufficient if found to be reasonable by the trier of fact, under paragraph (2). A properly completed sample form of notification in paragraph (5) or in Section 9-614(a)(3) is an example of a notification that would contain the information set forth in paragraph (1). Under paragraph (4), however, no particular phrasing of the notification is required.

[This section applies to a notification of a public disposition conducted electronically. A notification of an electronic disposition satisfies paragraph (1)(E) if it states the time when the disposition is scheduled to begin and states the electronic location. For example, under the technology current in 2010, the Uniform Resource Locator (URL) or other Internet address where the site of the public disposition can be accessed suffices as an electronic location.]

Note: The bracketed language takes effect July 1, 2013.

4-9-614. Contents and form of notification before disposition of collateral: consumer-goods transaction. (a) In a consumer-goods transaction, the following rules apply:

(1) A notification of disposition must provide the following information:

(A) The information specified in section 4-9-613 (1);

(B) A description of any liability for a deficiency of the person to which the notification is sent;

(C) A telephone number and mailing address from which the amount that must be paid to the secured party to redeem the collateral under section 4-9-623 is available; and

(D) A telephone number and mailing address from which additional information concerning the disposition and the obligation secured is available.

(2) A particular phrasing of the notification is not required.

(3) The following form of notification, when completed, provides sufficient information:

[Name and address of secured party]

NOTICE OF OUR PLAN TO SELL PROPERTY

[Name and address of any obligor who is also a debtor]

Subject:

[Identification of Transaction]

We have your [describe collateral], because you broke promises in our agreement.

We will sell [describe collateral] at public sale. A sale could include a lease or license. The sale will be held as follows:

Date: ____________________
Time: ____________________
Place: ____________________

You may attend the sale and bring bidders if you want.

[For a private disposition:]

We will sell [describe collateral] at private sale sometime after [date]. A sale could include a lease or license.

The money that we get from the sale (after paying our costs) will reduce the amount you owe. If we get less money than you owe, you [will or will not, as applicable] still owe us the difference. If we get more money than you owe, you will get the extra money, unless we must pay it to someone else.

You can get the property back at any time before we sell it by paying us the full amount you owe (not just the past due payments), including our expenses. To learn the exact amount you must pay, call us at [telephone number] or write us at [secured party's address].

If you want us to explain to you in writing how we have figured the amount that you owe us, you may call us at [telephone number] [or write us at [secured party's address]] and request a written explanation. [We will charge you $__________ for the explanation if we have already sent you an explanation of the type requested within the last six months.]

If you need more information about the sale call us at [telephone number] [or write us at [secured party's address]].

We are sending this notice to the following other people who have an interest in [describe collateral] or who owe money under your agreement:

[Names of all other debtors and obligors, if any]

(4) A notification in the form of paragraph (3) of this subsection (a) is sufficient, even if additional information appears at the end of the form.

(5) A notification in the form of paragraph (3) of this subsection (a) is sufficient, even if it includes errors in information not required by paragraph (1) of this subsection (a), unless the error is misleading with respect to rights arising under this article.

(6) If a notification under this section is not in the form of paragraph (3) of this subsection (a), law other than this article determines the effect of including information not required by paragraph (1) of this section.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: Colorado added the phrase "and mailing address" in subsection (a)(1)(C) and substituted "and" for "or" in subsection (a)(1)(D). Colorado added the phrase "or write us at [secured party's address]" in the form regarding how to learn the exact amount the debtor must pay. The uniform act's form regarding explanations reads: "We will charge you $ ________ for the explanation if we sent you another written explanation of the amount you owe us within the last six months."

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Notification in Consumer-Goods Transactions. Paragraph (1) sets forth the information required for a reasonable notification in a consumer-goods transaction. A notification that lacks any of the information set forth in paragraph (1) is insufficient as a matter of law. Compare Section 9-613(2), under which the trier of fact may find a notification to be sufficient even if it lacks some information listed in paragraph (1) of that section.

3. Safe-Harbor Form of Notification; Errors in Information. Although paragraph (2) provides that a particular phrasing of a notification is not required, paragraph (3) specifies a safe-harbor form that, when properly completed, satisfies paragraph (1). Paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) contain special rules applicable to erroneous and additional information. Under paragraph (4), a notification in the safe-harbor form specified in paragraph (3) is not rendered insufficient if it contains additional information at the end of the form. Paragraph (5) provides that non-misleading errors in information contained in a notification are permitted if the safe-harbor form is used and if the errors are in information not required by paragraph (1). Finally, if a notification is in a form other than the paragraph (3) safe-harbor form, other law determines the effect of including in the notification information other than that required by paragraph (1).

4-9-615. Application of proceeds of disposition; liability for deficiency and right to surplus. (a) A secured party shall apply or pay over for application the cash proceeds of disposition under section 4-9-610 in the following order to:

(1) The reasonable expenses of retaking, holding, preparing for disposition, processing, and disposing, and, to the extent provided for by agreement and not prohibited by law, reasonable attorney's fees and reasonable legal expenses incurred by the secured party;

(2) The satisfaction of obligations secured by the security interest or agricultural lien under which the disposition is made;

(3) The satisfaction of obligations secured by any subordinate security interest in or other subordinate lien on the collateral if:

(A) The secured party receives from the holder of the subordinate security interest or other lien an authenticated demand for proceeds before distribution of the proceeds is completed; and

(B) In a case in which a consignor has an interest in the collateral, the subordinate security interest or other lien is senior to the interest of the consignor; and

(4) A secured party that is a consignor of the collateral if the secured party receives from the consignor an authenticated demand for proceeds before distribution of the proceeds is completed.

(b) If requested by a secured party, a holder of a subordinate security interest or other lien shall furnish reasonable proof of the interest or lien within a reasonable time. Unless the holder does so, the secured party need not comply with the holder's demand under paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this section.

(c) A secured party need not apply or pay over for application noncash proceeds of disposition under section 4-9-610 unless the failure to do so would be commercially unreasonable. A secured party that applies or pays over for application noncash proceeds shall do so in a commercially reasonable manner.

(d) If the security interest under which a disposition is made secures payment or performance of an obligation, after making the payments and applications required by subsection (a) of this section and permitted by subsection (c) of this section:

(1) Unless paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of this section requires the secured party to apply or pay over cash proceeds to a consignor, the secured party shall account to and pay a debtor for any surplus; and

(2) The obligor is liable for any deficiency.

(e) If the underlying transaction is a sale of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes:

(1) The debtor is not entitled to any surplus; and

(2) The obligor is not liable for any deficiency.

(f) The surplus or deficiency following a disposition is calculated based on the amount of proceeds that would have been realized in a disposition complying with this part 6 to a transferee other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor if:

(1) The transferee in the disposition is the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor; and

(2) The amount of proceeds of the disposition is significantly below the range of proceeds that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought.

(g) A secured party that receives cash proceeds of a disposition in good faith and without knowledge that the receipt violates the rights of the holder of a security interest or other lien that is not subordinate to the security interest or agricultural lien under which the disposition is made:

(1) Takes the cash proceeds free of the security interest or other lien;

(2) Is not obligated to apply the proceeds of the disposition to the satisfaction of obligations secured by the security interest or other lien; and

(3) Is not obligated to account to or pay the holder of the security interest or other lien for any surplus.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 4-9-504 as it existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado added the phrase "under section 4-9-610" in the introductory portion to subsection (a), added the word "reasonable" before the word "legal" in subsection (a)(1), and substituted the phrase "section 4-9-610" for "this section" in subsection (c).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-504(1), (2).

2. Application of Proceeds. This section contains the rules governing application of proceeds and the debtor's liability for a deficiency following a disposition of collateral. Subsection (a) sets forth the basic order of application. The proceeds are applied first to the expenses of disposition, second to the obligation secured by the security interest that is being enforced, and third, in the specified circumstances, to interests that are subordinate to that security interest.

Subsections (a) and (d) also address the right of a consignor to receive proceeds of a disposition by a secured party whose interest is senior to that of the consignor. Subsection (a) requires the enforcing secured party to pay excess proceeds first to subordinate secured parties or lienholders whose interests are senior to that of a consignor and, finally, to a consignor. Inasmuch as a consignor is the owner of the collateral, secured parties and lienholders whose interests are junior to the consignor's interest will not be entitled to any proceeds. In like fashion, under subsection (d)(1) the debtor is not entitled to a surplus when the enforcing secured party is required to pay over proceeds to a consignor.

3. Noncash Proceeds. Subsection (c) addresses the application of noncash proceeds of a disposition, such as a note or lease. The explanation in Section 9-608, Comment 4, generally applies to this subsection.

Example: A secured party in the business of selling or financing automobiles takes possession of collateral (an automobile) following its debtor's default. The secured party decides to sell the automobile in a private disposition under Section 9-610 and sends appropriate notification under Section 9-611. After undertaking its normal credit investigation and in accordance with its normal credit policies, the secured party sells the automobile on credit, on terms typical of the credit terms normally extended by the secured party in the ordinary course of its business. The automobile stands as collateral for the remaining balance of the price. The noncash proceeds received by the secured party are chattel paper. The secured party may wish to credit its debtor (the assignor) with the principal amount of the chattel paper or may wish to credit the debtor only as and when the payments are made on the chattel paper by the buyer.

Under subsection (c), the secured party is under no duty to apply the noncash proceeds (here, the chattel paper) or their value to the secured obligation unless its failure to do so would be commercially unreasonable. If a secured party elects to apply the chattel paper to the outstanding obligation, however, it must do so in a commercially reasonable manner. The facts in the example indicate that it would be commercially unreasonable for the secured party to fail to apply the value of the chattel paper to the original debtor's secured obligation. Unlike the example in Comment 4 to Section 9-608, the noncash proceeds received in this example are of the type that the secured party regularly generates in the ordinary course of its financing business in nonforeclosure transactions. The original debtor should not be exposed to delay or uncertainty in this situation. Of course, there will be many situations that fall between the examples presented in the Comment to Section 9-608 and in this Comment. This Article leaves their resolution to the court based on the facts of each case.

One would expect that where noncash proceeds are or may be material, the secured party and debtor would agree to more specific standards in an agreement entered into before or after default. The parties may agree to the method of application of noncash proceeds if the method is not manifestly unreasonable. See Section 9-603.

When the secured party is not required to "apply or pay over for application noncash proceeds," the proceeds nonetheless remain collateral subject to this Article. See Section 9-608, Comment 4.

4. Surplus and Deficiency. Subsection (d) deals with surplus and deficiency. It revises former Section 9-504(2) by imposing an explicit requirement that the secured party "pay" the debtor for any surplus, while retaining the secured party's duty to "account." Inasmuch as the debtor may not be an obligor, subsection (d) provides that the obligor (not the debtor) is liable for the deficiency. The special rule governing surplus and deficiency when receivables have been sold likewise takes into account the distinction between a debtor and an obligor. Subsection (d) also addresses the situation in which a consignor has an interest that is subordinate to the security interest being enforced.

5. Collateral Under New Ownership. When the debtor sells collateral subject to a security interest, the original debtor (creator of the security interest) is no longer a debtor inasmuch as it no longer has a property interest in the collateral; the buyer is the debtor. See Section 9-102. As between the debtor (buyer of the collateral) and the original debtor (seller of the collateral), the debtor (buyer) normally would be entitled to the surplus following a disposition. Subsection (d) therefore requires the secured party to pay the surplus to the debtor (buyer), not to the original debtor (seller) with which it has dealt. But, because this situation typically arises as a result of the debtor's wrongful act, this Article does not expose the secured party to the risk of determining ownership of the collateral. If the secured party does not know about the buyer and accordingly pays the surplus to the original debtor, the exculpatory provisions of this Article exonerate the secured party from liability to the buyer. See Sections 9-605, 9-628(a), (b). If a debtor sells collateral free of a security interest, as in a sale to a buyer in ordinary course of business (see Section 9-320(a)), the property is no longer collateral and the buyer is not a debtor.

6. Certain "Low-Price" Dispositions. Subsection (f) provides a special method for calculating a deficiency or surplus when the secured party, a person related to the secured party (defined in Section 9-102), or a secondary obligor acquires the collateral at a foreclosure disposition. It recognizes that when the foreclosing secured party or a related party is the transferee of the collateral, the secured party sometimes lacks the incentive to maximize the proceeds of disposition. As a consequence, the disposition may comply with the procedural requirements of this Article (e.g., it is conducted in a commercially reasonable manner following reasonable notice) but nevertheless fetch a low price.

Subsection (f) adjusts for this lack of incentive. If the proceeds of a disposition of collateral to a secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor are "significantly below the range of proceeds that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought," then instead of calculating a deficiency (or surplus) based on the actual net proceeds, the calculation is based upon the amount that would have been received in a commercially reasonable disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor. Subsection (f) thus rejects the view that the secured party's receipt of such a price necessarily constitutes noncompliance with Part 6. However, such a price may suggest the need for greater judicial scrutiny. See Section 9-610, Comment 10.

7. "Person Related To." Section 9-102 defines "person related to." That term is a key element of the system provided in subsection (f) for low-price dispositions. One part of the definition applies when the secured party is an individual, and the other applies when the secured party is an organization. The definition is patterned closely on the corresponding definition in Section 1.301(32) of the Uniform Consumer Credit Code.

Annotator's note. Since § 4-9-615 is similar to § 4-9-504 as it existed prior to the 2001 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

"Disposition" of collateral connotes receipt of "proceeds". Where collateral was released to the debtor, and the creditor did not receive "proceeds", no "disposition" of the collateral took place. Silverberg v. Colantuno, 991 P.2d 280 (Colo. App. 1998).

4-9-616. Explanation of calculation of surplus or deficiency - definitions. (a) In this section:

(1) "Explanation" means a writing that:

(A) States the amount of the surplus or deficiency;

(B) Provides an explanation in accordance with subsection (c) of this section of how the secured party calculated the surplus or deficiency;

(C) States, if applicable, that future debits, credits, charges, including additional credit service charges or interest, rebates, and expenses may affect the amount of the surplus or deficiency; and

(D) Provides a telephone number and mailing address from which additional information concerning the transaction is available.

(2) "Request" means a record:

(A) Authenticated by a debtor or consumer obligor;

(B) Requesting that the recipient provide an explanation; and

(C) Sent after disposition of the collateral under section 4-9-610.

(b) In a consumer-goods transaction in which the debtor is entitled to a surplus or a consumer obligor is liable for a deficiency under section 4-9-615, the secured party shall:

(1) Send an explanation to the debtor or consumer obligor, as applicable, after the disposition and:

(A) Before or when the secured party accounts to the debtor and pays any surplus or first makes written demand on the consumer obligor after the disposition for payment of the deficiency; and

(B) Within fourteen days after receipt of a request; or

(2) In the case of a consumer obligor who is liable for a deficiency, within fourteen days after receipt of a request, send to the consumer obligor a record waiving the secured party's right to a deficiency.

(c) To comply with subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this section, a writing must provide the following information in the following order:

(1) The aggregate amount of obligations secured by the security interest under which the disposition was made, and, if the amount reflects a rebate of unearned interest or credit service charge, an indication of that fact, calculated as of a specified date:

(A) If the secured party takes or receives possession of the collateral after default, not more than thirty-five days before the secured party takes or receives possession; or

(B) If the secured party takes or receives possession of the collateral before default or does not take possession of the collateral, not more than thirty-five days before the disposition;

(2) The amount of proceeds of the disposition;

(3) The aggregate amount of the obligations after deducting the amount of proceeds;

(4) The amount, in the aggregate or by type, and types of expenses, including reasonable expenses of retaking, holding, preparing for disposition, processing, and disposing of the collateral, and reasonable attorney's fees secured by the collateral which are known to the secured party and relate to the current disposition;

(5) The amount, in the aggregate or by type, and types of credits, including rebates of interest or credit service charges, to which the obligor is known to be entitled and which are not reflected in the amount in paragraph (1) of this subsection (c); and

(6) The amount of the surplus or deficiency.

(d) A particular phrasing of the explanation is not required. An explanation complying substantially with the requirements of subsection (a) of this section is sufficient, even if it includes minor errors that do not cause damages to a person who relies on the information.

(e) A debtor or consumer obligor is entitled without charge to three responses to a request under this section during any six-month period in which the secured party did not send to the debtor or consumer obligor an explanation pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of this section. The secured party may require payment of a charge, not exceeding fifteen dollars, for each additional response.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: Colorado substituted the word "and" for "or" in subsection (a)(1)(D), twice added the word "reasonable" to subsection (c)(4), substituted the phrase "do not cause damages to a person who relies on the information" for the phrase "are not seriously misleading" in subsection (d), and substituted the phrase "three responses" for "one response" and reduced the charge from $25 to $15 in subsection (e).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Duty to Send Information Concerning Surplus or Deficiency. This section reflects the view that, in every consumer-goods transaction, the debtor or obligor is entitled to know the amount of a surplus or deficiency and the basis upon which the surplus or deficiency was calculated. Under subsection (b)(1), a secured party is obligated to provide this information (an "explanation," defined in subsection (a)(1)) no later than the time that it accounts for and pays a surplus or the time of its first written attempt to collect the deficiency. The obligor need not make a request for an accounting in order to receive an explanation. A secured party who does not attempt to collect a deficiency in writing or account for and pay a surplus has no obligation to send an explanation under subsection (b)(1) and, consequently, cannot be liable for noncompliance.

A debtor or secondary obligor need not wait until the secured party commences written collection efforts in order to receive an explanation of how a deficiency or surplus was calculated. Subsection (b)(2) obliges the secured party to send an explanation within 14 days after it receives a "request" (defined in subsection (a)(2)).

Note: The reference to "Subsection (b)(2)" in the second sentence will be replaced with "Subsection (b)(1)(B)", effective July 1, 2013.

3. Explanation of Calculation of Surplus or Deficiency. Subsection (c) contains the requirements for how a calculation of a surplus or deficiency must be explained in order to satisfy subsection (a)(1)(B). It gives a secured party some discretion concerning rebates of interest or credit service charges. The secured party may include these rebates in the aggregate amount of obligations secured, under subsection (c)(1), or may include them with other types of rebates and credits under subsection (c)(5). Rebates of interest or credit service charges are the only types of rebates for which this discretion is provided. If the secured party provides an explanation that includes rebates of pre-computed interest, its explanation must so indicate. The expenses and attorney's fees to be described pursuant to subsection (c)(4) are those relating to the most recent disposition, not those that may have been incurred in connection with earlier enforcement efforts and which have been resolved by the parties.

4. Liability for Noncompliance. A secured party who fails to comply with subsection (b)(2) is liable for any loss caused plus $500. See Section 9-625(b), (c), (e)(6). A secured party who fails to send an explanation under subsection (b)(1) is liable for any loss caused plus, if the noncompliance was "part of a pattern, or consistent with a practice of noncompliance," $500. See Section 9-625(b), (c), (e)(5). However, a secured party who fails to comply with this section is not liable for statutory minimum damages under Section 9-625(c)(2). See Section 9-628(d).

4-9-617. Rights of transferee of collateral. (a) A secured party's disposition of collateral after default:

(1) Transfers to a transferee for value all of the debtor's rights in the collateral;

(2) Discharges the security interest under which the disposition is made; and

(3) Discharges any subordinate security interest or other subordinate lien.

(b) A transferee that acts in good faith takes free of the rights and interests described in subsection (a) of this section, even if the secured party fails to comply with this article or the requirements of any judicial proceeding.

(c) If a transferee does not take free of the rights and interests described in subsection (a) of this section, the transferee takes the collateral subject to:

(1) The debtor's rights in the collateral;

(2) The security interest or agricultural lien under which the disposition is made; and

(3) Any other security interest or other lien.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-504(4).

2. Title Taken by Good-Faith Transferee. Subsection (a) sets forth the rights acquired by persons who qualify under subsection (b) transferees who act in good faith. Such a person is a "transferee," inasmuch as a buyer at a foreclosure sale does not meet the definition of "purchaser" in Section 1-201 (the transfer is not, vis-a-vis the debtor, "voluntary"). By virtue of the expanded definition of the term "debtor" in Section 9-102, subsection (a) makes clear that the ownership interest of a person who bought the collateral subject to the security interest is terminated by a subsequent disposition under this Part. Such a person is a debtor under this Article. Under former Article 9, the result arguably was the same, but the statute was less clear. Under subsection (a), a disposition normally discharges the security interest being foreclosed and any subordinate security interests and other liens.

A disposition has the effect specified in subsection (a), even if the secured party fails to comply with this Article. An aggrieved person (e.g., the holder of a subordinate security interest to whom a notification required by Section 9-611 was not sent) has a right to recover any loss under Section 9-625(b).

3. Unitary Standard in Public and Private Dispositions. Subsection (b) now contains a unitary standard that applies to transferees in both private and public dispositions—acting in good faith. However, this change from former Section 9-504(4) should not be interpreted to mean that a transferee acts in good faith even though it has knowledge of defects or buys in collusion, standards applicable to public dispositions under the former section. Properly understood, those standards were specific examples of the absence of good faith.

4. Title Taken by Nonqualifying Transferee. Subsection (c) specifies the consequences for a transferee who does not qualify for protection under subsections (a) and (b) (i.e., a transferee who does not act in good faith). The transferee takes subject to the rights of the debtor, the enforcing secured party, and other security interests or other liens.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 4-9-617 is similar to § 4-9-504 as it existed prior to the 2001 repeal and reenactment of this article, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Under plain language of this section, sale of wraparound promissory note transferred all debtor's rights to purchaser at foreclosure sale and discharged creditor's security interest therein; accordingly, purchaser took free of restrictions contained in security agreement. Western Group Nurseries v. Pomeranz, 867 P.2d 12 (Colo. App. 1993).

4-9-618. Rights and duties of certain secondary obligors. (a) A secondary obligor acquires the rights and becomes obligated to perform the duties of the secured party after the secondary obligor:

(1) Receives an assignment of a secured obligation from the secured party;

(2) Receives a transfer of collateral from the secured party and agrees to accept the rights and assume the duties of the secured party; or

(3) Is subrogated to the rights of a secured party with respect to collateral.

(b) An assignment, transfer, or subrogation described in subsection (a) of this section:

(1) Is not a disposition of collateral under section 4-9-610; and

(2) Relieves the secured party of further duties under this article.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 4-9-504 (5) as it existed prior to 2001.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-504(5).

2. Scope of This Section. Under this section, assignments of secured obligations and other transactions (regardless of form) that function like assignments of secured obligations are not dispositions to which Part 6 applies. Rather, they constitute assignments of rights and (occasionally) delegations of duties. Application of this section may require an investigation into the agreement of the parties, which may not be reflected in the words of the repurchase agreement (e.g., when the agreement requires a recourse party to "purchase the collateral" but contemplates that the purchaser will then conduct an Article 9 foreclosure disposition).

This section, like former Section 9-504(5), does not constitute a general and comprehensive rule for allocating rights and duties upon assignment of a secured obligation. Rather, it applies only in situations involving a secondary obligor described in subsection (a). In other contexts, the agreement of the parties and applicable law other than Article 9 determine whether the assignment imposes upon the assignee any duty to the debtor and whether the assignor retains its duties to the debtor after the assignment.

Subsection (a)(1) applies when there has been an assignment of an obligation that is secured at the time it is assigned. Thus, if a secondary obligor acquires the collateral at a disposition under Section 9-610 and simultaneously or subsequently discharges the unsecured deficiency claim, subsection (a)(1) is not implicated. Similarly, subsection (a)(3) applies only when the secondary obligor is subrogated to the secured party's rights with respect to collateral. Thus, this subsection will not be implicated if a secondary obligor discharges the debtor's unsecured obligation for a post-disposition deficiency. Similarly, if the secured party disposes of some of the collateral and the secondary obligor thereafter discharges the remaining obligation, subsection (a) applies only with respect to rights and duties concerning the remaining collateral, and, under subsection (b), the subrogation is not a disposition of the remaining collateral.

As discussed more fully in Comment 3, a secondary obligor may receive a transfer of collateral in a disposition under Section 9-610 in exchange for a payment that is applied against the secured obligation. However, a secondary obligor who pays and receives a transfer of collateral does not necessarily become subrogated to the rights of the secured party as contemplated by subsection (a)(3). Only to the extent the secondary obligor makes a payment in satisfaction of its secondary obligation would it become subrogated. To the extent its payment constitutes the price of the collateral in a Section 9-610 disposition by the secured party, the secondary obligor would not be subrogated. Thus, if the amount paid by the secondary obligor for the collateral in a Section 9-610 disposition is itself insufficient to discharge the secured obligation, but the secondary obligor makes an additional payment that satisfies the remaining balance, the secondary obligor would be subrogated to the secured party's deficiency claim. However, the duties of the secured party as such would have come to an end with respect to that collateral. In some situations the capacity in which the payment is made may be unclear. Accordingly, the parties should in their relationship provide clear evidence of the nature and circumstances of the payment by the secondary obligor.

3. Transfer of Collateral to Secondary Obligor. It is possible for a secured party to transfer collateral to a secondary obligor in a transaction that is a disposition under Section 9-610 and that establishes a surplus or deficiency under Section 9-615. Indeed, this Article includes a special rule, in Section 9-615(f), for establishing a deficiency in the case of some dispositions to, inter alia, secondary obligors. This Article rejects the view, which some may have ascribed to former Section 9-504(5), that a transfer of collateral to a recourse party can never constitute a disposition of collateral which discharges a security interest. Inasmuch as a secured party could itself buy collateral at its own public sale, it makes no sense to prohibit a recourse party ever from buying at the sale.

4. Timing and Scope of Obligations. Under subsection (a), a recourse party acquires rights and incurs obligations only "after" one of the specified circumstances occurs. This makes clear that when a successor assignee, transferee, or subrogee becomes obligated it does not assume any liability for earlier actions or inactions of the secured party whom it has succeeded unless it agrees to do so. Once the successor becomes obligated, however, it is responsible for complying with the secured party's duties thereafter. For example, if the successor is in possession of collateral, then it has the duties specified in Section 9-207.

Under subsection (b), the same event (assignment, transfer, or subrogation) that gives rise to rights to, and imposes obligations on, a successor relieves its predecessor of any further duties under this Article. For example, if the security interest is enforced after the secured obligation is assigned, the assignee but not the assignor has the duty to comply with this Part. Similarly, the assignment does not excuse the assignor from liability for failure to comply with duties that arose before the event or impose liability on the assignee for the assignor's failure to comply.

4-9-619. Transfer of record or legal title. (a) In this section, "transfer statement" means a record authenticated by a secured party stating:

(1) That the debtor has defaulted in connection with an obligation secured by specified collateral;

(2) That the secured party has exercised its post-default remedies with respect to the collateral;

(3) That, by reason of the exercise, a transferee has acquired the rights of the debtor in the collateral; and

(4) The name and mailing address of the secured party, debtor, and transferee.

(b) A transfer statement entitles the transferee to the transfer of record of all rights of the debtor in the collateral specified in the statement in any official filing, recording, registration, or certificate-of-title system covering the collateral. If a transfer statement is presented with the applicable fee and request form to the official or office responsible for maintaining the system, the official or office shall:

(1) Accept the transfer statement;

(2) Promptly amend its records to reflect the transfer; and

(3) If applicable, issue a new appropriate certificate of title in the name of the transferee.

(c) A transfer of the record or legal title to collateral to a secured party under subsection (b) of this section or otherwise is not of itself a disposition of collateral under this article and does not of itself relieve the secured party of its duties under this article.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Transfer of Record or Legal Title. Potential buyers of collateral that is covered by a certificate of title (e.g., an automobile) or is subject to a registration system (e.g., a copyright) typically require as a condition of their purchase that the certificate or registry reflect their ownership. In many cases, this condition can be met only with the consent of the record owner. If the record owner is the debtor and, as may be the case after the default, the debtor refuses to cooperate, the secured party may have great difficulty disposing of the collateral.

Subsection (b) provides a simple mechanism for obtaining record or legal title, for use primarily when other law does not provide one. Of course, use of this mechanism will not be effective to clear title to the extent that subsection (b) is preempted by federal law. Subsection (b) contemplates a transfer of record or legal title to a third party, following a secured party's exercise of its disposition or acceptance remedies under this Part, as well as a transfer by a debtor to a secured party prior to the secured party's exercise of those remedies. Under subsection (c), a transfer of record or legal title (under subsection (b) or under other law) to a secured party prior to the exercise of those remedies merely puts the secured party in a position to pass legal or record title to a transferee at foreclosure. A secured party who has obtained record or legal title retains its duties with respect to enforcement of its security interest, and the debtor retains its rights as well.

3. Title-Clearing Systems Under Other Law. Applicable non-UCC law (e.g., a certificate-of-title statute, federal registry rules, or the like) may provide a means by which the secured party may obtain or transfer record or legal title for the purpose of a disposition of the property under this Article. The mechanism provided by this section is in addition to any title-clearing provision under law other than this Article.

4-9-620. Acceptance of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of obligation - compulsory disposition of collateral. (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (g) of this section, a secured party may accept collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures only if:

(1) The debtor consents to the acceptance under subsection (c) of this section;

(2) The secured party does not receive, within the time set forth in subsection (d) of this section, a notification of objection to the proposal authenticated by:

(A) A person to which the secured party was required to send a proposal under section 4-9-621; or

(B) Any other person, other than the debtor, holding an interest in the collateral subordinate to the security interest that is the subject of the proposal;

(3) If the collateral is consumer goods, the collateral is not in the possession of the debtor when the debtor consents to the acceptance; and

(4) Subsection (e) of this section does not require the secured party to dispose of the collateral or the debtor waives the requirement pursuant to section 4-9-624.

(b) Reserved.

(c) For purposes of this section:

(1) A debtor consents to an acceptance of collateral in partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures only if the debtor agrees to the terms of the acceptance in a record authenticated after default; and

(2) A debtor consents to an acceptance of collateral in full satisfaction of the obligation it secures only if the debtor agrees to the terms of the acceptance in a record authenticated after default or the secured party:

(A) Sends to the debtor after default a proposal that is unconditional or subject only to a condition that collateral not in the possession of the secured party be preserved or maintained;

(B) In the proposal, proposes to accept collateral in full satisfaction of the obligation it secures; and

(C) Does not receive a notification of objection authenticated by the debtor within twenty days after the proposal is sent.

(d) To be effective under paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this section, a notification of objection must be received by the secured party:

(1) In the case of a person to which the proposal was sent pursuant to section 4-9-621, within twenty days after notification was sent to that person; and

(2) In other cases:

(A) Within twenty days after the last notification was sent pursuant to section 4-9-621; or

(B) If a notification was not sent, before the debtor consents to the acceptance under subsection (c) of this section.

(e) A secured party that has taken possession of collateral shall dispose of the collateral pursuant to section 4-9-610 within the time specified in subsection (f) of this section if:

(1) Sixty percent of the cash price has been paid in the case of a purchase-money security interest in consumer goods; or

(2) Sixty percent of the principal amount of the obligation secured has been paid in the case of a non-purchase-money security interest in consumer goods.

(f) To comply with subsection (e) of this section, the secured party shall dispose of the collateral:

(1) Within ninety days after taking possession; or

(2) Within any longer period to which the debtor and all secondary obligors have agreed in an agreement to that effect entered into and authenticated after default.

(g) In a consumer transaction, a secured party may not accept collateral in partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-505.

2. Overview. This section and the two sections following deal with strict foreclosure, a procedure by which the secured party acquires the debtor's interest in the collateral without the need for a sale or other disposition under Section 9-610. Although these provisions derive from former Section 9-505, they have been entirely reorganized and substantially rewritten. The more straightforward approach taken in this Article eliminates the fiction that the secured party always will present a "proposal" for the retention of collateral and the debtor will have a fixed period to respond. By eliminating the need (but preserving the possibility) for proceeding in that fashion, this section eliminates much of the awkwardness of former Section 9-505. It reflects the belief that strict foreclosures should be encouraged and often will produce better results than a disposition for all concerned.

Subsection (a) sets forth the conditions necessary to an effective acceptance (formerly, retention) of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the secured obligation. Section 9-621 requires in addition that a secured party who wishes to proceed under this section notify certain other persons who have or claim to have an interest in the collateral. Unlike the failure to meet the conditions in subsection (a), under Section 9-622(b) the failure to comply with the notification requirement of Section 9-621 does not render the acceptance of collateral ineffective. Rather, the acceptance can take effect notwithstanding the secured party's noncompliance. A person to whom the required notice was not sent has the right to recover damages under Section 9-625(b). Section 9-622(a) sets forth the effect of an acceptance of collateral.

3. Conditions to Effective Acceptance. Subsection (a) contains the conditions necessary to the effectiveness of an acceptance of collateral. Subsection (a)(1) requires the debtor's consent. Under subsections (c)(1) and (c)(2), the debtor may consent by agreeing to the acceptance in writing after default. Subsection (c)(2) contains an alternative method by which to satisfy the debtor's-consent condition in subsection (a)(1). It follows the proposal-and-objection model found in former Section 9-505: The debtor consents if the secured party sends a proposal to the debtor and does not receive an objection within 20 days. Under subsection (c)(1), however, that silence is not deemed to be consent with respect to acceptances in partial satisfaction. Thus, a secured party who wishes to conduct a "partial strict foreclosure" must obtain the debtor's agreement in a record authenticated after default. In all other respects, the conditions necessary to an effective partial strict foreclosure are the same as those governing acceptance of collateral in full satisfaction. (But see subsection (g), prohibiting partial strict foreclosure of a security interest in consumer transactions.)

The time when a debtor consents to a strict foreclosure is significant in several circumstances under this section and the following one. See Sections 9-620(a)(1), (d)(2), 9-621(a)(1), (a)(2), (a)(3). For purposes of determining the time of consent, a debtor's conditional consent constitutes consent.

Subsection (a)(2) contains the second condition to the effectiveness of an acceptance under this section the absence of a timely objection from a person holding a junior interest in the collateral or from a secondary obligor. Any junior party secured party or lienholder is entitled to lodge an objection to a proposal, even if that person was not entitled to notification under Section 9-621. Subsection (d), discussed below, indicates when an objection is timely.

Subsections (a)(3) and (a)(4) contain special rules for transactions in which consumers are involved. See Comment 12.

4. Proposals. Section 9-102 defines the term "proposal." It is necessary to send a "proposal" to the debtor only if the debtor does not agree to an acceptance in an authenticated record as described in subsection (c)(1) or (c)(2). Section 9-621(a) determines whether it is necessary to send a proposal to third parties. A proposal need not take any particular form as long as it sets forth the terms under which the secured party is willing to accept collateral in satisfaction. A proposal to accept collateral should specify the amount (or a means of calculating the amount, such as by including a per diem accrual figure) of the secured obligations to be satisfied, state the conditions (if any) under which the proposal may be revoked, and describe any other applicable conditions. Note, however, that a conditional proposal generally requires the debtor's agreement in order to take effect. See subsection (c).

5. Secured Party's Agreement; No "Constructive" Strict Foreclosure. The conditions of subsection (a) relate to actual or implied consent by the debtor and any secondary obligor or holder of a junior security interest or lien. To ensure that the debtor cannot unilaterally cause an acceptance of collateral, subsection (b) provides that compliance with these conditions is necessary but not sufficient to cause an acceptance of collateral. Rather, under subsection (b), acceptance does not occur unless, in addition, the secured party consents to the acceptance in an authenticated record or sends to the debtor a proposal. For this reason, a mere delay in collection or disposition of collateral does not constitute a "constructive" strict foreclosure. Instead, delay is a factor relating to whether the secured party acted in a commercially reasonable manner for purposes of Section 9-607 or 9-610. A debtor's voluntary surrender of collateral to a secured party and the secured party's acceptance of possession of the collateral does not, of itself, necessarily raise an implication that the secured party intends or is proposing to accept the collateral in satisfaction of the secured obligation under this section.

6. When Acceptance Occurs. This section does not impose any formalities or identify any steps that a secured party must take in order to accept collateral once the conditions of subsections (a) and (b) have been met. Absent facts or circumstances indicating a contrary intention, the fact that the conditions have been met provides a sufficient indication that the secured party has accepted the collateral on the terms to which the secured party has consented or proposed and the debtor has consented or failed to object. Following a proposal, acceptance of the collateral normally is automatic upon the secured party's becoming bound and the time for objection passing. As a matter of good business practice, an enforcing secured party may wish to memorialize its acceptance following a proposal, such as by notifying the debtor that the strict foreclosure is effective or by placing a written record to that effect in its files. The secured party's agreement to accept collateral is self-executing and cannot be breached. The secured party is bound by its agreement to accept collateral and by any proposal to which the debtor consents.

7. No Possession Requirement. This section eliminates the requirement in former Section 9-505 that the secured party be "in possession" of collateral. It clarifies that intangible collateral, which cannot be possessed, may be subject to a strict foreclosure under this section. However, under subsection (a)(3), if the collateral is consumer goods, acceptance does not occur unless the debtor is not in possession.

8. When Objection Timely. Subsection (d) explains when an objection is timely and thus prevents an acceptance of collateral from taking effect. An objection by a person to which notification was sent under Section 9-621 is effective if it is received by the secured party within 20 days from the date the notification was sent to that person. Other objecting parties (i.e., third parties who are not entitled to notification) may object at any time within 20 days after the last notification is sent under Section 9-621. If no such notification is sent, third parties must object before the debtor agrees to the acceptance in writing or is deemed to have consented by silence. The former may occur any time after default, and the latter requires a 20-day waiting period. See subsection (c).

9. Applicability of Other Law. This section does not purport to regulate all aspects of the transaction by which a secured party may become the owner of collateral previously owned by the debtor. For example, a secured party's acceptance of a motor vehicle in satisfaction of secured obligations may require compliance with the applicable motor vehicle certificate-of-title law. State legislatures should conform those laws so that they mesh well with this section and Section 9-610, and courts should construe those laws and this section harmoniously. A secured party's acceptance of collateral in the possession of the debtor also may implicate statutes dealing with a seller's retention of possession of goods sold.

10. Accounts, Chattel Paper, Payment Intangibles, and Promissory Notes. If the collateral is accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes, then a secured party's acceptance of the collateral in satisfaction of secured obligations would constitute a sale to the secured party. That sale normally would give rise to a new security interest (the ownership interest) under Sections 1-201(37) and 9-109. In the case of accounts and chattel paper, the new security interest would remain perfected by a filing that was effective to perfect the secured party's original security interest. In the case of payment intangibles or promissory notes, the security interest would be perfected when it attaches. See Section 9-309. However, the procedures for acceptance of collateral under this section satisfy all necessary formalities and a new security agreement authenticated by the debtor would not be necessary.

11. Role of Good Faith. Section 1-203 imposes an obligation of good faith on a secured party's enforcement under this Article. This obligation may not be disclaimed by agreement. See Section 1-102. Thus, a proposal and acceptance made under this section in bad faith would not be effective. For example, a secured party's proposal to accept marketable securities worth $1,000 in full satisfaction of indebtedness in the amount of $100, made in the hopes that the debtor might inadvertently fail to object, would be made in bad faith. On the other hand, in the normal case proposals and acceptances should be not second-guessed on the basis of the "value" of the collateral involved. Disputes about valuation or even a clear excess of collateral value over the amount of obligations satisfied do not necessarily demonstrate the absence of good faith.

Note: "1-203" and "1-102." referenced in the first two sentences will be replaced with "1-304" and "1-302." respectively, effective July 1, 2013.

12. Special Rules in Consumer Cases. Subsection (e) imposes an obligation on the secured party to dispose of consumer goods under certain circumstances. Subsection (f) explains when a disposition that is required under subsection (e) is timely. An effective acceptance of collateral cannot occur if subsection (e) requires a disposition unless the debtor waives this requirement pursuant to Section 9-624(b). Moreover, a secured party who takes possession of collateral and unreasonably delays disposition violates subsection (e), if applicable, and may also violate Section 9-610 or other provisions of this Part. Subsection (e) eliminates as superfluous the express statutory reference to "conversion" found in former Section 9-505. Remedies available under other law, including conversion, remain available under this Article in appropriate cases. See Sections 1-103, 1-106.

Note:"1-106." will be replaced with "1-305." effective July 1, 2013.

Subsection (g) prohibits the secured party in consumer transactions from accepting collateral in partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures. If a secured party attempts an acceptance in partial satisfaction in a consumer transaction, the attempted acceptance is void.

Interest ripens upon retention of collateral following default. When a borrower defaults on its debt to the bank, on or before the filing in bankruptcy, the bank's interest ripens into an interest in real property by virtue of its election to retain the collateral and its compliance with this section, following the bankruptcy court's entry of the abandonment order. Swofford v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 628 P.2d 184 (Colo. App. 1981).

Article 9 does not determine location of title after default. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 619 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1980).

Timeliness of notice. For notice under subsection (2) to be effective, creditor's notification to debtor of his intent to retain collateral must be within sufficient time to allow commercially reasonable sale in event debtor objects. Vogel v. Carolina Intern., Inc., 711 P.2d 708 (Colo. App. 1985).

To constitute notice under this section, the secured party must act in good faith and must take steps a reasonable person would take to effect good faith notice. Vogel v. Carolina Intern., Inc., 711 P.2d 708 (Colo. App. 1985).

A secured party who retains repossessed property for an excessive period of time without compliance with the statutory provisions may not profit by the failure to furnish the requisite notice. Vogel v. Carolina Intern., Inc., 711 P.2d 708 (Colo. App. 1985).

4-9-621. Notification of proposal to accept collateral. (a) A secured party that desires to accept collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures shall send its proposal to:

(1) Any person from which the secured party has received, before the debtor consented to the acceptance, an authenticated notification of a claim of an interest in the collateral;

(2) Any other secured party or lienholder that, ten days before the debtor consented to the acceptance, held a security interest in or other lien on the collateral perfected by the filing of a financing statement that:

(A) Identified the collateral;

(B) Was indexed under the debtor's name as of that date; and

(C) Was filed in the office or offices in which to file a financing statement against the debtor covering the collateral as of that date; and

(3) Any other secured party that, ten days before the debtor consented to the acceptance, held a security interest in the collateral perfected by compliance with a statute, regulation, or treaty described in section 4-9-311 (a).

(b) A secured party that desires to accept collateral in partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures shall send its proposal to any secondary obligor in addition to the persons described in subsection (a) of this section.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-505.

2. Notification Requirement. Subsection (a) specifies three classes of competing claimants to whom the secured party must send notification of its proposal: (i) those who notify the secured party that they claim an interest in the collateral, (ii) holders of certain security interests and liens who have filed against the debtor, and (iii) holders of certain security interests who have perfected by compliance with a statute (including a certificate-of-title statute), regulation, or treaty described in Section 9-311(a). With regard to (ii), see Section 9-611, Comment 4. Subsection (b) also requires notification to any secondary obligor if the proposal is for acceptance in partial satisfaction.

Unlike Section 9-611, this section contains no "safe harbor," which excuses an enforcing secured party from notifying certain secured parties and other lienholders. This is because, unlike Section 9-610, which requires that a disposition of collateral be commercially reasonable, Section 9-620 permits the debtor and secured party to set the amount of credit the debtor will receive for the collateral subject only to the requirement of good faith. An effective acceptance discharges subordinate security interests and other subordinate liens. See Section 9-622. If collateral is subject to several liens securing debts much larger than the value of the collateral, the debtor may be disinclined to refrain from consenting to an acceptance by the holder of the senior security interest, even though, had the debtor objected and the senior disposed of the collateral under Section 9-610, the collateral may have yielded more than enough to satisfy the senior security interest (but not enough to satisfy all the liens). Accordingly, this section imposes upon the enforcing secured party the risk of the filing office's errors and delay. The holder of a security interest who is entitled to notification under this section but does not receive it has the right to recover under Section 9-625(b) any loss resulting from the enforcing secured party's noncompliance with this section.

Note: This version of this paragraph is effective until July 1, 2013.

4-9-622. Effect of acceptance of collateral. (a) A secured party's acceptance of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures:

(1) Discharges the obligation to the extent consented to by the debtor;

(2) Transfers to the secured party all of a debtor's rights in the collateral;

(3) Discharges the security interest or agricultural lien that is the subject of the debtor's consent and any subordinate security interest or other subordinate lien; and

(4) Terminates any other subordinate interest.

(b) A subordinate interest is discharged or terminated under subsection (a) of this section, even if the secured party fails to comply with this article.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Effect of Acceptance. Subsection (a) specifies the effect of an acceptance of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the secured obligation. The acceptance to which it refers is an effective acceptance. If a purported acceptance is ineffective under Section 9-620, e.g., because the secured party receives a timely objection from a person entitled to notification, then neither this subsection nor subsection (b) applies. Paragraph (1) expresses the fundamental consequence of accepting collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the secured obligation the obligation is discharged to the extent consented to by the debtor. Unless otherwise agreed, the obligor remains liable for any deficiency. Paragraphs (2) through (4) indicate the effects of an acceptance on various property rights and interests. Paragraph (2) follows Section 9-617(a) in providing that the secured party acquires "all of a debtor's rights in the collateral." Under paragraph (3), the effect of strict foreclosure on holders of junior security interests and other liens is the same regardless of whether the collateral is accepted in full or partial satisfaction of the secured obligation: all junior encumbrances are discharged. Paragraph (4) provides for the termination of other subordinate interests.

Subsection (b) makes clear that subordinate interests are discharged under subsection (a) regardless of whether the secured party complies with this Article. Thus, subordinate interests are discharged regardless of whether a proposal was required to be sent or, if required, was sent. However, a secured party's failure to send a proposal or otherwise to comply with this Article may subject the secured party to liability under Section 9-625.

4-9-623. Right to redeem collateral. (a) A debtor, any secondary obligor, or any other secured party or lienholder may redeem collateral.

(b) To redeem collateral, a person shall tender:

(1) Fulfillment of all obligations secured by the collateral; and

(2) The reasonable expenses and reasonable attorney's fees described in section 4-9-615 (a) (1).

(c) A redemption may occur at any time before a secured party:

(1) Has collected collateral under section 4-9-607;

(2) Has disposed of collateral or entered into a contract for its disposition under section 4-9-610; or

(3) Has accepted collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures under section 4-9-622.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 4-9-506 as it existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado added the word "reasonable" before the word "attorney's" in subsection (b)(2).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-506.

2. Redemption Right. Under this section, as under former Section 9-506, the debtor or another secured party may redeem collateral as long as the secured party has not collected (Section 9-607), disposed of or contracted for the disposition of (Section 9-610), or accepted (Section 9-620) the collateral. Although this section generally follows former Section 9-506, it extends the right of redemption to holders of nonconsensual liens. To redeem the collateral a person must tender fulfillment of all obligations secured, plus certain expenses. If the entire balance of a secured obligation has been accelerated, it would be necessary to tender the entire balance. A tender of fulfillment obviously means more than a new promise to perform an existing promise. It requires payment in full of all monetary obligations then due and performance in full of all other obligations then matured. If unmatured secured obligations remain, the security interest continues to secure them (i.e., as if there had been no default).

3. Redemption of Remaining Collateral Following Partial Enforcement. Under Section 9-610 a secured party may make successive dispositions of portions of its collateral. These dispositions would not affect the debtor's, another secured party's, or a lienholder's right to redeem the remaining collateral.

4. Effect of "Repledging." Section 9-207 generally permits a secured party having possession or control of collateral to create a security interest in the collateral. As explained in the Comments to that section, the debtor's right (as opposed to its practical ability) to redeem collateral is not affected by, and does not affect, the priority of a security interest created by the debtor's secured party.

4-9-624. Waiver. (a) A debtor or secondary obligor may waive the right to notification of disposition of collateral under section 4-9-611 only by an agreement to that effect entered into and authenticated after default.

(b) A debtor may waive the right to require disposition of collateral under section 4-9-620 (e) only by an agreement to that effect entered into and authenticated after default.

(c) Except in a consumer-goods transaction, a debtor or secondary obligor may waive the right to redeem collateral under section 4-9-623. Any such waiver must be by an agreement to that effect entered into and authenticated after default.

4-9-625. Remedies for secured party's failure to comply with article. (a) If it is established that a secured party is not proceeding in accordance with this article, a court may order or restrain collection, enforcement, or disposition of collateral on appropriate terms and conditions.

(b) Subject to subsections (c), (d), and (f) of this section, a person is liable for damages in the amount of any loss caused by a failure to comply with this article. Loss caused by a failure to comply may include loss resulting from the debtor's inability to obtain, or increased costs of, alternative financing.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-628:

(1) A person that, at the time of the failure, was a debtor, was an obligor, or held a security interest in or other lien on the collateral may recover damages under subsection (b) of this section for its loss; and

(2) If the collateral is consumer goods, a person that was a debtor or secondary obligor at the time a secured party failed to comply with this part 6 may recover for that failure in any event an amount not less than the credit service charge plus ten percent of the principal amount of the obligation or the time-price differential plus ten percent of the cash price.

(d) A debtor whose deficiency is eliminated under section 4-9-626 may recover damages for the loss of any surplus. However, a debtor or secondary obligor whose deficiency is eliminated or reduced under section 4-9-626 may not otherwise recover under subsection (b) of this section for noncompliance with the provisions of this part 6 relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance.

(e) In addition to any damages recoverable under subsection (b) of this section, the debtor, consumer obligor, or person named as a debtor in a filed record, as applicable, may recover five hundred dollars in each case from a person that:

(1) Fails to comply with section 4-9-208;

(2) Fails to comply with section 4-9-209;

(3) Files a record that the person is not entitled to file under section 4-9-509 (a);

(4) Fails to cause the secured party of record to file or send a termination statement as required by section 4-9-513 (a) or (c);

(5) Fails to comply with section 4-9-616 (b) (1) and whose failure is part of a pattern, or consistent with a practice, of noncompliance; or

(6) Fails to comply with section 4-9-616 (b) (2).

(f) A debtor or consumer obligor may recover damages under subsection (b) of this section and, in addition, five hundred dollars in each case from a person that, without reasonable cause, fails to comply with a request under section 4-9-210. A recipient of a request under section 4-9-210 which never claimed an interest in the collateral or obligations that are the subject of a request under that section has a reasonable excuse for failure to comply with the request within the meaning of this subsection (f).

(g) If a secured party fails to comply with a request regarding a list of collateral or a statement of account under section 4-9-210, the secured party may claim a security interest only as shown in the list or statement included in the request as against a person that is reasonably misled by the failure.

(h) If a person in the course of taking possession of collateral by self-help breaches the peace as defined in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (h) of section 4-9-601 or uses uniformed law enforcement officers without the benefit of judicial process, that person shall be liable to the debtor for one thousand dollars as a penalty.

(i) The prevailing party in any legal action, other than a class action, under this section may also recover reasonable attorney's fees and reasonable legal expenses; except that as to consumer transactions, such attorney's fees for any party shall not exceed fifteen percent of the unpaid debt or such additional fee as may be directed by the court.

(j) The number "five hundred dollars" as provided in subsections (e) and (f) of this section shall be increased on July 1, 2004, and on July 1 of each third succeeding year in accordance with any aggregate increase in the United States department of labor bureau of labor statistics consumer price index for all urban consumers for the Denver-Boulder consolidated metropolitan statistical area for the preceding three calendar years as reflected in the final consumer price index for the Denver-Boulder consolidated metropolitan statistical area for the calendar year immediately preceding the calendar year in which the adjustment is to be made; except that:

(1) Such dollar amount shall not be increased if such final consumer price index does not reflect an aggregate increase in the consumer price index for the preceding three calendar years and shall be decreased if such final consumer price index reflects an aggregate decrease in the consumer price index for the preceding three calendar years.

(2) The dollar amount as adjusted pursuant to this subsection (j) shall be rounded to the nearest ten dollars.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 4-9-507 as it existed prior to 2001.

(2) Colorado legislative change: Colorado did not adopt the phrase "with a request under section 4-9-210" after the word "comply" in the second sentence of subsection (b), added the phrase "list or" in subsection (g), and added subsections (h) through (j).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-507.

2. Remedies for Noncompliance; Scope. Subsections (a) and (b) provide the basic remedies afforded to those aggrieved by a secured party's failure to comply with this Article. Like all provisions that create liability, they are subject to Section 9-628, which should be read in conjunction with Section 9-605. The principal limitations under this Part on a secured party's right to enforce its security interest against collateral are the requirements that it proceed in good faith (Section 1-203), in a commercially reasonable manner (Sections 9-607 and 9-610), and, in most cases, with reasonable notification (Sections 9-611 through 9-614). Following former Section 9-507, under subsection (a) an aggrieved person may seek injunctive relief, and under subsection (b) the person may recover damages for losses caused by noncompliance. Unlike former Section 9-507, however, subsections (a) and (b) are not limited to noncompliance with provisions of this Part of Article 9. Rather, they apply to noncompliance with any provision of this Article. The change makes this section applicable to noncompliance with Sections 9-207 (duties of secured party in possession of collateral), 9-208 (duties of secured party having control over deposit account), 9-209 (duties of secured party if account debtor has been notified of an assignment), 9-210 (duty to comply with request for accounting, etc.), 9-509(a) (duty to refrain from filing unauthorized financing statement), and 9-513(a) or (c) (duty to provide termination statement). Subsection (a) also modifies the first sentence of former Section 9-507(1) by adding the references to "collection" and "enforcement." Subsection (c)(2), which gives a minimum damage recovery in consumer-goods transactions, applies only to noncompliance with the provisions of this Part.

3. Damages for Noncompliance with This Article. Subsection (b) sets forth the basic remedy for failure to comply with the requirements of this Article: a damage recovery in the amount of loss caused by the noncompliance. Subsection (c) identifies who may recover under subsection (b). It affords a remedy to any aggrieved person who is a debtor or obligor. However, a principal obligor who is not a debtor may recover damages only for noncompliance with Section 9-616, inasmuch as none of the other rights and duties in this Article run in favor of such a principal obligor. Such a principal obligor could not suffer any loss or damage on account of noncompliance with rights or duties of which it is not a beneficiary. Subsection (c) also affords a remedy to an aggrieved person who holds a competing security interest or other lien, regardless of whether the aggrieved person is entitled to notification under Part 6. The remedy is available even to holders of senior security interests and other liens. The exercise of this remedy is subject to the normal rules of pleading and proof. A person who has delegated the duties of a secured party but who remains obligated to perform them is liable under this subsection. The last sentence of subsection (d) eliminates the possibility of double recovery or other over-compensation arising out of a reduction or elimination of a deficiency under Section 9-626, based on noncompliance with the provisions of this Part relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance. Assuming no double recovery, a debtor whose deficiency is eliminated under Section 9-626 may pursue a claim for a surplus. Because Section 9-626 does not apply to consumer transactions, the statute is silent as to whether a double recovery or other over-compensation is possible in a consumer transaction.

Damages for violation of the requirements of this Article, including Section 9-609, are those reasonably calculated to put an eligible claimant in the position that it would have occupied had no violation occurred. See Section 1-106. Subsection (b) supports the recovery of actual damages for committing a breach of the peace in violation of Section 9-609, and principles of tort law supplement this subsection. See Section 1-103. However, to the extent that damages in tort compensate the debtor for the same loss dealt with by this Article, the debtor should be entitled to only one recovery.

4. Minimum Damages in Consumer-Goods Transactions. Subsection (c)(2) provides a minimum, statutory, damage recovery for a debtor and secondary obligor in a consumer-goods transaction. It is patterned on former Section 9-507(1) and is designed to ensure that every noncompliance with the requirements of Part 6 in a consumer-goods transaction results in liability, regardless of any injury that may have resulted. Subsection (c)(2) leaves the treatment of statutory damages as it was under former Article 9. A secured party is not liable for statutory damages under this subsection more than once with respect to any one secured obligation (see Section 9-628(e)), nor is a secured party liable under this subsection for failure to comply with Section 9-616 (see Section 9-628(d)).

Following former Section 9-507(1), this Article does not include a definition or explanation of the terms "credit service charge," "principal amount," "time-price differential," or "cash price," as used in subsection (c)(2). It leaves their construction and application to the court, taking into account the subsection's purpose of providing a minimum recovery in consumer-goods transactions.

5. Supplemental Damages. Subsections (e) and (f) provide damages that supplement the recovery, if any, under subsection (b). Subsection (e) imposes an additional $500 liability upon a person who fails to comply with the provisions specified in that subsection, and subsection (f) imposes like damages on a person who, without reasonable excuse, fails to comply with a request for an accounting or a request regarding a list of collateral or statement of account under Section 9-210. However, under subsection (f), a person has a reasonable excuse for the failure if the person never claimed an interest in the collateral or obligations that were the subject of the request.

6. Estoppel. Subsection (g) limits the extent to which a secured party who fails to comply with a request regarding a list of collateral or statement of account may claim a security interest.

Annotator's note. Since § 4-9-625 is similar to § 4-9-507 as it existed prior to the 2001 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Consequential damages are not recoverable under former § 4-9-507 (1); therefore, plaintiff is not entitled to damages for alleged lost profits. Proactive Techs., Inc. v. Denver Place Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 141 P.3d 959 (Colo. App. 2006).

II. SECURED PARTY'S LIABILITY.

Law reviews. For comment, "Remedies for Failure to Notify Debtor of Disposition of Repossessed Collateral Under the U.C.C.", see 44 U. Colo. L. Rev. 221 (1972).

This section establishes the right of a debtor to recover from the secured party any loss sustained where a secured party fails to give notice of sale to the debtor as required by § 4-9-504(3). Cmty. Mgt. Ass'n of Colo. Springs, Inc. v. Tousley, 32 Colo. App. 33, 505 P.2d 1314 (1973).

If the collateral is consumer goods, the minimum recovery by the debtors would be the time price differential plus ten percent of the cash price. Cmty. Mgt. Ass'n of Colo. Springs, Inc. v. Tousley, 32 Colo. App. 33, 505 P.2d 1314 (1973).

Subsection (1) penalty appropriate for violation of § 5-5-112. An appropriate penalty for the violation of § 5-5-112 is the penalty imposed by subsection (1). D.E.B. Adjustment Co. v. Cawthorne, 623 P.2d 82 (Colo. App. 1981).

III. MARKET VALUE.

Evidence of market value. Where sale is conducted in accordance with the requirements of the code, the amount received at the sale of collateral is evidence of the market value, but where sale is not conducted in compliance with the law, the amount received is not evidence of the market value of the collateral, and the secured party has the burden of proving the market value by other evidence. Cmty. Mgt. Ass'n of Colo. Springs, Inc. v. Tousley, 32 Colo. App. 33, 505 P.2d 1314 (1973).

A sale price which is less than the fair market value or the appraised value is not dispositive of commercial unreasonableness. Nor does a sale price that is less than what the debtor expected necessarily constitute commercial unreasonableness. Flexisystems, Inc. v. Am. Standards Testing Bureau, Inc., 847 P.2d 207 (Colo. App. 1992).

4-9-626. Action in which deficiency or surplus is in issue. (a) In an action arising from a transaction, other than a consumer transaction, in which the amount of a deficiency or surplus is in issue, the following rules apply:

(1) A secured party need not prove compliance with the provisions of this part 6 relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance unless the debtor or a secondary obligor places the secured party's compliance in issue.

(2) If the secured party's compliance is placed in issue, the secured party has the burden of establishing that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance was conducted in accordance with this part 6.

(3) Except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-628, if a secured party fails to prove that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance was conducted in accordance with the provisions of this part 6 relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance, the liability of a debtor or a secondary obligor for a deficiency is limited to an amount by which the sum of the secured obligation, reasonable expenses, and reasonable attorney's fees exceeds the greater of:

(A) The proceeds of the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance; or

(B) The amount of proceeds that would have been realized had the noncomplying secured party proceeded in accordance with the provisions of this part 6 relating to collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance.

(4) For purposes of subparagraph (B) of paragraph (3) of this subsection (a), the amount of proceeds that would have been realized is equal to the sum of the secured obligation, reasonable expenses, and reasonable attorney's fees unless the secured party proves that the amount is less than that sum.

(5) If a deficiency or surplus is calculated under section 4-9-615 (f), the debtor or obligor has the burden of establishing that the amount of proceeds of the disposition is significantly below the range of prices that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought.

(b) Subject to section 5-5-103, C.R.S., the limitation of the rules in subsection (a) of this section to transactions other than consumer transactions is intended to leave to the court the determination of the proper rules in consumer transactions. The court may not infer from that limitation the nature of the proper rule in consumer transactions and may continue to apply established approaches.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: Colorado added the word "reasonable" to subsections (a)(3) and (a)(4) and added the phrase "Subject to section 5-5-103, C.R.S.," to subsection (b).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Scope. The basic damage remedy under Section 9-625(b) is subject to the special rules in this section for transactions other than consumer transactions. This section addresses situations in which the amount of a deficiency or surplus is in issue, i.e., situations in which the secured party has collected, enforced, disposed of, or accepted the collateral. It contains special rules applicable to a determination of the amount of a deficiency or surplus. Because this section affects a person's liability for a deficiency, it is subject to Section 9-628, which should be read in conjunction with Section 9-605. The rules in this section apply only to noncompliance in connection with the "collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance" under Part 6. For other types of noncompliance with Part 6, the general liability rule of Section 9-625(b) recovery of actual damages applies. Consider, for example, a repossession that does not comply with Section 9-609 for want of a default. The debtor's remedy is under Section 9-625(b). In a proper case, the secured party also may be liable for conversion under non-UCC law. If the secured party thereafter disposed of the collateral, however, it would violate Section 9-610 at that time, and this section would apply.

3. Rebuttable Presumption Rule. Subsection (a) establishes the rebuttable presumption rule for transactions other than consumer transactions. Under paragraph (1), the secured party need not prove compliance with the relevant provisions of this Part as part of its prima facie case. If, however, the debtor or a secondary obligor raises the issue (in accordance with the forum's rules of pleading and practice), then the secured party bears the burden of proving that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance complied. In the event the secured party is unable to meet this burden, then paragraph (3) explains how to calculate the deficiency. Under this rebuttable presumption rule, the debtor or obligor is to be credited with the greater of the actual proceeds of the disposition or the proceeds that would have been realized had the secured party complied with the relevant provisions. If a deficiency remains, then the secured party is entitled to recover it. The references to "the secured obligation, expenses, and attorney's fees" in paragraphs (3) and (4) embrace the application rules in Sections 9-608(a) and 9-615(a).

Unless the secured party proves that compliance with the relevant provisions would have yielded a smaller amount, under paragraph (4) the amount that a complying collection, enforcement, or disposition would have yielded is deemed to be equal to the amount of the secured obligation, together with expenses and attorney's fees. Thus, the secured party may not recover any deficiency unless it meets this burden.

4. Consumer Transactions. Although subsection (a) adopts a version of the rebuttable presumption rule for transactions other than consumer transactions, with certain exceptions Part 6 does not specify the effect of a secured party's noncompliance in consumer transactions. (The exceptions are the provisions for the recovery of damages in Section 9-625.) Subsection (b) provides that the limitation of subsection (a) to transactions other than consumer transactions is intended to leave to the court the determination of the proper rules in consumer transactions. It also instructs the court not to draw any inference from the limitation as to the proper rules for consumer transactions and leaves the court free to continue to apply established approaches to those transactions.

Courts construing former Section 9-507 disagreed about the consequences of a secured party's failure to comply with the requirements of former Part 5. Three general approaches emerged. Some courts have held that a noncomplying secured party may not recover a deficiency (the "absolute bar" rule). A few courts held that the debtor can offset against a claim to a deficiency all damages recoverable under former Section 9-507 resulting from the secured party's noncompliance (the "offset" rule). A plurality of courts considering the issue held that the noncomplying secured party is barred from recovering a deficiency unless it overcomes a rebuttable presumption that compliance with former Part 5 would have yielded an amount sufficient to satisfy the secured debt. In addition to the nonuniformity resulting from court decisions, some States enacted special rules governing the availability of deficiencies.

5. Burden of Proof When Section 9-615(f) Applies. In a non-consumer transaction, subsection (a)(5) imposes upon a debtor or obligor the burden of proving that the proceeds of a disposition are so low that, under Section 9-615(f), the actual proceeds should not serve as the basis upon which a deficiency or surplus is calculated. Were the burden placed on the secured party, then debtors might be encouraged to challenge the price received in every disposition to the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor.

6. Delay in Applying This Section. There is an inevitable delay between the time a secured party engages in a noncomplying collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance and the time of a subsequent judicial determination that the secured party did not comply with Part 6. During the interim, the secured party, believing that the secured obligation is larger than it ultimately is determined to be, may continue to enforce its security interest in collateral. If some or all of the secured indebtedness ultimately is discharged under this section, a reasonable application of this section would impose liability on the secured party for the amount of any excess, unwarranted recoveries but would not make the enforcement efforts wrongful.

4-9-627. Determination of whether conduct was commercially reasonable. (a) The fact that a greater amount could have been obtained by a collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance at a different time or in a different method from that selected by the secured party is not of itself sufficient to preclude the secured party from establishing that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance was made in a commercially reasonable manner.

(b) A disposition of collateral is made in a commercially reasonable manner if the disposition is made:

(1) In the usual manner on any recognized market;

(2) At the price current in any recognized market at the time of the disposition; or

(3) Otherwise in conformity with reasonable commercial practices among dealers in the type of property that was the subject of the disposition.

(c) A collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance is commercially reasonable if it has been approved:

(1) In a judicial proceeding;

(2) By a bona fide creditors' committee;

(3) By a representative of creditors; or

(4) By an assignee for the benefit of creditors.

(d) Approval under subsection (c) of this section need not be obtained, and lack of approval does not mean that the collection, enforcement, disposition, or acceptance is not commercially reasonable.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. Former Section 9-507(2).

2. Relationship of Price to Commercial Reasonableness. Some observers have found the notion contained in subsection (a) (derived from former Section 9-507(2)) (the fact that a better price could have been obtained does not establish lack of commercial reasonableness) to be inconsistent with that found in Section 9-610(b) (derived from former Section 9-504(3) (every aspect of the disposition, including its terms, must be commercially reasonable). There is no such inconsistency. While not itself sufficient to establish a violation of this Part, a low price suggests that a court should scrutinize carefully all aspects of a disposition to ensure that each aspect was commercially reasonable.

The law long has grappled with the problem of dispositions of personal and real property which comply with applicable procedural requirements (e.g., advertising, notification to interested persons, etc.) but which yield a price that seems low. This Article addresses that issue in Section 9-615(f). That section applies only when the transferee is the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor. It contains a special rule for calculating a deficiency or surplus in a complying disposition that yields a price that is "significantly below the range of proceeds that a complying disposition to a person other than the secured party, a person related to the secured party, or a secondary obligor would have brought."

3. Determination of Commercial Reasonableness; Advance Approval. It is important to make clear the conduct and procedures that are commercially reasonable and to provide a secured party with the means of obtaining, by court order or negotiation with a creditors' committee or a representative of creditors, advance approval of a proposed method of enforcement as commercially reasonable. This section contains rules that assist in that determination and provides for advance approval in appropriate situations. However, none of the specific methods of disposition specified in subsection (b) is required or exclusive.

4. "Recognized Market." As in Sections 9-610(c) and 9-611(d), the concept of a "recognized market" in subsections (b)(1) and (2) is quite limited; it applies only to markets in which there are standardized price quotations for property that is essentially fungible, such as stock exchanges.

Annotator's note. Section 4-9-627 is similar to § 4-9-507 as it existed prior to the 2001 repeal and reenactment of this article. Relevant cases construing § 4-9-507 have been included in the annotations to § 4-9-625.

4-9-628. Nonliability and limitation on liability of secured party - liability of secondary obligor. (a) Unless a secured party knows that a person is a debtor or obligor, knows the identity of the person, and knows how to communicate with the person:

(1) The secured party is not liable to the person, or to a secured party or lienholder that has filed a financing statement against the person, for failure to comply with this article; and

(2) The secured party's failure to comply with this article does not affect the liability of the person for a deficiency.

(b) A secured party is not liable because of its status as secured party:

(1) To a person that is a debtor or obligor, unless the secured party knows:

(A) That the person is a debtor or obligor;

(B) The identity of the person; and

(C) How to communicate with the person; or

(2) To a secured party or lienholder that has filed a financing statement against a person, unless the secured party knows:

(A) That the person is a debtor; and

(B) The identity of the person.

(c) A secured party is not liable to any person, and a person's liability for a deficiency is not affected, because of any act or omission arising out of the secured party's reasonable belief that a transaction is not a consumer-goods transaction or a consumer transaction or that goods are not consumer goods, if the secured party's belief is based on its reasonable reliance on:

(1) A record authenticated by the debtor concerning the purpose for which collateral was to be used, acquired, or held, or indicating that collateral is not a consumer deposit account; or

(2) A record authenticated by the obligor concerning the purpose for which a secured obligation was incurred.

(d) (1) A secured party is not liable under section 4-9-625 (c) (2) for its failure to comply with section 4-9-616.

(2) Repealed.

(e) A secured party is not liable under section 4-9-625 (c) (2) more than once with respect to any one secured obligation.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: Colorado substituted the phrase "A record authenticated by the debtor" for the phrase "A debtor's representation" and added the phrase "or indicating that collateral is not a consumer deposit account" in subsection (c)(1), substituted the phrase "A record authenticated by the obligor" for the phrase "An obligor's representation" in subsection (c)(2), and did not adopt subsection (d) of the uniform act. The uniform act's subsection (e) states: "A secured party is not liable under section 4-9-625(c)(2) more than once with respect to any one secured obligation."

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Source. New.

2. Exculpatory Provisions. Subsections (a), (b), and (c) contain exculpatory provisions that should be read in conjunction with Section 9-605. Without this group of provisions, a secured party could incur liability to unknown persons and under circumstances that would not allow the secured party to protect itself. The broadened definition of the term "debtor" underscores the need for these provisions.

If a secured party reasonably, but mistakenly, believes that a consumer transaction or consumer-goods transaction is a non-consumer transaction or non-consumer-goods transaction, and if the secured party's belief is based on its reasonable reliance on a representation of the type specified in subsection (c)(1) or (c)(2), then this Article should be applied as if the facts reasonably believed and the representation reasonably relied upon were true. For example, if a secured party reasonably believed that a transaction was a non-consumer transaction and its belief was based on reasonable reliance on the debtor's representation that the collateral secured an obligation incurred for business purposes, the secured party is not liable to any person, and the debtor's liability for a deficiency is not affected, because of any act or omission of the secured party which arises out of the reasonable belief. Of course, if the secured party's belief is not reasonable or, even if reasonable, is not based on reasonable reliance on the debtor's representation, this limitation on liability is inapplicable.

3. Inapplicability of Statutory Damages to Section 9-616. Subsection (d) excludes noncompliance with Section 9-616 entirely from the scope of statutory damage liability under Section 9-625(c)(2).

4. Single Liability for Statutory Minimum Damages. Subsection (e) ensures that a secured party will incur statutory damages only once in connection with any one secured obligation.

4-9-629. Secured party's liability when taking possession after default - legislative declaration - fund. (a) The general assembly recognizes that, in the past, certain debtors may have been disadvantaged by the actions of repossessors and that such debtors were then unable to obtain just redress for their losses in the courts, especially in cases in which the creditor who initiated the action by employing or contracting with the repossessor was shielded from liability because the repossessor was categorized by the courts as an independent contractor. The general assembly wishes to ensure that the repossessor is bonded or that the secured party or assignee is held responsible at law as a principal under the general principles of agency law for the actions of a repossessor who is acting at the behest of the creditor in the event that no bond has been posted.

(b) A secured party or such party's assignee who wishes to contract with a person to recover or take possession of collateral upon default, including a motor vehicle repossessed pursuant to section 42-6-146, C.R.S., shall contract to recover or take possession of collateral only with a person who is bonded for property damage to or conversion of such collateral in the amount of at least fifty thousand dollars. Such bond shall be filed with and drawn in favor of the attorney general of the state of Colorado for use of the people of the state of Colorado, and shall be revocable only with the written consent of the attorney general pursuant to rules promulgated by the office of the attorney general. The office of the attorney general may charge a fee to be paid by the person filing such bond in order to cover the direct and indirect costs incurred by such office in fulfilling its duties under the provisions of this section.

(c) A secured party or secured party's assignee who employs or contracts with a person who has not complied with the requirements specified in subsection (b) of this section shall be liable as principal for the actions of any person the secured party or assignee employs or contracts with to recover or take possession of the collateral after default as provided in section 4-9-609 in the same manner as if such person were the agent of the secured party or assignee, whether or not such person has been or may be deemed to be acting as an independent contractor in law.

(d) A repossessor shall not engage in repossessing, recovering, or removing collateral or personal property on behalf of a secured creditor or assignee without first disclosing to such secured creditor or assignee whether such repossessor is bonded pursuant to this article. Any person who fails to disclose or misrepresents to a secured party such person's bonded status or fails to file such bond with the attorney general shall be in violation of the "Colorado Consumer Protection Act", article 1 of title 6, C.R.S., and shall be subject to remedies or penalties or both pursuant to said article.

(e) Any person who knowingly falsifies a repossessor bond application or misrepresents information contained therein commits a class 1 misdemeanor and shall be punished as provided in section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S.

(f) All moneys collected by the attorney general pursuant to this section shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the general fund.

(g) Notwithstanding any provision by contract or common law, in exercising its rights after default, a secured party or lessor taking possession of a motor vehicle may not disable or render unusable any computer program or other similar device embedded in the motor vehicle if immediate injury to any person or property is a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such action. Any secured party or lessor who disables or renders unusable such a computer program or other similar device in such circumstances shall be liable in accordance with applicable rules of law to any person who sustains an injury to person or property as a reasonably foreseeable result of the secured party's or lessor's action.

TRANSITION

4-9-701. Effective date. This act takes effect on July 1, 2001. References in this part 7 to "this act" refer to the repealed and reenacted article 9 of this title as contained in Senate Bill 01-240, enacted at the first regular session of the sixty-third general assembly. References in this part 7 to "former article 9" are to article 9 of this title as in effect immediately before July 1, 2001.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: The uniform act (e) states: "This act takes effect on July 1, 2001."

OFFICIAL COMMENT

A uniform law as complex as Article 9 necessarily gives rise to difficult problems and uncertainties during the transition to the new law. As is customary for uniform laws, this Article is based on the general assumption that all States will have enacted substantially identical versions. While always important, uniformity is essential to the success of this Article. If former Article 9 is in effect in some jurisdictions, and this Article is in effect in others, horrendous complications may arise. For example, the proper place in which to file to perfect a security interest (and thus the status of a particular security interest as perfected or unperfected) would depend on whether the matter was litigated in a State in which former Article 9 was in effect or a State in which this Article was in effect. Accordingly, this section contemplates that States will adopt a uniform effective date for this Article. Any one State's failure to adopt the uniform effective date will greatly increase the cost and uncertainty surrounding the transition.

Other problems arise from transactions and relationships that were entered into under former Article 9 or under non-UCC law and which remain outstanding on the effective date of this Article. The difficulties arise primarily because this Article expands the scope of former Article 9 to cover additional types of collateral and transactions and because it provides new methods of perfection for some types of collateral, different priority rules, and different choice-of-law rules governing perfection and priority. This Section and the other sections in this Part address primarily this second set of problems.

4-9-702. Savings clause. (a) Except as otherwise provided in this part 7, this act applies to a transaction or lien within its scope, even if the transaction or lien was entered into or created before July 1, 2001.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c) of this section and sections 4-9-703 to 4-9-710:

(1) Transactions and liens that were not governed by former article 9, were validly entered into or created before July 1, 2001, and would be subject to this act if they had been entered into or created on or after July 1, 2001, and the rights, duties, and interests flowing from those transactions and liens remain valid on or after July 1, 2001; and

(2) The transactions and liens may be terminated, completed, consummated, and enforced as required or permitted by this act or by the law that otherwise would apply if this act had not taken effect.

(c) This act does not affect an action, case, or proceeding commenced before July 1, 2001.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Pre-Effective-Date Transactions. Subsection (a) contains the general rule that this Article applies to transactions, security interests, and other liens within its scope (see Section 9-109), even if the transaction or lien was entered into or created before the effective date. Thus, secured transactions entered into under former Article 9 must be terminated, completed, consummated, and enforced under this Article. Subsection (b) is an exception to the general rule. It applies to valid, pre-effective-date transactions and liens that were not governed by former Article 9 but would be governed by this Article if they had been entered into or created after this Article takes effect. Under subsection (b), these valid transactions, such as the creation of agricultural liens and security interests in commercial tort claims, retain their validity under this Article and may be terminated, completed, consummated, and enforced under this Article. However, these transactions also may be terminated, completed, consummated, and enforced by the law that otherwise would apply had this Article not taken effect.

2. Judicial Proceedings Commenced Before Effective Date. As is usual in transition provisions, subsection (c) provides that this Article does not affect litigation pending on the effective date.

4-9-703. Security interest perfected before effective date. (a) A security interest that is enforceable immediately before July 1, 2001, and would have priority over the rights of a person that becomes a lien creditor at that time is a perfected security interest under this act if, on July 1, 2001, the applicable requirements for enforceability and perfection under this act are satisfied without further action.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-705, if, immediately before July 1, 2001, a security interest is enforceable and would have priority over the rights of a person that becomes a lien creditor at that time, but the applicable requirements for enforceability or perfection under this act are not satisfied on July 1, 2001, the security interest:

(1) Is a perfected security interest for one year after July 1, 2001;

(2) Remains enforceable after June 30, 2002, only if the security interest becomes enforceable under section 4-9-203 before July 1, 2002; and

(3) Remains perfected after June 30, 2002, only if the applicable requirements for perfection under this act are satisfied before July 1, 2002.

(c) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b) of this section, a lien, pledge, or security interest granted by a governmental unit prior to July 1, 2001, that is enforceable immediately before July 1, 2001, and that would have priority over the rights of a person that becomes a lien creditor at that time, shall remain enforceable and continue to have such priority on or after July 1, 2001.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: Colorado added subsection (c).

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Perfected Security Interests Under Former Article 9 and This Article. This section deals with security interests that are perfected (i.e., that are enforceable and have priority over the rights of a lien creditor) under former Article 9 or other applicable law immediately before this Article takes effect. Subsection (a) provides, not surprisingly, that if the security interest would be a perfected security interest under this Article (i.e., if the transaction satisfies this Article's requirements for enforceability (attachment) and perfection), no further action need be taken for the security interest to be a perfected security interest.

2. Security Interests Enforceable and Perfected Under Former Article 9 but Unenforceable or Unperfected Under This Article. Subsection (b) deals with security interests that are enforceable and perfected under former Article 9 or other applicable law immediately before this Article takes effect but do not satisfy the requirements for enforceability (attachment) or perfection under this Article. Except as otherwise provided in Section 9-705, these security interests are perfected security interests for one year after the effective date. If the security interest satisfies the requirements for attachment and perfection within that period, the security interest remains perfected thereafter. If the security interest satisfies only the requirements for attachment within that period, the security interest becomes unperfected at the end of the one-year period.

Example 1: A pre-effective-date security agreement in a consumer transaction covers "all securities accounts." The security interest is properly perfected. The collateral description was adequate under former Article 9 (see former Section 9-115(3)) but is insufficient under this Article (see Section 9-108(e)(2)). Unless the debtor authenticates a new security agreement describing the collateral other than by "type" (or Section 9-203(b)(3) otherwise is satisfied) within the one-year period following the effective date, the security interest becomes unenforceable at the end of that period.

Other examples under former Article 9 or other applicable law that may be effective as attachment or enforceability steps but may be ineffective under this Article include an oral agreement to sell a payment intangible or possession by virtue of a notification to a bailee under former Section 9-305. Neither the oral agreement nor the notification would satisfy the revised Section 9-203 requirements for attachment.

Example 2: A pre-effective-date possessory security interest in instruments is perfected by a bailee's receipt of notification under former 9-305. The bailee has not, however, acknowledged that it holds for the secured party's benefit under revised Section 9-313. Unless the bailee authenticates a record acknowledging that it holds for the secured party (or another appropriate perfection step is taken) within the one-year period following the effective date, the security interest becomes unperfected at the end of that period.

3. Interpretation of Pre-Effective-Date Security Agreements. Section 9-102 defines "security agreement" as "an agreement that creates or provides for a security interest." Under Section 1-201(3), an "agreement" is a "bargain of the parties in fact." If parties to a pre-effective-date security agreement describe the collateral by using a term defined in former Article 9 in one way and defined in this Article in another way, in most cases it should be presumed that the bargain of the parties contemplated the meaning of the term under former Article 9.

Example 3: A pre-effective-date security agreement covers "all accounts" of a debtor. As defined under former Article 9, an "account" did not include a right to payment for lottery winnings. These rights to payment are "accounts" under this Article, however. The agreement of the parties presumptively created a security interest in "accounts" as defined in former Article 9. A different result might be appropriate, for example, if the security agreement explicitly contemplated future changes in the Article 9 definitions of types of collateral e.g., "'Accounts' means 'accounts' as defined in the UCC Article 9 of [State X], as that definition may be amended from time to time." Whether a different approach is appropriate in any given case depends on the bargain of the parties, as determined by applying ordinary principles of contract construction.

4-9-704. Security interest unperfected before effective date. A security interest that is enforceable immediately before July 1, 2001, but that would be subordinate to the rights of a person that becomes a lien creditor at that time:

(1) Remains an enforceable security interest for one year after July 1, 2001;

(2) Remains enforceable after June 30, 2002, only if the security interest becomes enforceable under section 4-9-203 on or before June 30, 2002; and

(3) Becomes perfected:

(A) Without further action, on July 1, 2001, if the applicable requirements for perfection under this act are satisfied on or before July 1, 2001; or

(B) When the applicable requirements for perfection are satisfied if the requirements are satisfied after July 1, 2001.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section deals with security interests that are enforceable but unperfected (i.e., subordinate to the rights of a person who becomes a lien creditor) under former Article 9 or other applicable law immediately before this Article takes effect. These security interests remain enforceable for one year after the effective date, and thereafter if the appropriate steps for attachment under this Article are taken before the one-year period expires. (This section's treatment of enforceability is the same as that of Section 9-703.) The security interest becomes a perfected security interest on the effective date if, at that time, the security interest satisfies the requirements for perfection under this Article. If the security interest does not satisfy the requirements for perfection until sometime thereafter, it becomes a perfected security interest at that later time.

Example: A security interest has attached under former Article 9 but is unperfected because the filed financing statement covers "all of debtor's personal property" and controlling case law in the applicable jurisdiction has determined that this identification of collateral in a financing statement is insufficient. Upon the effective date of this Article, the financing statement becomes sufficient under Section 9-504(2). On that date the security interest becomes perfected. (This assumes, of course, that the financing statement is filed in the proper filing office under this Article.)

4-9-705. Effectiveness of action taken before effective date. (a) If action, other than the filing of a financing statement, is taken before July 1, 2001, and the action would have resulted in priority of a security interest over the rights of a person that becomes a lien creditor had the security interest become enforceable before July 1, 2001, the action is effective to perfect a security interest that attaches under this act on or before June 30, 2002. An attached security interest becomes unperfected on July 1, 2002, unless the security interest becomes a perfected security interest under this act on or before June 30, 2002.

(b) The filing of a financing statement before July 1, 2001, is effective to perfect a security interest to the extent the filing would satisfy the applicable requirements for perfection under this act.

(c) This act does not render ineffective an effective financing statement that, before July 1, 2001, is filed and satisfies the applicable requirements for perfection under the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in former section 4-9-103. However, except as otherwise provided in subsections (d) and (e) of this section and section 4-9-706, the financing statement ceases to be effective at the earlier of:

(1) The time the financing statement would have ceased to be effective under the law of the jurisdiction in which it is filed; or

(2) June 30, 2006.

(d) The filing of a continuation statement after July 1, 2001, does not continue the effectiveness of the financing statement filed before said date. However, upon the timely filing of a continuation statement after July 1, 2001, and in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in part 3 of this article, the effectiveness of a financing statement filed in the same office in that jurisdiction before said date continues for the period provided by the law of that jurisdiction.

(e) Paragraph (2) of subsection (c) of this section applies to a financing statement that, before July 1, 2001, is filed against a transmitting utility and satisfies the applicable requirements for perfection under the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in former section 4-9-103 only to the extent that part 3 of this article provides that the law of a jurisdiction other than the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed governs perfection of a security interest in collateral covered by the financing statement.

(f) A financing statement that includes a financing statement filed before July 1, 2001, and a continuation statement filed after said date is effective only to the extent that it satisfies the requirements of part 5 of this article for an initial financing statement.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. General. This section addresses primarily the situation in which the perfection step is taken under former Article 9 or other applicable law before the effective date of this Article, but the security interest does not attach until after that date.

2. Perfection Other Than by Filing. Subsection (a) applies when the perfection step is a step other than the filing of a financing statement. If the step that would be a valid perfection step under former Article 9 or other law is taken before this Article takes effect, and if a security interest attaches within one year after this Article takes effect, then the security interest becomes a perfected security interest upon attachment. However, the security interest becomes unperfected one year after the effective date unless the requirements for attachment and perfection under this Article are satisfied within that period.

3. Perfection by Filing: Ineffective Filings Made Effective. Subsection (b) deals with financing statements that were filed under former Article 9 and which would not have perfected a security interest under the former Article (because, e.g., they did not accurately describe the collateral or were filed in the wrong place), but which would perfect a security interest under this Article. Under subsection (b), such a financing statement is effective to perfect a security interest to the extent it complies with this Article. Subsection (b) applies regardless of the reason for the filing. For example, a secured party need not wait until the effective date to respond to the change this Article makes with respect to the jurisdiction whose law governs perfection of certain security interests. Rather, a secured party may wish to prepare for this change by filing a financing statement before the effective date in the jurisdiction whose law governs perfection under this Article. When this Article takes effect, the filing becomes effective to perfect a security interest (assuming the filing satisfies the perfection requirements of this Article). Note, however, that Section 9-706 determines whether a financing statement filed before the effective date operates to continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed in another office before the effective date.

4. Perfection by Filing: Change in Applicable Law or Filing Office. Subsection (c) provides that a financing statement filed in the proper jurisdiction under former Section 9-103 remains effective for all purposes, despite the fact that this Article would require filing of a financing statement in a different jurisdiction or in a different office in the same jurisdiction. This means that, during the early years of this Article's effectiveness, it may be necessary to search not only in the filing office of the jurisdiction whose law governs perfection under this Article but also (if different) in the jurisdiction(s) and filing office(s) designated by former Article 9. To limit this burden, subsection (c) provides that a financing statement filed in the jurisdiction determined by former Section 9-103 becomes ineffective at the earlier of the time it would become ineffective under the law of that jurisdiction or June 30, 2006. The June 30, 2006, limitation addresses some nonuniform versions of former Article 9 that extended the effectiveness of a financing statement beyond five years. Note that a financing statement filed before the effective date may remain effective beyond June 30, 2006, if subsection (d) (concerning continuation statements) or (e) (concerning transmitting utilities) or Section 9-706 (concerning initial financing statements that operate to continue pre-effective-date financing statements) so provides.

Subsection (c) is an exception to Section 9-703(b). Under the general rule in Section 9-703(b), a security interest that is enforceable and perfected on the effective date of this Article is a perfected security interest for one year after this Article takes effect, even if the security interest is not enforceable under this Article and the applicable requirements for perfection under this Article have not been met. However, in some cases subsection (c) may shorten the one-year period of perfection; in others, if the security interest is enforceable under Section 9-203, it may extend the period of perfection.

Example 1: On July 3, 1996, D, a State X corporation, creates a security interest in certain manufacturing equipment located in State Y. On July 6, 1996, SP perfects a security interest in the equipment under former Article 9 by filing in the office of the State Y Secretary of State. See former Section 9-103(1)(b). This Article takes effect in States X and Y on July 1, 2001. Under Section 9-705(c), the financing statement remains effective until it lapses in July 2001. See former Section 9-403. Had SP continued the effectiveness of the financing statement by filing a continuation statement in State Y under former Article 9 before July 1, 2001, the financing statement would have remained effective to perfect the security interest through June 30, 2006. See subsection (c)(2). Alternatively, SP could have filed an initial financing statement in State X under subsection (b) or Section 9-706 before the State Y financing statement lapsed. Had SP done so, the security interest would have remained perfected without interruption until the State X financing statement lapsed.

5. Continuing Effectiveness of Filed Financing Statement. A financing statement filed before the effective date of this Article may be continued only by filing in the State and office designated by this Article. This result is accomplished in the following manner: Subsection (d) indicates that, as a general matter, a continuation statement filed after the effective date of this Article does not continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed under the law designated by former Section 9-103. Instead, an initial financing statement must be filed under Section 9-706. The second sentence of subsection (d) contains an exception to the general rule. It provides that a continuation statement is effective to continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before this Article takes effect if this Article prescribes not only the same jurisdiction but also the same filing office.

Example 2: On November 8, 2000, D, a State X corporation, creates a security interest in certain manufacturing equipment located in State Y. On November 15, 2000, SP perfects a security interest in the equipment under former Article 9 by filing in office of the State Y Secretary of State. See former Section 9-103(1)(b). This Article takes effect in States X and Y on July 1, 2001. Under Section 9-705(c), the financing statement ceases to be effective in November, 2005, when it lapses. See Section 9-515. Under this Article, the law of D's location (State X, see Section 9-307) governs perfection. See Section 9-301. Thus, the filing of a continuation statement in State Y after the effective date would not continue the effectiveness of the financing statement. See subsection (d). However, the effectiveness of the financing statement could be continued under Section 9-706.

Example 3: The facts are as in Example 2, except that D is a State Y corporation. Assume State Y adopted former Section 9-401(1) (second alternative). State Y law governs perfection under Part 3 of this Article. (See Sections 9-301, 9-307.) Under the second sentence of subsection (d), the timely filing of a continuation statement in accordance with the law of State Y continues the effectiveness of the financing statement.

Example 4: The facts are as in Example 3, except that the collateral is equipment used in farming operations and, in accordance with former Section 9-401(1) (second alternative) as enacted in State Y, the financing statement was filed in State Y, in the office of the Shelby County Recorder of Deeds. Under this Article, a continuation statement must be filed in the office of the State Y Secretary of State. See Section 9-501(a)(2). Under the second sentence of subsection (d), the timely filing of a continuation statement in accordance with the law of State Y operates to continue a pre-effective-date financing statement only if the continuation statement is filed in the same office as the financing statement. Accordingly, the continuation statement is not effective in this case, but the financing statement may be continued under Section 9-706.

Example 5: The facts are as in Example 3, except that State Y enacted former Section 9-401(1) (third alternative). As required by former Section 9-401(1), SP filed financing statements in both the office of the State Y Secretary of State and the office of the Shelby County Recorder of Deeds. Under this Article, a continuation statement must be filed in the office of the State Y Secretary of State. See Section 9-501(a)(2). The timely filing of a continuation statement in that office after this Article takes effect would be effective to continue the effectiveness of the financing statement (and thus continue the perfection of the security interest), even if the financing statement filed with the County Recorder lapses.

6. Continuation Statements. In some cases, this Article reclassifies collateral covered by a financing statement filed under former Article 9. For example, collateral consisting of the right to payment for real property sold would be a "general intangible" under the former Article but an "account" under this Article. To continue perfection under those circumstances, a continuation statement must comply with the normal requirements for a continuation statement. See Section 9-515. In addition, the pre-effective-date financing statement and continuation statement, taken together, must satisfy the requirements of this Article concerning the sufficiency of the debtor's name, secured party's name, and indication of collateral. See subsection (f).

Example 6: A pre-effective-date financing statement covers "all general intangibles" of a debtor. As defined under former Article 9, a "general intangible," would include rights to payment for lottery winnings. These rights to payment are "accounts" under this Article, however. A post-effective-date continuation statement will not continue the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement with respect to lottery winnings unless it amends the indication of collateral covered to include lottery winnings (e.g., by adding "accounts," "rights to payment for lottery winnings," or the like). If the continuation statement does not amend the indication of collateral, the continuation statement will be effective to continue the effectiveness of the financing statement only with respect to "general intangibles" as defined in this Article.

Example 7: The facts are as in Example 6, except that the pre-effective-date financing statement covers "all accounts and general intangibles." Even though rights to payment for lottery winnings are "general intangibles" under former Article 9 and "accounts" under this Article, a post-effective-date continuation statement would continue the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement with respect to lottery winnings. There would be no need to amend the indication of collateral covered, inasmuch as the indication ("accounts") satisfies the requirements of this Article.

4-9-706. When initial financing statement suffices to continue effectiveness of financing statement. (a) The filing of an initial financing statement in the office specified in section 4-9-501 continues the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before July 1, 2001, if:

(1) The filing of an initial financing statement in that office would be effective to perfect a security interest under this act;

(2) The pre-effective-date financing statement was filed in an office in another state, another office in this state, or in the office of any clerk and recorder in this state; and

(3) The initial financing statement satisfies subsection (c) of this section.

(b) The filing of an initial financing statement under subsection (a) of this section continues the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement:

(1) If the initial financing statement is filed before July 1, 2001, for the period provided in former section 4-9-403 with respect to a financing statement; and

(2) If the initial financing statement is filed after July 1, 2001, for the period provided in section 4-9-515 with respect to an initial financing statement.

(c) To be effective for purposes of subsection (a) of this section, an initial financing statement must:

(1) Satisfy the requirements of part 5 of this article for an initial financing statement;

(2) Identify the pre-effective-date financing statement by indicating the office in which the financing statement was filed and providing the dates of filing and file numbers, if any, of the financing statement and of the most recent continuation statement filed with respect to the financing statement; and

(3) Indicate that the pre-effective-date financing statement remains effective.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Continuation of Financing Statements Not Filed in Proper Filing Office Under This Article. This section deals with continuing the effectiveness of financing statements that are filed in the proper State and office under former Article 9, but which would be filed in the wrong State or in the wrong office of the proper State under this Article. Section 9-705(d) provides that, under these circumstances, filing a continuation statement after the effective date of this Article in the office designated by former Article 9 would not be effective. This section provides the means by which the effectiveness of such a financing statement can be continued if this Article governs perfection under the applicable choice-of-law rule: filing an initial financing statement in the office specified by Section 9-501.

Although it has the effect of continuing the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement, an initial financing statement described in this section is not a continuation statement. Rather, it is governed by the rules applicable to initial financing statements. (However, the debtor need not authorize the filing. See Section 9-708.) Unlike a continuation statement, the initial financing statement described in this section may be filed any time during the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement even before this Article is enacted and not only within the six months immediately prior to lapse. In contrast to a continuation statement, which extends the lapse date of a filed financing statement for five years, the initial financing statement has its own lapse date, which bears no relation to the lapse date of the pre-effective-date financing statement whose effectiveness the initial financing statement continues. See subsection (b).

As subsection (a) makes clear, the filing of an initial financing statement under this section continues the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement. If the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement lapses before the initial financing statement is filed, the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement cannot be continued. Rather, unless the security interest is perfected otherwise, there will be a period during which the security interest is unperfected before becoming perfected again by the filing of the initial financing statement under this section.

If an initial financing statement is filed under this section before the effective date of this Article, it takes effect when this Article takes effect (assuming that it is ineffective under former Article 9). Note, however, that former Article 9 determines whether the filing office is obligated to accept such an initial financing statement. For the reason given in the preceding paragraph, an initial financing statement filed before the effective date of this Article does not continue the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement unless the latter remains effective on the effective date of this Article. Thus, for example, if the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement lapses before this Article takes effect, the initial financing statement would not continue its effectiveness.

2. Requirements of Initial Financing Statement Filed in Lieu of Continuation Statement. Subsection (c) sets forth the requirements for the initial financing statement under subsection (a). These requirements are needed to inform searchers that the initial financing statement operates to continue a financing statement filed elsewhere and to enable searchers to locate and discover the attributes of the other financing statement. [The notice-filing policy of this Article applies to the initial financing statements described in this section. Accordingly, an initial financing statement that substantially satisfies the requirements of subsection (c) is effective, even if it has minor errors or omissions, unless the errors or omissions make the financing statement seriously misleading. See Section 9-506.]

Note: The bracketed language takes effect July 1, 2013.

A single initial financing statement may continue the effectiveness of more than one financing statement filed before this Article's effective date. See Section 1-102(5)(a) (words in the singular include the plural). If a financing statement has been filed in more than one office in a given jurisdiction, as may be the case if the jurisdiction had adopted former Section 9-401(1), third alternative, then an identification of the filing in the central filing office suffices for purposes of subsection (c)(2). If under this Article the collateral is of a type different from its type under former Article 9 as would be the case, e.g., with a right to payment of lottery winnings (a "general intangible" under former Article 9 and an "account" under this Article), then subsection (c) requires that the initial financing statement indicate the type under this Article.

Note:"1-102(5)(a)" will be replaced with "1-106" effective July 1, 2013.

4-9-707. Amendment of pre-effective-date financing statement. (a) As used in this part 7, "pre-effective-date financing statement" means a financing statement filed before July 1, 2001.

(b) After July 1, 2001, a person may add or delete collateral covered by, continue or terminate the effectiveness of, or otherwise amend the information provided in, a pre-effective-date financing statement only in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in part 3 of this article. However, the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement also may be terminated in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d) of this section, if the law of this state governs perfection of a security interest, the information in a pre-effective-date financing statement may be amended after July 1, 2001, only if:

(1) The pre-effective-date financing statement and an amendment are filed in the office specified in section 4-9-501;

(2) An amendment is filed in the office specified in section 4-9-501 concurrently with, or after the filing in that office of, an initial financing statement that satisfies section 4-9-706 (c); or

(3) An initial financing statement that provides the information as amended and satisfies section 4-9-706 (c) is filed in the office specified in section 4-9-501.

(d) If the law of this state governs perfection of a security interest, the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement may be continued only under section 4-9-705 (d) and (f) or 4-9-706.

(e) Whether or not the law of this state governs perfection of a security interest, the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement filed in this state may be terminated after July 1, 2001, by filing a termination statement in the office in which the pre-effective date financing statement is filed, unless an initial financing statement that satisfies section 4-9-706 (c) has been filed in the office specified by the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in part 3 of this article as the office in which to file a financing statement.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Scope of This Section. This section addresses post-effective-date amendments to pre-effective-date financing statements.

2. Applicable Law. Determining how to amend a pre-effective-date financing statement requires one first to determine the jurisdiction whose law applies. Subsection (b) provides that, as a general matter, post-effective-date amendments to pre-effective-date financing statements are effective only if they are accomplished in accordance with the substantive (or local) law of the jurisdiction governing perfection under Part 3 of this Article. However, under certain circumstances, the effectiveness of a financing statement may be terminated in accordance with the substantive law of the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed. See Comment 5, below.

Example 1: D is a corporation organized under the law of State Y. It owns equipment located in State X. Under former Article 9, SP properly perfected a security interest in the equipment by filing a financing statement in State X. Under this Article, the law of State Y governs perfection of the security interest. See Sections 9-301, 9-307. After this Article takes effect, SP wishes to amend the financing statement to reflect a change in D's name. Under subsection (b), the financing statement may be amended in accordance with the law of State Y, i.e., in accordance with subsection (c) as enacted in State Y.

Example 2: The facts are as in Example 1, except that SP wishes to terminate the effectiveness of the State X filing. The first sentence of subsection (b) provides that the financing statement may be terminated after the effective date of this Article in accordance with the law of State Y, i.e., in accordance with subsection (c) as enacted in State Y. However, the second sentence provides that the financing statement also may be terminated in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction in which it is filed, i.e., in accordance with subsection (e) as enacted in State X. If the pre-effective-date financing statement is filed in the jurisdiction whose law governs perfection (here, State Y), then both sentences would designate the law of State Y as applicable to the termination of the financing statement. That is, the financing statement could be terminated in accordance with subsection (c) or (e) as enacted in State Y.

3. Method of Amending. Subsection (c) provides three methods of effectuating a post-effective-date amendment to a pre-effective-date financing statement. Under subsection (c)(1), if the financing statement is filed in the jurisdiction and office determined by this Article, then an effective amendment may be filed in the same office.

Example 3: D is a corporation organized under the law of State Z. It owns equipment located in State Z. Before the effective date of this Article, SP perfected a security interest in the equipment by filing in two offices in State Z, a local filing office and the office of the Secretary of State. See former Section 9-401(1) (third alternative). State Z enacts this Article and specifies in Section 9-501 that a financing statement covering equipment is to be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. SP wishes to assign its power as secured party of record. Under subsection (b), the substantive law of State Z applies. Because the pre-effective-date financing statement is filed in the office specified in subsection (c)(1) as enacted by State Z, SP may effectuate the assignment by filing an amendment under Section 9-514 with the office of the Secretary of State. SP need not amend the local filing, and the priority of the security interest perfected by the filing of the financing statement would not be affected by the failure to amend the local filing.

If a pre-effective-date financing statement is filed in an office other than the one specified by Section 9-501 of the relevant jurisdiction, then ordinarily an amendment filed in that office is ineffective. (Subsection (e) provides an exception for termination statements.) Rather, the amendment must be effectuated by a filing in the jurisdiction and office determined by this Article. That filing may consist of an initial financing statement followed by an amendment, an initial financing statement together with an amendment, or an initial financing statement that indicates the information provided in the financing statement, as amended. Subsection (c)(2) encompasses the first two options; subsection (c)(3) contemplates the last. In each instance, the initial financing statement must satisfy Section 9-706(c).

4. Continuation. Subsection (d) refers to the two methods by which a secured party may continue the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement under this Part. The Comments to Sections 9-705 and 9-706 explain these methods.

5. Termination. The effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement may be terminated pursuant to subsection (c). This section also provides an alternative method for accomplishing this result: filing a termination statement in the office in which the financing statement is filed. The alternative method becomes unavailable once an initial financing statement that relates to the pre-effective-date financing statement and satisfies Section 9-706(c) is filed in the jurisdiction and office determined by this Article.

Example 4: The facts are as in Example 1, except that SP wishes to terminate a financing statement filed in State X. As explained in Example 1, the financing statement may be amended in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection under this Article, i.e., in accordance with the substantive law of State Y. As enacted in State Y, subsection (c)(1) is inapplicable because the financing statement was not filed in the State Y filing office specified in Section 9-501. Under subsection (c)(2), the financing statement may be amended by filing in the State Y filing office an initial financing statement followed by a termination statement. The filing of an initial financing statement together with a termination statement also would be legally sufficient under subsection (c)(2), but Section 9-512(a)(1) may render this method impractical. The financing statement also may be amended under subsection (c)(3), but the resulting initial financing statement is likely to be very confusing. In each instance, the initial financing statement must satisfy Section 9-706(c). Applying the law of State Y, subsection (e) is inapplicable, because the financing statement was not filed in "this State," i.e., State Y.

This section affords another option to SP. Subsection (b) provides that the effectiveness of a financing statement may be terminated either in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection (here, State Y) or in accordance with the substantive law of the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed (here, State X). Applying the law of State X, the financing statement is filed in "this State," i.e., State X, and subsection (e) applies. Accordingly, the effectiveness of the financing statement can be terminated by filing a termination statement in the State X office in which the financing statement is filed, unless an initial financing statement that relates to the financing statement and satisfies Section 9-706(c) as enacted in State X has been filed in the jurisdiction and office determined by this Article (here, the State Y filing office).

4-9-708. Persons entitled to file initial financing statement or continuation statement. A person may file an initial financing statement or a continuation statement under this part 7 if:

(1) The secured party of record authorizes the filing; and

(2) The filing is necessary under this part 7:

(A) To continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before July 1, 2001; or

(B) To perfect or continue the perfection of a security interest.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: The uniform act codified this section as section 707.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section permits a secured party to file an initial financing statement or continuation statement necessary under this Part to continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before this Article takes effect or to perfect or otherwise continue the perfection of a security interest. Because a filing described in this section typically operates to continue the effectiveness of a financing statement whose filing the debtor already has authorized, this section does not require authorization from the debtor.

4-9-709. Priority. (a) This act determines the priority of conflicting claims to collateral. However, if the relative priorities of the claims were established before July 1, 2001, former article 9 determines priority.

(b) For purposes of section 4-9-322 (a), the priority of a security interest that becomes enforceable under section 4-9-203 of this act dates from July 1, 2001, if the security interest is perfected under this act by the filing of a financing statement before said date which would not have been effective to perfect the security interest under former article 9. This subsection (b) does not apply to conflicting security interests each of which is perfected by the filing of such a financing statement.

Editor's note - Colorado legislative change: The uniform act codified this section as section 708.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. Law Governing Priority. Ordinarily, this Article determines the priority of conflicting claims to collateral. However, when the relative priorities of the claims were established before this Article takes effect, former Article 9 governs.

Example 1: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in a right to payment for goods sold ("account"). SP-1 fails to file a financing statement. This Article takes effect on July 1, 2001. Thereafter, on August 1, 2001, D creates a security interest in the same account in favor of SP-2, who files a financing statement. This Article determines the relative priorities of the claims. SP-2's security interest has priority under Section 9-322(a)(1).

Example 2: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in a right to payment for goods sold ("account"). SP-1 fails to file a financing statement. In 2000, D creates a security interest in the same account in favor of SP-2, who likewise fails to file a financing statement. This Article takes effect on July 1, 2001. Because the relative priorities of the security interests were established before the effective date of this Article, former Article 9 governs priority, and SP-1's security interest has priority under former Section 9-312(5)(b).

Example 3: The facts are as in Example 2, except that, on August 1, 2001, SP-2 files a proper financing statement under this Article. Until August 1, 2001, the relative priorities of the security interests were established before the effective date of this Article, as in Example 2. However, by taking the affirmative step of filing a financing statement, SP-2 established anew the relative priority of the conflicting claims after the effective date. Thus, this Article determines priority. SP-2's security interest has priority under Section 9-322(a)(1).

As Example 3 illustrates, relative priorities that are "established" before the effective date do not necessarily remain unchanged following the effective date. Of course, unlike priority contests among unperfected security interests, some priorities are established permanently, e.g., the rights of a buyer of property who took free of a security interest under former Article 9.

One consequence of the rule in subsection (a) is that the mere taking effect of this Article does not of itself adversely affect the priority of conflicting claims to collateral.

Example 4: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in a right to payment for lottery winnings (a "general intangible" as defined in former Article 9 but an "account" as defined in this Article). SP-1's security interest is unperfected because its filed financing statement covers only "accounts." In 2000, D creates a security interest in the same right to payment in favor of SP-2, who files a financing statement covering "accounts and general intangibles." Before this Article takes effect on July 1, 2001, SP-2's perfected security interest has priority over SP-1's unperfected security interest under former 9-312(5). Because the relative priorities of the security interests were established before the effective date of this Article, former Article 9 continues to govern priority after this Article takes effect. Thus, SP-2's priority is not adversely affected by this Article's having taken effect.

Note that were this Article to govern priority, SP-2 would become subordinated to SP-1 under Section 9-322(a)(1), even though nothing changes other than this Article's having taken effect. Under Section 9-704, SP-1's security interest would become perfected; the financing statement covering "accounts" adequately covers the lottery winnings and complies with the other perfection requirements of this Article, e.g., it is filed in the proper office.

Example 5: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in a right to payment for lottery winnings a "general intangible" (as defined under former Article 9). SP-1's security interest is unperfected because its filed financing statement covers only "accounts." In 2000, D creates a security interest in the same right to payment in favor of SP-2, who makes the same mistake and also files a financing statement covering only "accounts." Before this Article takes effect on July 1, 2001, SP-1's unperfected security interest has priority over SP-2's unperfected security interest, because SP-1's security interest was the first to attach. See former Section 9-312(5)(b). Because the relative priorities of the security interests were established before the effective date of this Article, former Article 9 continues to govern priority after this Article takes effect. Although Section 9-704 makes both security interests perfected for purposes of this Article, both are unperfected under former Article 9, which determines their relative priorities.

2. Financing Statements Ineffective Under Former Article 9 but Effective Under This Article. If this Article determines priority, subsection (b) may apply. It deals with the case in which a filing that occurs before the effective date of this Article would be ineffective to perfect a security interest under former Article 9 but effective under this Article. For purposes of Section 9-322(a), the priority of a security interest that attaches after this Article takes effect and is perfected in this manner dates from the time this Article takes effect.

Example 6: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in D's existing and after-acquired instruments and files a financing statement covering "instruments." In 2000, D grants a security interest in its existing and after-acquired accounts in favor of SP-2, who files a financing statement covering "accounts." After this Article takes effect on July 1, 2001, one of D's account debtors gives D a negotiable note to evidence its obligation to pay an overdue account. Under the first-to-file-or-perfect rule in Section 9-322(a), SP-1 would have priority in the instrument, which constitutes SP-2's proceeds. SP-1's filing in 1999 was earlier than SP-2's in 2000. However, subsection (b) provides that, for purposes of Section 9-322(a), SP-1's priority dates from the time this Article takes effect (July 1, 2001). Under Section 9-322(b), SP-2's priority with respect to the proceeds (instrument) dates from its filing as to the original collateral (accounts). Accordingly, SP-2's security interest would be senior.

Subsection (b) does not apply to conflicting security interests each of which is perfected by a pre-effective-date filing that was not effective under former Article 9 but is effective under this Article.

Example 7: In 1999, SP-1 obtains a security interest in D's existing and after-acquired instruments and files a financing statement covering "instruments." In 2000, D grants a security interest in its existing and after-acquired instruments in favor of SP-2, who files a financing statement covering "instruments." After this Article takes effect on July 1, 2001, one of D's account debtors gives D a negotiable note to evidence its obligation to pay an overdue account. Under the first-to-file-or-perfect rule in Section 9-322(a), SP-1 would have priority in the instrument. Both filings are effective under this Article, see Section 9-705(b), and SP-1's filing in 1999 was earlier than SP-2's in 2000. Subsection (b) does not change this result.

4-9-710. Effectiveness of filing in clerk and recorders' offices. Except as provided in this section, a pre-effective-date financing statement filed with respect to a security interest in the office of any clerk and recorder in this state shall be treated as if it had been filed in the office of the secretary of state. The preceding sentence does not apply to a financing statement to the extent that the financing statement:

(1) Covers timber to be cut or as-extracted collateral; or

(2) Was filed as a fixture filing.

PART 8

TRANSITION PROVISIONS FOR 2010 AMENDMENTS

4-9-801. Effective date. House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, takes effect on July 1, 2013.

Editor's note: This section is effective July 1, 2013.

Source: L. 2012: Entire part added, (HB 12-1262), ch. 170, p. 604, § 16, effective July 1, 2013.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

[These transition provisions largely track the provisions of Part 7, which govern the transition to the 1998 revision of this Article. The Comments to the sections of Part 7 generally are relevant to the corresponding sections of Part 8. The 2010 amendments are less far-reaching than the 1998 revision. Although Part 8 does not carry forward those Part 7 provisions that clearly would have no application to the transition to the amendments, as a matter of prudence Part 8 does carry forward all Part 7 provisions that are even arguably relevant to the transition.]

[The most significant transition problem raised by the 2010 amendments arises from changes to Section 9-503(a), concerning the name of the debtor that must be provided for a financing statement to be sufficient. Sections 9-805 and 9-806 address this problem.]

[Example: On November 8, 2012, Debtor, an individual whose"individual name" is "Lon Debtor" and whose principal residence is located in State A, creates a security interest in certain manufacturing equipment. On November 15, 2012, SP perfects a security interest in the equipment under Article 9 (as in effect prior to the 2010 amendments) by filing a financing statement against "Lon Debtor" in the State A filing office. On July 1, 2013, the 2010 amendments, including Alternative A to Section 9-503(a), take effect in State A. Debtor's unexpired State A driver's indicates that Debtor's name is "Polonius Debtor." Assuming that a search under "Polonius Debtor" using the filing office's standard search logic would not disclose the filed financing statement, the financing statement would be insufficient under amended Section 9-503(a)(4) (Alt. A). However, Section 9-805(b) provides that the 2010 amendments do not render the financing statement ineffective. Rather, the financing statement remains effective — even if it has become seriously misleading — until it would have ceased to be effective had the amendments not taken effect. See Section 9-805(b)(1). SP can continue the effectiveness of the financing statement by filing a continuation statement with the State A filing office. To do so, however, SP must amend Debtor's name on the financing statement to provide the name that is sufficient under Section 9-503(a)(4) (Alt. A) at the time the continuation statement is filed. See Section 9-805(c), (e).]

[The most significant transition problem addressed by the 1998 revision arose from the change in the choice-of-law rules governing where to file a financing statement. The 2010 amendments do not change the choice-of-law rules. Even so, the amendments will change the place to file in a few cases, because certain entities that were not previously classified as "registered organizations" would fall within that category under the amendments.]

Note: The bracketed language takes effect July 1, 2013.

4-9-802. Savings clause. (a) Except as otherwise provided in this part 8, House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, applies to a transaction or lien within its scope even if the transaction or lien was entered into or created before July 1, 2013.

(b) House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, does not affect an action, case, or proceeding commenced before July 1, 2013.

4-9-803. Security interest perfected before effective date. (a) A security interest that is a perfected security interest immediately before July 1, 2013, is a perfected security interest under this article, as amended, if, when House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, takes effect, the applicable requirements for attachment and perfection under this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, are satisfied without further action.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in section 4-9-805, which controls with respect to security interests perfected by the filing of a financing statement pursuant to part 5 of this article as it existed before July 1, 2013, if, immediately before July 1, 2013, a security interest is a perfected security interest but the applicable requirements for perfection under this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, are not satisfied by July 1, 2013, the security interest remains perfected thereafter only if the applicable requirements for perfection under this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, are satisfied within one year after July 1, 2013.

4-9-804. Security interest unperfected before effective date. (a) A security interest that is an unperfected security interest immediately before July 1, 2013, becomes a perfected security interest:

(1) Without further action, on July 1, 2013, if the applicable requirements for perfection under this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, are satisfied on or before July 1, 2013; or

(2) When the applicable requirements for perfection are satisfied if the requirements are satisfied after July 1, 2013.

Editor's note: This section is effective July 1, 2013.

Source: L. 2012: Entire part added, (HB 12-1262), ch. 170, p. 605, § 16, effective July 1, 2013.

4-9-805. Effectiveness of action taken before effective date. (a) The filing of a financing statement before July 1, 2013, is effective to perfect a security interest to the extent the filing would satisfy the applicable requirements for perfection under this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012.

(b) House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, does not render seriously misleading or otherwise ineffective an effective financing statement that, before July 1, 2013, was filed and satisfied the applicable requirements for perfection under the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in this article as it existed before July 1, 2013. However, except as otherwise provided in subsections (c) and (d) of this section and section 4-9-806, the financing statement ceases to be effective:

(1) If the financing statement was filed in this state, at the time the financing statement would have ceased to be effective had House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, not taken effect; or

(2) If the financing statement was filed in another jurisdiction, at the earlier of:

(A) The time the financing statement would have ceased to be effective under the law of that jurisdiction; or

(B) June 30, 2018.

(c) The timely filing of a continuation statement on or after July 1, 2013, in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, continues the effectiveness of a financing statement filed in the same office in that jurisdiction before July 1, 2013, for the period provided by the law of that jurisdiction, but only to the extent the financing statement, including any amendment filed before or, if permitted by the rules of the filing office, as part of, the continuation statement, satisfies the requirements of part 5 of this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, for an initial financing statement. Except as provided in the preceding sentence, the filing of a continuation statement on or after July 1, 2013, does not continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before July 1, 2013.

(d) Subparagraph (B) of paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of this section applies to a financing statement that, before July 1, 2013, is filed against a transmitting utility and satisfies the applicable requirements for perfection under the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in this article as it existed before July 1, 2013, only to the extent that this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, provides that the law of a jurisdiction other than the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed governs perfection of a security interest in collateral covered by the financing statement.

(e) A financing statement that includes both a financing statement filed before July 1, 2013, and a continuation statement filed on or after July 1, 2013, is effective only to the extent that, after giving effect to any amendment filed before or, if permitted by the rules of the filing office, as part of, the continuation statement, the financing statement satisfies the requirements of part 5 of this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, for an initial financing statement. A financing statement filed before July 1, 2013, that indicates that the debtor is a decedent's estate indicates that the collateral is being administered by a personal representative within the meaning of section 4-9-503 (a) (2), as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012. A financing statement filed before July 1, 2013, that indicates that the debtor is a trust or is a trustee acting with respect to property held in trust indicates that the collateral is held in a trust within the meaning of section 4-9-503 (a) (3), as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012.

4-9-806. When initial financing statement suffices to continue effectiveness of financing statement. (a) The filing of an initial financing statement in the office specified in section 4-9-501 continues the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before July 1, 2013, if:

(1) The filing of an initial financing statement in that office would be effective to perfect a security interest under this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012;

(2) The pre-effective-date financing statement was filed in an office in another state; and

(3) The initial financing statement satisfies subsection (c) of this section.

(b) The filing of an initial financing statement under subsection (a) of this section continues the effectiveness of the pre-effective-date financing statement:

(1) If the initial financing statement is filed before July 1, 2013, for the period provided in section 4-9-515, as it existed before July 1, 2013, with respect to an initial financing statement; and

(2) If the initial financing statement is filed after July 1, 2013, for the period provided in section 4-9-515, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, with respect to an initial financing statement.

(c) To be effective for purposes of subsection (a) of this section, an initial financing statement must:

(1) Satisfy the requirements of part 5 of this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, for an initial financing statement;

(2) Identify the pre-effective-date financing statement by indicating the office in which the financing statement was filed and providing the dates of filing and file numbers, if any, of the financing statement and of the most recent continuation statement filed with respect to the financing statement; and

(3) Indicate that the pre-effective-date financing statement remains effective.

4-9-807. Amendment of pre-effective-date financing statement. (a) In this section, "pre-effective-date financing statement" means a financing statement filed before July 1, 2013.

(b) On or after July 1, 2013, a person may add or delete collateral covered by, continue or terminate the effectiveness of, or otherwise amend the information provided in, a pre-effective-date financing statement only in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012. However, the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement also may be terminated in accordance with the law of the jurisdiction in which the financing statement is filed.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d) of this section, if the law of this state governs perfection of a security interest, the information in a pre-effective-date financing statement may be amended on or after July 1, 2013, only if:

(1) The pre-effective-date financing statement and an amendment are filed in the office specified in section 4-9-501;

(2) An amendment is filed in the office specified in section 4-9-501 concurrently with, or after the filing in that office of, an initial financing statement that satisfies section 4-9-806 (c); or

(3) An initial financing statement that provides the information as amended and satisfies section 4-9-806 (c) is filed in the office specified in section 4-9-501.

(d) If the law of this state governs perfection of a security interest, the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement may be continued only under section 4-9-805 (c) and (e) or 4-9-806.

(e) Whether or not the law of this state governs perfection of a security interest, the effectiveness of a pre-effective-date financing statement filed in this state may be terminated after July 1, 2013, by filing a termination statement in the office in which the pre-effective-date financing statement is filed, unless an initial financing statement that satisfies section 4-9-806 (c) has been filed in the office specified by the law of the jurisdiction governing perfection as provided in this article, as amended by House Bill 12-1262, enacted in 2012, as the office in which to file a financing statement.

4-9-808. Person entitled to file initial financing statement or continuation statement. (a) A person may file an initial financing statement or a continuation statement under this part 8 if:

(1) The secured party of record authorizes the filing; and

(2) The filing is necessary under this part 8:

(A) To continue the effectiveness of a financing statement filed before July 1, 2013; or

(B) To perfect or continue the perfection of a security interest.

ARTICLE 9.5

Central Filing of Effective Financing Statements

Editor's note: (1) Section 5 of chapter 40, Session Laws of Colorado 1988, provides that the act enacting this article is effective May 29, 1988, but the central filing system shall not become operational until receipt by the central filing system board of certification for the central filing system for effective financing statements, established in this article, by the United States department of agriculture pursuant to the federal "Food Security Act of 1985", Pub.L. 99-198. Certification for the central filing system was issued by the United States department of agriculture on September 28, 1992.

(2) Colorado adopted this additional article which has no counterpart in the uniform act.

Law reviews: For article, "A Central Filing System for Financing Statements", see 28 Colo. Law. 5 (September 1999).

4-9.5-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Central Filing of Effective Financing Statement Act".

Source: L. 88: Entire article added, p. 325, § 1, effective May 29.

4-9.5-102. Legislative declaration. The general assembly finds, determines, and declares its intent to adopt a central filing system for security interests relating to farm products pursuant to section 1324 of the federal "Food Security Act of 1985", Pub.L. 99-198. The general assembly further finds, determines, and declares that upon the certification and operation of this central filing system, security interest holders shall use such system in lieu of any other notice provided by section 1324 of the federal "Food Security Act of 1985" for farm products used or produced in the state of Colorado which are included in the central filing system, except as otherwise allowed by this article or required by law.

4-9.5-103. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2003, p. 1669, § 2, effective July 1, 2003.)

(2) "Buyer of farm products" or "buyer in the ordinary course of business" means a person who, in the ordinary course of business, buys farm products from a person engaged in farming operations who is in the business of selling farm products.

(2.5) "Central filing officer" means the secretary of state.

(3) "Central filing system" means a system for filing effective financing statements on a statewide basis and which has been certified by the secretary of the United States department of agriculture pursuant to section 1324 of the "Food Security Act of 1985". It is the intent of the general assembly that, effective January 1, 2000, the filing system established by section 4-9-501 shall constitute the central filing system.

(4) "Commission merchant" means any person engaged in the business of receiving any farm product for sale, on commission, or for or on behalf of another person.

(5) "Crop year" means:

(a) For a crop grown in soil, the calendar year in which it is harvested or to be harvested;

(b) For animals, the calendar year in which they are born, acquired, or owned;

(c) For poultry or eggs, the calendar year in which they are sold or to be sold.

(6) "Debtor" means a person who owns a product and subjects it to a security interest, whether or not that person owes a debt to the secured party.

(7) "Effective financing statement" means a record that:

(a) Is an original or reproduced copy thereof, a fax copy, or, if permitted by federal law, regulation, rule, or interpretation, an electronically transmitted filing;

(b) Is filed with the central filing officer by the secured party; and

(c) Is signed, authorized, or otherwise authenticated by the debtor, unless the record is filed by electronic transmission, in which case it shall be signed, authorized, or otherwise authenticated electronically pursuant to section 24-71-101, C.R.S.

(8) "Farm product" means an agricultural commodity, a species of livestock used or produced in farming operations, or a product of such crop or livestock in its unmanufactured state, that is in the possession of a person engaged in farming operations. "Farm product" includes, but is not limited to, apples, artichokes, asparagus, barley, cantaloupe, carrots, cattle and calves, chickens, corn, cotton, cucumbers, dry beans, eggs, fish, flax seed, fur-bearing animals, grapes, hay, hogs, honey, honeydew melon, horses, legumes, milk, muskmelon, oats, onions, pecans, popcorn, potatoes, pumpkins, raspberries, rye, seed crops, sheep and lambs, silage, sorghum grain, soybeans, squash, strawberries, sugar beets, sunflower seeds, sweet corn, tomatoes, trees, triticale, turkeys, vetch, walnuts, watermelon, wheat, and wool. The central filing officer may add other farm products in addition to those specified in this subsection (8) if such products are covered by the general definition contained in this subsection (8).

(9) "Food Security Act of 1985" means Pub.L. 99-198, as amended: Section 1324 thereof has been codified at section 1631 of Title 7 of the United States Code.

(10) "Person" means any individual or any partnership, corporation, trust, or any other business entity.

(11) "Receipt" and other forms of the word "receive" means the earlier of actual receipt or the tenth day after deposit in the United States mails, first-class mail, postage prepaid.

(11.5) "Record", except as used in "for record", "of record", "record or legal title", and "record owner", means information that is inscribed on a tangible medium or which is stored in an electronic or other medium and is retrievable in perceivable form.

(12) "Registrant" or "registered buyer" means any buyer of farm products, commission merchant, or selling agent, who has registered with the central filing officer pursuant to section 4-9.5-104.5 (3).

(13) "Secured party" means a person in whose favor there is a security interest.

(14) "Security interest" means an interest in farm products that secures payment or performance of an obligation.

(15) "Selling agent" means any person, other than a commission merchant, who is engaged in the business of negotiating the sale and purchase of any farm product on behalf of a person engaged in farming operations.

(16) "Unique identifier" means a number, combination of numbers or letters, or other identifier selected by the central filing officer using a system or method approved by the United States secretary of agriculture in accordance with the federal "Food Security Act of 1985".

The revisor of statutes received certification from the secretary of state on February 29, 2012.

4-9.5-104. Central filing system - repeal. (1) The central filing officer shall be responsible for the design, implementation, and operation of a central filing system for effective financing statements. The system shall provide a means for filing effective financing statements with the central filing officer. The system shall include requirements:

(a) That an effective financing statement be filed in the office of the central filing officer;

(b) That the central filing officer record the date and hour of the filing of effective financing statements; and

(c) That the central filing officer assign a file number to each effective financing statement.

(2) to (6) Repealed.

(7) (Deleted by amendment, L. 99, p. 747, § 15, effective January 1, 2000.)

(8) and (9) Repealed.

Editor's note: Subsection (9) provides for the repeal of subsections (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), (8), and (9) effective ninety days following certification in writing by the secretary of state to the revisor of statutes. The revisor of statutes received certification from the secretary of state on February 29, 2012.

4-9.5-104.5. Master list. (1) The central filing officer shall compile all effective financing statements or notices into a master list:

(a) Containing the information referred to in section 4-9.5-105.3;

(b) Organized according to farm product; and

(c) Arranged within each such farm product:

(I) In alphabetical order according to the last name of the individual debtors or, in the case of debtors doing business other than as individuals, the first word in the name of such debtors;

(II) In numerical order according to the social security number, or other unique identifier, of the individual debtors or, in the case of debtors doing business other than as individuals, the federal internal revenue service taxpayer identification number, or other unique identifier, of such debtors;

(III) Geographically by county; and

(IV) By crop year.

(2) (a) The central filing officer shall cause the information on the master list to be produced in lists organized in the same manner as the master list.

(b) If a registered buyer or other interested person so requests, the list or lists for such buyer or person may be limited to any county or group of counties where the farm product is used or produced, or to any crop year or years, or a combination of such identifiers.

(3) All buyers of farm products, commission merchants, selling agents, and other persons may register with the central filing officer to access lists described in subsection (2) of this section. Any buyer of farm products, commission merchant, selling agent, or other person conducting business from multiple locations may be considered as one entity, at its option. Such registration shall be on an annual basis. The central filing officer shall prescribe the process for registration, which shall include the name and address of the registrant and the list or lists described in subsection (2) of this section that such registrant desires to receive. A registration shall be complete when the registrant has provided the required information and paid the prescribed fee. A registrant is deemed to be registered only as to those products, counties, and crop years for which the registrant requests a list.

(4) The lists as produced pursuant to subsection (2) of this section shall be published and distributed by the central filing officer and shall reflect all effective financing statements that are effective as of the date of the compilation of the lists. The central filing officer shall determine the frequency with which the lists identified pursuant to subsection (2) of this section shall be compiled and distributed. Such lists may be distributed on an annual basis with three quarterly cumulative supplements or, if cost-effective, requested by registered buyers, and permitted by applicable federal law, the central filing officer may distribute more frequent supplements as determined by the central filing officer reflecting all new filings, changes, and terminations since the last list. The central filing officer may develop the form in which to distribute lists. If the name of the seller of a farm product is not on a list requested and received by a registrant, the sale of the farm product to the registrant shall be free of any security interest granted by that seller with respect to the farm product except as to any farm product for which the registrant has received direct notification of the existence of a security interest pursuant to 7 U.S.C. sec. 1631 (e) (1) and (g) (2) (A). The registrant may rely on the representation of the seller as to the seller's identity, so long as the reliance is in good faith.

(5) The central filing officer shall remove from the master list any effective financing statement that has lapsed pursuant to section 4-9.5-105.3 (2) or has been terminated pursuant to section 4-9.5-107.

(6) As soon as practicable, the central filing officer shall publish and distribute the master list electronically.

(2) to (4) (Deleted by amendment, L. 96, p. 1385, § 7, effective July 1, 1996.)

(5) A buyer of farm products, whether or not registered, may rely conclusively on information obtained from the master list published and distributed electronically, regardless of any errors or omissions committed by the central filing officer in the electronic publication or distribution of the master list. If the information obtained electronically confirms that the name of the seller of a specified farm product is not on the master list, the sale of the farm product to the buyer shall be free of any security interest granted by that seller with respect to the farm product and the buyer may rely on the representation of the seller as to the seller's identity, so long as the reliance is in good faith.

The revisor of statutes received certification from the secretary of state on February 29, 2012.

4-9.5-105.3. Effective financing statements. (1) An effective financing statement shall state:

(a) The name and address of the secured party;

(b) The name and address of the debtor, which, in the case of an individual, shall have the surname appear first, and in the case of a corporation or other entity that is not an individual, shall have the name appear beginning with the first word or character that is not an article or punctuation mark;

(c) The social security number, or other unique identifier, of the debtor or, in the case of a debtor doing business other than as an individual, the federal internal revenue service taxpayer identification number, or other unique identifier, of such debtor;

(d) A description of the farm products subject to the security interest created by the debtor, including:

(I) The amount of the farm products, unless all of a particular farm product is subject to the particular security interest;

(II) The name of each county in which the farm products are produced, stored, or otherwise located or to be produced, stored, or otherwise located; and

(III) The crop year, unless every crop year for the duration of the effective financing statement is subject to the particular security interest.

(e) Further details of the farm products subject to the security interest, if needed to distinguish them from other farm products owned by the same person but not subject to the particular security interest; and

(f) Such other additional information as the central filing officer may require to comply with 7 U.S.C. sec. 1631 or to more effectively carry out the purposes of this article.

(2) An effective financing statement shall remain effective for a period of five years after the date of filing, unless its effectiveness is extended by filing one or more continuation statements in accordance with section 4-9.5-106 (1).

(3) An effective financing statement may:

(a) Cover more than one farm product located in more than one county for any given debtor; and

(b) Cover more than one debtor.

(4) An effective financing statement may not be created by amending a financing statement filed under article 9 of this title.

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 1148, § 5, effective (see editor's note).

Editor's note: Section 12 of chapter 249, Session Laws of Colorado 2006, provides that the act enacting this section is effective ninety days following certification in writing by the secretary of state to the revisor of statutes that approval of changes to the central filing system enacted by the act has been obtained from the United States department of agriculture, and the secretary of state has implemented the necessary computer system to publish and distribute the master list electronically and is able to do so. The revisor of statutes received certification from the secretary of state on February 29, 2012.

4-9.5-105.7. Amendment of effective financing statements. (1) An effective financing statement may be amended to add or delete collateral, or otherwise to amend the information provided in the effective financing statement, by filing an amendment with the central filing officer that identifies the effective financing statement to which the amendment relates by providing its file number, filing office where originally filed, and date filed.

(2) An effective financing statement that is amended by an amendment that adds collateral is effective as to the added collateral only from the date of the filing of the amendment.

(3) An effective financing statement that is amended by an amendment that adds a debtor is effective as to the added debtor only from the date of the filing of the amendment.

(4) If the security interest is terminated as to one or more of the farm products shown on the filed effective financing statement and the effective financing statement is to remain effective as to one or more other farm products, the secured party shall, within thirty days after such partial termination, file an amendment reflecting such partial termination with the central filing officer. If the affected secured party fails to file an amendment reflecting such partial termination within the thirty-day period, the secured party shall be liable to the debtor for five hundred dollars and, in addition, for any loss caused to the debtor by such failure.

(5) An amendment to an effective financing statement to delete collateral does not amend or otherwise impair the perfection of any security interest perfected by the effective financing statement for purposes of article 9 of this title.

Editor's note: Section 12 of chapter 249, Session Laws of Colorado 2006, provides that the act enacting this section is effective ninety days following certification in writing by the secretary of state to the revisor of statutes that approval of changes to the central filing system enacted by the act has been obtained from the United States department of agriculture, and the secretary of state has implemented the necessary computer system to publish and distribute the master list electronically and is able to do so. The revisor of statutes received certification from the secretary of state on February 29, 2012.

4-9.5-106. Continuation statements. (1) A continuation statement may be filed within six months prior to the expiration of the five-year period of effectiveness of an effective financing statement. A continuation statement shall identify the effective financing statement by file number, filing office where originally filed, and date filed. Upon timely filing of the continuation statement, the effectiveness of the effective financing statement shall be continued for five years after the last date to which the effective financing statement was effective, whereupon its effectiveness shall lapse unless another continuation statement is filed prior to such lapse. Succeeding continuation statements may be filed in the same manner to continue the effectiveness of the effective financing statement.

(2) The effectiveness of an effective financing statement that was filed before July 1, 1996, and that had not otherwise lapsed by December 31, 1997, shall be deemed to have lapsed in the manner provided in subsection (1) of this section on December 31, 1997, unless a continuation statement was filed on or after July 1, 1996, but on or before December 31, 1997, that complied with the requirements of subsection (1) of this section. The filing of a continuation statement pursuant to this subsection (2) shall have extended the effectiveness of the effective financing statement for five years after the last date to which the effective financing statement would otherwise have been effective, whereupon it shall have lapsed in the manner set forth in subsection (1) of this section unless further continuation statements were filed in the manner and within the time periods prescribed in subsection (1) of this section in order to prevent such lapse.

(4) No continuation statement filed pursuant to this section on or after July 1, 1995, shall be ineffective solely because it failed to include a statement that the original financing statement is still effective.

Editor's note: (1) Subsection (2) was amended and subsection (4) was added by Senate Bill 97S-005 at the first extraordinary session of the sixty-first general assembly in 1997 to correct a technical error. The amendment removes a requirement erroneously left in the law that every continuation statement filed under the "Uniform Commercial Code - Secured Transactions" or the "Central Filing of Effective Financing Statements Act" on or after July 1, 1995, include a statement that the financing statement that is being continued by the filing remains effective. It substitutes language that validates continuation statements filed on or after July 1, 1995, in a form that does not include such statement.

(2) Section 12 of chapter 249, Session Laws of Colorado 2006, provides that the act amending subsections (1), (2), and (3) is effective ninety days following certification in writing by the secretary of state to the revisor of statutes that approval of changes to the central filing system enacted by the act has been obtained from the United States department of agriculture, and the secretary of state has implemented the necessary computer system to publish and distribute the master list electronically and is able to do so. The revisor of statutes received certification from the secretary of state on February 29, 2012.

4-9.5-107. Termination statement. (1) The secured party identified in an effective financing statement may at any time, and without regard to whether there is any outstanding secured obligation or commitment to make advances, incur obligations, or otherwise give value, file with the central filing officer a termination statement with respect to such effective financing statement pursuant to this section and provide notice to the debtor of such filing.

(1.3) (a) Unless the debtor otherwise requests, whenever there is no outstanding secured obligation and no commitment to make advances, incur obligations, or otherwise give value, the secured party identified in an effective financing statement relating to such obligation or commitment shall, within thirty days, terminate such effective financing statement by filing with the central filing officer either:

(I) A termination statement pursuant to this section; or

(II) A termination statement pursuant to article 9 of this title.

(b) If a termination statement is filed pursuant to either subparagraph (I) or (II) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1.3), the secured party shall provide notice to the debtor of such filing. If the secured party fails to file a required termination statement within the thirty-day period, the secured party shall be liable to the debtor for one thousand dollars, and, in addition, for any loss caused to the debtor by such failure.

(1.5) A termination statement filed pursuant to either subsection (1) or subparagraph (I) of paragraph (a) of subsection (1.3) of this section does not terminate or otherwise impair the perfection of any security interest perfected by the effective financing statement for purposes of article 9 of this title.

(2) (a) The termination statement shall:

(I) Be signed, authorized, or otherwise authenticated by the secured party, and if such notice is filed by electronic transmission it shall be signed electronically, pursuant to section 24-71-101, C.R.S.;

(II) Identify the effective financing statement, the effectiveness of which is to be terminated, by file number, filing office where originally filed, and date filed; and

(III) State that the effective financing statement is to be removed from the master list.

(b) The effectiveness of a terminated effective financing statement shall cease as of the date and hour of filing the termination statement by the central filing officer.

Editor's note: (1) Section 12 of chapter 249, Session Laws of Colorado 2006, provides that the act amending subsections (1) and (2) and enacting subsections (1.3) and (1.5) is effective ninety days following certification in writing by the secretary of state to the revisor of statutes that approval of changes to the central filing system enacted by the act has been obtained from the United States department of agriculture, and the secretary of state has implemented the necessary computer system to publish and distribute the master list electronically and is able to do so. The revisor of statutes received certification from the secretary of state on February 29, 2012.

4-9.5-108. Filings generally. (1) Each record filed in the central filing system shall contain all information required by the laws of this state to be contained in the record. Each such record shall:

(a) Be on or in such medium as may be acceptable to the central filing officer and from which the central filing officer may create a physical document that contains all of the information in the record. The central filing officer may require that the record be delivered by any one or more means or on or in any one or more media as may be acceptable to the central filing officer. The central filing officer is not required to accept for filing a record that is not delivered by a means and in a medium that complies with the requirements then established by the central filing officer for the delivery and filing of records. If the central filing officer permits a record to be delivered on paper, the record shall be typewritten or machine printed, and the central filing officer may impose reasonable requirements upon the dimensions, legibility, quality and color of such paper, and typewriting or printing. If the delivery of a record subject to this article for filing is required or permitted to be accomplished electronically, then the central filing officer may prescribe the format and other attributes of the record and may refuse to permit such record to be accompanied by any physical document.

(b) Be in the English language;

(c) Include any form or cover sheet, or both, required pursuant to section 4-9.5-108.5;

(d) Be delivered to the central filing officer for filing; and

(e) Be accompanied by all required fees.

(2) A record filed pursuant to this article shall not constitute notice for purposes of section 38-35-109, C.R.S.

(3) Any continuation, termination, amendment, or assignment of an effective financing statement shall be signed, authorized, or otherwise authenticated by the secured party, and, in the case of an amendment that adds collateral or adds an additional debtor, by the affected debtor or debtors. If such filing is made by electronic transmission, it shall be signed electronically, pursuant to section 24-71-101, C.R.S.

(4) The provisions of part 5 of article 9 of this title regarding the filing of records shall apply to the filing of records under this article to the extent not inconsistent therewith.

(1) Repealed.

(1.5) The central filing officer shall charge and collect fees and other charges, which shall be determined and collected pursuant to section 24-21-104 (3), C.R.S., for:

(a) Distributing the master list;

(b) Furnishing any information;

(c) Furnishing a copy of any filed record;

(d) Filing any record required or permitted to be filed under this article.

(2) The central filing officer is hereby authorized to adopt such rules as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this article and to conform the central filing system to the requirements of the federal "Food Security Act of 1985".

(3) The central filing officer may contract with one or more public or private parties to perform some or all of its duties under this article; except that the central filing officer may not delegate the power to make rules or regulations, conduct public hearings, prescribe forms, and establish services and fees therefor.

(5) Revenues collected by the central filing officer pursuant to this article shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the department of state cash fund created in section 24-21-104 (3), C.R.S.

ARTICLE 9.7

Colorado Statutory Lien Registration Act

Editor's note: Section 9 of chapter 84, Session Laws of Colorado 2008, provides that the act enacting this article is effective simultaneously with Senate Bill 06-188. As of publication date, Senate Bill 06-188 had not yet become effective. For further explanation, see section 12 of chapter 249, Session Laws of Colorado 2006. The revisor of statutes received certification from the secretary of state, as specified in said chapter 249, on February 29, 2012.

4-9.7-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Statutory Lien Registration Act".

Editor's note: This section is effective upon certification by the secretary of state. (See the editor's note following the article heading.)

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 268, § 8, effective (see editor's note following the article heading).

4-9.7-102. Scope. (a) This article shall apply to the filing of a record relating to a designated statutory lien.

(b) This article shall not apply to the filing of:

(1) Notices, certificates, or other records pertaining to any lien created pursuant to the laws of the United States; or

(2) A financing statement or other record filed pursuant to article 9 or 9.5 of this title or any successor statutes.

(c) This article shall not be construed to create a filing requirement for any lien where the applicable substantive statute does not require filing.

Editor's note: This section is effective upon certification by the secretary of state. (See the editor's note following the article heading.)

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 268, § 8, effective (see editor's note following the article heading).

4-9.7-103. Definitions. (a) As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Claimant" means a person identified as a beneficiary or owner of a designated statutory lien in a notice of lien or notice of amendment filed in the office of the secretary of state pursuant to this article.

(2) "Continue" means to renew or otherwise extend the effectiveness of a notice of lien.

(3) "Designated statutory lien" means:

(A) A harvester's lien pursuant to article 24.5 of title 38, C.R.S.;

(B) An agistor's lien pursuant to part 2 of article 20 of title 38, C.R.S.;

(C) A hospital lien pursuant to article 27 of title 38, C.R.S.;

(D) A restitution lien pursuant to section 16-18.5-104, C.R.S.;

(E) A child support lien pursuant to section 14-10-122, C.R.S.;

(F) A security interest held by a housing authority pursuant to section 29-4-712, C.R.S.; or

(G) Any other lien provided for by a statute of this state that requires or expressly permits a notice or other record creating, evidencing, or perfecting the lien to be filed in the office of the secretary of state, except as provided in section 4-9.7-102 (b) and (c).

(4) "Notice of amendment" means a record filed in the office of the secretary of state pursuant to this article that changes, corrects, continues, terminates, subordinates, or otherwise modifies a notice of lien.

(5) "Notice of lien" means a record filed in the office of the secretary of state pursuant to this article that identifies one or more claimants with respect to a designated statutory lien; identifies, to the extent required by the applicable substantive statute, the property asserted to be subject to the lien; identifies the owner or owners of the property; and otherwise complies with the requirements of this article.

(6) "Owner" means a person identified in a notice of lien or notice of amendment in the office of the secretary of state pursuant to this article as an owner of property subject to a designated statutory lien.

(7) "Record", except as used in the phrases "for record", "of record", "record or legal title", and "record owner", means information that is inscribed on a tangible medium or that is stored in an electronic or other medium and is retrievable in perceivable form.

(8) "Substantive statute" means the statute creating, providing for, or giving rise to a designated statutory lien.

(9) "Taxpayer identification number" means a social security number, an employer identification number, or an individual taxpayer identification number.

(10) "Terminate" means to release or otherwise extinguish the effectiveness of a notice of lien.

Editor's note: This section is effective upon certification by the secretary of state. (See the editor's note following the article heading.)

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 269, § 8, effective (see editor's note following the article heading).

4-9.7-104. Contents of a notice of lien or notice of amendment. (a) (1) A notice of lien shall state:

(A) The name of one or more owners;

(B) The name of one or more claimants;

(C) A citation to the section of the substantive statute pursuant to which the notice of lien is filed;

(D) To the extent required by the applicable substantive statute, an identification of the property asserted to be subject to a designated statutory lien and any other information that the applicable substantive statute requires to be contained in or included with the notice of lien;

(E) That any other information or record required to be filed with the office of the secretary of state pursuant to the applicable substantive statute has been included with or attached to the notice of lien; and

(F) Such additional information as the secretary of state may require.

(2) A notice of lien may state:

(A) The mailing address of one or more owners; and

(B) The mailing address of one or more claimants.

(b) (1) A notice of amendment shall state:

(A) The original filing number of the notice of lien to which the notice of amendment relates;

(B) That any other information or record required to be filed with the office of the secretary of state pursuant to the applicable substantive statute has been included with or attached to the notice of amendment; and

(C) Any additional information that the secretary of state requires.

(2) A notice of amendment may contain any information necessary to indicate the manner and extent to which the notice of amendment affects the notice of lien.

(c) A notice of lien shall remain effective for the period provided for by the applicable substantive statute or until a notice of amendment that terminates the notice of lien is filed in the office of the secretary of state.

Editor's note: This section is effective upon certification by the secretary of state. (See the editor's note following the article heading.)

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 270, § 8, effective (see editor's note following the article heading).

4-9.7-105. Acceptance and refusal to accept for filing. (a) The secretary of state shall refuse to accept a notice of lien or notice of amendment for filing if:

(1) The applicable filing fee is not tendered;

(2) The notice is not communicated by a method of communication authorized by the secretary of state;

(3) The notice of lien does not state the name of an owner;

(4) The notice of lien does not state the name of a claimant;

(5) The notice of amendment does not indicate the original file number of the notice of lien to which the notice of amendment relates; or

(6) The notice of lien or notice of amendment fails to state any additional information that the secretary of state requires.

(b) The secretary of state may refuse to accept a notice of lien or notice of amendment for filing if the notice of lien or notice of amendment does not include the address of one or more claimants.

(c) Filing does not occur with respect to a notice of lien or notice of amendment that the secretary of state refuses to accept for a reason set forth in subsection (a) or (b) of this section.

Editor's note: This section is effective upon certification by the secretary of state. (See the editor's note following the article heading.)

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 271, § 8, effective (see editor's note following the article heading).

4-9.7-106. Duties of filing officer. (a) If a notice of lien is communicated to and accepted by the secretary of state for filing, the secretary of state shall cause the notice to be marked, maintained, and indexed in accordance with the provisions of section 4-9-519 as if the notice were a financing statement and each owner identified in the notice were a debtor within the meaning of section 4-9-519.

(b) If a notice of amendment is communicated to and accepted by the secretary of state for filing, the secretary of state shall:

(1) Cause the notice of amendment to be marked, maintained, and indexed as if the notice were an amendment of a financing statement within the meaning of section 4-9-512;

(2) If the notice of amendment terminates a notice of lien, cause the notice of amendment to be marked, maintained, and indexed as if the notice were a termination statement within the meaning of section 4-9-513; or

(3) If the notice of amendment continues a notice of lien, cause the notice of amendment to be marked, maintained, and indexed as if the notice were a continuation statement as defined in section 4-9-102 (27) and extend the effectiveness of the notice of lien by the appropriate period pursuant to the applicable substantive statute.

(c) If the secretary of state refuses to accept a notice of lien or notice of amendment for filing, the secretary of state shall communicate to the person that presented the record the fact of and reason for the refusal. The communication shall be made at the time and in the manner prescribed by the rules adopted by the secretary of state pursuant to section 4-9.7-109.

(d) The secretary of state may remove a notice of lien from the records of the secretary of state one year after the notice expires in accordance with section 4-9.7-104 (d).

(e) The secretary of state shall communicate or otherwise make available in a record the following information to any person that requests the information:

(1) Whether there is on file on a date and time specified by the secretary of state any notice of lien or notice of amendment that:

(A) Designates a particular owner; and

(B) Has not expired under section 4-9.7-104 (d); and

(C) If the request so states, has expired under section 4-9.7-104 (d) and a record of which is maintained by the secretary of state under subsection (d) of this section;

(2) The date and time of filing of each notice of lien and notice of amendment described in paragraph (1) of this subsection (e); and

(3) The information provided in each notice of lien and notice of amendment described in paragraph (1) of this subsection (e).

(2) The underlying purposes and policies of this code are:

(a) To simplify, clarify, and modernize the law governing retail installment sales, consumer credit, small loans, and usury;

(b) To provide rate ceilings to assure an adequate supply of credit to consumers;

(c) To further consumer understanding of the terms of credit transactions and to foster competition among suppliers of consumer credit so that consumers may obtain credit at reasonable cost;

(d) To protect consumer buyers, lessees, and borrowers against unfair practices by some suppliers of consumer credit, having due regard for the interests of legitimate and scrupulous creditors;

(e) To permit and encourage the development of fair and economically sound consumer credit practices;

(f) To conform the regulation of consumer credit transactions to the policies of the federal "Truth in Lending Act" and the federal "Consumer Leasing Act"; and

(g) To make uniform the law, including administrative rules, among the various jurisdictions.

(3) A reference to a requirement imposed by this code includes reference to a related rule of the administrator adopted pursuant to this code.

5-1-106. Waiver - agreement to forego rights - settlement of claims. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this code, a consumer may not waive or agree to forego rights or benefits under this code.

(2) A claim by a consumer against a creditor for an excess charge, other violation of this code, or civil penalty, or a claim against a consumer for default or breach of a duty imposed by this code, if disputed in good faith, may be settled by agreement.

(3) A claim, whether or not disputed, against a consumer, may be settled for less value than the amount claimed.

(4) A settlement in which the consumer waives or agrees to forego rights or benefits under this code is invalid if the court as a matter of law finds the settlement to have been unconscionable at the time it was made. The competence of the consumer, any deception or coercion practiced upon the consumer, the nature and extent of the legal advice received by the consumer, and the value of the consideration are relevant to the issue of unconscionability.

5-1-107. Effect of code on powers of organizations. (1) This code prescribes maximum charges for all creditors extending consumer credit except lessors and those excluded in sections 5-1-202 and 5-2-213 (2) (b) and displaces existing limitations on the powers of those creditors based on maximum charges.

(2) With respect to sellers of goods or services, small loan companies, licensed lenders, consumer and sales finance companies, industrial banks and loan companies, and commercial banks and trust companies, this code displaces existing limitations on their powers based solely on amount or duration of credit.

(3) Except as provided in subsection (1) of this section, this code does not displace limitations on powers of credit unions, savings banks, savings and loan associations, or other thrift institutions whether organized for the profit of shareholders or as mutual organizations.

(4) Except as provided in subsections (1) and (2) of this section, this code does not displace:

(a) Limitations on powers of supervised financial organizations, as defined in section 5-1-301 (45), with respect to the amount of a loan to a single borrower, the ratio of a loan to the value of collateral, the duration of a loan secured by an interest in land, or other similar restrictions designed to protect deposits; or

(b) Limitations on powers an organization is authorized to exercise under the laws of this state or the United States.

PART 2

SCOPE AND JURISDICTION

5-1-201. Territorial application - definitions. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, this code applies to consumer credit transactions made in this state and to modifications, including refinancing, consolidations, and deferrals, made in this state, of consumer credit transactions, wherever made. For purposes of this code, a consumer credit transaction is made in this state if:

(a) A written agreement evidencing the obligation or offer of the consumer is received by the creditor in this state; or

(b) A consumer who is a resident of this state enters into the transaction with a creditor who has solicited or advertised in this state by any means, including but not limited to mail, brochure, telephone, print, radio, television, internet, or any other electronic means.

(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section, unless made subject to this code by agreement of the parties, a consumer credit transaction is not made in this state if a resident of this state enters into the transaction while physically present in another state.

(3) Part 1 of article 5 of this title and sections 5-3-104 and 5-3-105 apply to actions or other proceedings brought in this state to enforce rights arising out of a consumer credit transaction, or modification thereof, wherever made.

(4) If a consumer credit transaction, or modification thereof, is made in another state with a person who is a resident of this state when the consumer credit transaction or modification is made, the following provisions apply as though the transaction occurred in this state:

(a) A creditor, or assignee of the creditor's rights, may not collect charges through actions or other proceedings in excess of those permitted by this code; and

(b) A creditor, or assignee of the creditor's rights, may not enforce rights against the consumer that violate the provisions of this code on limitations on agreements and practices.

(5) Except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, a consumer credit transaction, or modification thereof, made in another state with a person who was not a resident of this state when the consumer credit transaction or modification was made is valid and enforceable in this state according to its terms to the extent that it is valid and enforceable under the laws of the state applicable to the transaction.

(6) For the purposes of this code, the "residence" of a consumer is the address given by the consumer as the consumer's residence in any writing provided by the consumer in connection with a credit transaction. Until the consumer notifies the creditor of a new or different address, the given address is presumed to be unchanged.

(7) Notwithstanding other provisions of this section:

(a) Except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, this code does not apply if the consumer is not a resident of this state at the time of a credit transaction and the parties then agree that the law of the consumer's residence applies; and

(b) This code applies if the consumer is a resident of this state at the time of a credit transaction and the parties then agree that the law of this state applies.

(8) Except as provided in subsection (7) of this section, an agreement by a consumer is invalid with respect to consumer credit transactions, or modifications thereof, to which this code applies when such agreement provides that:

(a) The law of another state shall apply;

(b) The consumer consents to the jurisdiction of another state; or

(c) Venue is fixed.

(9) The following provisions of this code specify the applicable law governing certain cases:

(a) Section 5-6-102 on the powers and functions of the administrator; and

(b) Section 5-6-201 on notification and fees.

(10) For the purpose of subsection (1) of this section, "receive" means obtained as a result of physical delivery, transmission, or communication to one who has actual or apparent authority to act for the creditor in this state whether or not approval, acceptance, or ratification by any other agent or representative of such creditor in some other state is necessary to give legal consequence to the consumer credit transaction.

(11) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, this code applies to any consumer insurance premium loan made to a resident of this state.

5-1-202. Exclusions. (1) This code does not apply to:

(a) Extensions of credit to government or governmental agencies or instrumentalities;

(b) Except as otherwise provided in article 4 of this title, the sale of insurance if there is no legal obligation to pay installments of the premium and the insurance may terminate or be canceled after nonpayment of an installment of the premium;

(c) Transactions under public utility or common carrier tariffs if a subdivision or agency of this state or of the United States regulates the charges for the services involved, the charges for delayed payment, and any discount allowed for early payment;

(d) (I) With respect to contracts for purchase entered into by a pawnbroker, as the terms are defined in section 12-56-101, C.R.S., the rates and charges, and the disclosure of rates and charges, if the rates and charges do not exceed the fixed price permitted by section 12-56-101 (2), C.R.S. The exclusion in this subparagraph (I) applies to pawnbrokers who are:

(A) Licensed by a local licensing authority pursuant to section 12-56-102, C.R.S.; or

(B) Regulated, with respect to rates and charges, by a local governing authority pursuant to section 12-56-102, C.R.S.

(II) The exclusion in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (d) also applies to pawnbrokers authorized to make supervised loans under section 5-2-301 with respect to contracts for purchase; except that the exclusion does not apply to the disclosure of rates and charges of pawnbrokers authorized to make supervised loans.

(e) The disclosure of rates and charges in connection with transactions in securities and commodities accounts by a broker-dealer registered with the securities and exchange commission;

(f) Loans made, originated, disbursed, serviced, or guaranteed by an agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision of the state pursuant to article 3.1 of title 23, C.R.S.

5-1-203. Jurisdiction and service of process. (1) The court of record of any judicial district in this state may exercise jurisdiction over any creditor with respect to any conduct in this state governed by this code or with respect to any claim arising from a transaction subject to this code. In addition to any other method provided by the Colorado rules of civil procedure or by statute, personal jurisdiction over a creditor may be acquired in a civil action or proceeding instituted in the court of record by the service of process in the manner provided by this section.

(2) If a creditor is not a resident of this state or is a corporation not authorized to do business in this state and engages in any conduct in this state governed by this code or engages in a transaction subject to this code, the creditor may designate an agent upon whom service of process may be made in this state. The agent shall be a resident of this state or a corporation authorized to do business in this state. The designation shall be in writing and filed with the secretary of state. If no designation is made and filed or if process cannot be served in this state upon the designated agent, process may be served upon the secretary of state, but service upon the secretary of state is not effective unless the plaintiff or petitioner forthwith mails a copy of the process and pleading by registered or certified mail to the defendant or respondent at his or her last reasonably ascertainable address. An affidavit of compliance with this section shall be filed with the clerk of the court on or before the return day of the process, if any, or within any further time the court allows.

5-1-301. General definitions. In addition to definitions appearing in subsequent articles, as used in this code, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Actuarial method" means the method, defined by rules promulgated by the administrator in accordance with article 4 of title 24, C.R.S., of allocating payments made on a debt between the amount financed and finance charge pursuant to which a payment is applied first to the accumulated finance charge and the balance subtracted from, or any deficiency is added to, the unpaid balance of the amount financed.

(2) "Administrator" means the administrator designated in section 5-6-103.

(3) "Agreement" means the bargain of the parties in fact as found in their language or by implication from other circumstances including course of dealing or usage of trade or course of performance.

(4) "Agricultural purpose" means a purpose related to the production, harvest, exhibition, marketing, transportation, processing, or manufacture of agricultural products by a natural person who cultivates, plants, propagates, or nurtures the agricultural products. "Agricultural products" includes agricultural, horticultural, viticultural, and dairy products, livestock, wildlife, poultry, bees, forest products, fish and shellfish, and any products thereof, including processed and manufactured products, and any and all products raised or produced on farms and any processed or manufactured products thereof.

(5) "Amount financed" means the total of the following items to the extent that payment is deferred:

(a) In the case of a sale:

(I) The cash price of the goods, services, or interest in land, less the amount of any down payment whether made in cash or in property traded in; and

(II) The amount actually paid or to be paid by the seller pursuant to an agreement with the buyer to discharge a security interest in or a lien on property traded in;

(b) In the case of a loan:

(I) The net amount paid to, receivable by, or paid or payable for the account of the debtor; and

(II) The amount of any discount excluded from the finance charge described in paragraph (c) of subsection (20) of this section; and

(c) In the case of a sale or loan, to the extent that payment is deferred and the amount is not otherwise included in the cash price:

(I) Any applicable sales, use, excise, or documentary stamp taxes;

(II) Amounts actually paid or to be paid by the creditor for registration, certificate of title, or license fees; and

(III) Additional charges permitted by this code described in section 5-2-202.

(6) "Business day" means any calendar day except Sunday, New Year's day, the third Monday in January observed as the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Washington-Lincoln day, Memorial day, Independence day, Labor day, Columbus day, Veterans' day, Thanksgiving day, and Christmas day.

(7) (a) "Cash price" means, except as the administrator may otherwise prescribe by rule promulgated in accordance with article 4 of title 24, C.R.S., the price at which goods, services, or an interest in land is offered for sale by the seller to cash buyers in the ordinary course of business and may include the cash price of accessories or related services such as delivery, installation, servicing, repairs, alterations, modifications, and improvements and, if individually itemized, may also include:

(I) Applicable sales, use, and excise and documentary stamp taxes; and

(II) Amounts actually paid or to be paid by the seller for registration, certificate of title, or license fees.

(b) The cash price stated by the seller to the buyer pursuant to the provisions on disclosure contained in section 5-3-101 is presumed to be the cash price.

(8) "Closing costs" with respect to a debt secured by an interest in land includes:

(a) Fees or premiums for title examination, title insurance, or similar purposes including surveys;

(b) Fees for preparation of a deed, settlement statement, or other documents;

(c) Escrows for future payments of taxes and insurance;

(d) Fees for notarizing deeds and other documents;

(e) Appraisal fees; and

(f) Credit reports.

(9) "Conspicuous" means a term or clause that is so written that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to have noticed it. Whether a term or clause is conspicuous or not is for decision by the court. A printed heading in capitals (as: WARRANTY) is conspicuous, and language in the body of the form is conspicuous if it is in larger or other contrasting type or color. In a telegram, any stated term is conspicuous.

(10) "Consumer" means a person other than an organization who is the buyer, lessee, or debtor to whom credit is granted in a consumer credit transaction.

(11) (a) "Consumer credit sale" means, except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (11), a sale of goods, services, a mobile home, or an interest in land in which:

(I) Credit is granted or arranged by a person who regularly engages as a seller in credit transactions of the same kind or pursuant to a seller credit card;

(II) The buyer is a person other than an organization;

(III) The goods, services, mobile home, or interest in land are purchased primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose;

(IV) Either the debt is by written agreement payable in installments or a finance charge is made; and

(V) With respect to a sale of goods or services, the amount financed does not exceed seventy-five thousand dollars.

(b) Unless the sale is made subject to this code by section 5-2-501, "consumer credit sale" does not include:

(I) A sale in which the seller allows the buyer to purchase goods or services pursuant to a lender credit card or similar arrangement;

(II) (A) Except as required by the federal "Truth in Lending Act" or the federal "Consumer Leasing Act" with respect to disclosure contained in section 5-3-101 and consumers' remedies for transactions secured by interests in land as contained in section 5-5-204, a sale of a mobile home or a sale of an interest in land if the finance charge does not exceed twelve percent per year calculated according to the actuarial method on the unpaid balances of the amount financed on the assumption that the debt will be paid according to the agreed terms and will not be paid before the end of the agreed term or, notwithstanding the rate of the finance charge with respect to the sale of an interest in land, the sale is secured by a first mortgage or deed of trust lien against a dwelling to finance the acquisition of that dwelling.

(B) For the purposes of this subparagraph (II), "dwelling" means any improved real property or portion thereof that is used or intended to be used as a residence and contains not more than four dwelling units, and "first mortgage or deed of trust" means a mortgage or deed of trust having priority as a lien over the lien of any other mortgage or deed of trust on the same dwelling and subject to the lien of taxes levied on that dwelling.

(III) A sale for a business, investment, or commercial purpose; or

(IV) A sale primarily for an agricultural purpose.

(12) "Consumer credit transaction" means a consumer credit sale or consumer loan, or a refinancing or consolidation thereof, or a consumer lease.

(13) "Consumer insurance premium loan" means a consumer loan that:

(a) Is made for the sole purpose of financing the payment by or on behalf of an insured of the premium on one or more policies or contracts issued by or on behalf of an insurer;

(b) Is secured by an assignment by the insured to the lender of the unearned premium on the policy or contract; and

(c) Contains an authorization to cancel the policy or contract so financed.

(14) (a) "Consumer lease" means a lease of goods and includes any insurance incidental to the lease and any other services merely incidental to upkeep or repair of the goods:

(I) That a lessor regularly engaged in the business of leasing makes to a person, other than an organization, who takes under the lease primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose;

(II) In which the amount payable under the lease does not exceed seventy-five thousand dollars; and

(III) That is for a term exceeding four months.

(b) "Consumer lease" does not include a lease made pursuant to a lender credit card or similar arrangement.

(15) (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (15) and except with respect to a "loan primarily secured by an interest in land" as defined in subsection (26) of this section, "consumer loan" means a loan made or arranged by a person regularly engaged in the business of making loans in which:

(I) The consumer is a person other than an organization;

(II) The debt is incurred primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose;

(III) Either the debt is by written agreement payable in installments or a finance charge is made; and

(IV) Either the principal does not exceed seventy-five thousand dollars or the debt is secured by an interest in land.

(b) Unless the loan is made subject to this code by an agreement described in section 5-2-501, "consumer loan" does not include:

(I) A loan for a business, investment, or commercial purpose;

(II) A loan primarily for an agricultural purpose; or

(III) A reverse mortgage as defined in section 11-38-102, C.R.S.

(c) Unless the loan is made subject to this code by an agreement described in section 5-2-501 and except as provided with respect to the disclosure described in section 5-3-101, consumers' remedies for transactions secured by interests in land as described in section 5-5-204, and powers and functions of the administrator under part 1 of article 6 of this title, "consumer loan" does not include a "loan primarily secured by an interest in land" as defined in subsection (26) of this section.

(16) "Credit" means the right granted by a creditor to a consumer to defer payment of debt or to incur debt and defer its payment.

(16.5) "Credit card" means a lender credit card or a seller credit card, except as otherwise provided in this code.

(17) "Creditor" means the seller, lessor, lender, or person who makes or arranges a consumer credit transaction and to whom the transaction is initially payable, or the assignee of a creditor's right to payment, but use of the term does not in itself impose on an assignee any obligation of his or her assignor. In case of credit granted pursuant to a credit card, "creditor" means the card issuer and not another person honoring the credit card.

(18) "Dwelling" means a residential structure or mobile home that contains one to four family housing units or individual units of condominiums or cooperatives.

(19) "Earnings" means compensation paid or payable to an individual or for the individual's account for personal services rendered or to be rendered by the individual, whether denominated as wages, salary, fees, commission, bonus, or otherwise, and includes periodic payments pursuant to a pension, retirement, or disability program.

(20) "Finance charge" means:

(a) The sum of all charges payable directly or indirectly by the consumer and imposed directly or indirectly by the creditor as an incident to or as a condition of the extension of credit, whether paid or payable by the consumer, the creditor, or any other person on behalf of the consumer to the creditor or to a third party, including any of the following types of charges that are applicable:

(I) Interest or any amount payable under a point, discount, or other system of charges, however denominated;

(II) Time-price differential, credit service, service, carrying, or other charge, however denominated;

(III) Premium, or other charge for any guarantee or insurance protecting the creditor against the consumer's default or other credit loss; and

(IV) Charges incurred for investigating the collateral or credit-worthiness of the consumer or for commissions or brokerage for obtaining the credit.

(b) The term does not include charges as a result of default described in section 5-3-302, additional charges described in section 5-2-202, delinquency charges described in section 5-2-203, or deferral charges described in section 5-2-204.

(c) If a creditor makes a loan to a consumer by purchasing or satisfying obligations of the consumer pursuant to a credit card or similar arrangement and the purchase or satisfaction is made at less than the face amount of the obligation, the discount is not part of the finance charge.

(21) "Goods" includes goods not in existence at the time the transaction is entered into and merchandise certificates but excludes money, chattel paper, documents of title, and instruments.

(22) "Investment purpose" means that the primary purpose of the credit sale or loan is for future financial gain rather than for a present personal, family, or household use.

(23) "Lender" includes an assignee of the lender's right to payment, unless otherwise provided in this code, but use of the term does not in itself impose on an assignee any obligation of the lender with respect to events occurring before the assignment.

(24) "Lender credit card or similar arrangement" means an arrangement or loan agreement, other than a seller credit card, pursuant to which a lender gives a consumer the privilege of using a credit card, letter of credit, or other credit confirmation or identification in transactions out of which debt arises:

(a) By the lender's honoring a draft or similar order for the payment of money drawn or accepted by the consumer;

(b) By the lender's payment or agreement to pay the consumer's obligations; or

(c) By the lender's purchase from the obligee of the consumer's obligations.

(25) "Loan" includes:

(a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (25):

(I) The creation of debt by the lender's payment of or agreement to pay money to the consumer or to a third party for the account of the consumer;

(II) The creation of debt by a credit to an account with the lender upon which the consumer is entitled to draw immediately;

(III) The creation of debt pursuant to a lender credit card in any manner, including a cash advance or the card issuer's honoring a draft or similar order for the payment of money drawn or accepted by the consumer, paying or agreeing to pay the consumer's obligation, or purchasing or otherwise acquiring the consumer's obligation from the obligee or his or her assignees;

(IV) The forbearance of debt arising from a loan; and

(V) The creation of debt by a cash advance to a consumer pursuant to a seller credit card.

(b) "Loan" does not include:

(I) A card issuer's payment or agreement to pay money to a third person for the account of a consumer if the debt of the consumer arises from a sale or lease and results from use of a seller credit card; or

(II) The forbearance of debt arising from a sale or lease.

(26) (a) "Loan primarily secured by an interest in land" means a consumer loan secured by a mobile home or primarily secured by an interest in land if, at the time the loan is made the value of the collateral is substantial in relation to the amount of the loan, and:

(I) The rate of the finance charge does not exceed twelve percent per year calculated according to the actuarial method on the unpaid balances of the principal on the assumption that the debt will be paid according to the agreed terms and will not be paid before the end of the agreed term; or

(II) Notwithstanding the rate of the finance charge, and other than a precomputed loan as defined in subsection (35) of this section, the loan is secured by a first mortgage or deed of trust lien against a dwelling to:

(A) Finance the acquisition of that dwelling; or

(B) To refinance, by amendment, payoff, or otherwise, an existing loan made to finance the acquisition of that dwelling, including a refinance loan providing additional sums for any purpose whether or not related to acquisition or construction.

(b) As to any refinance loan in the form of a revolving loan account that is in whole or in part for purposes other than acquisition or construction, section 5-3-103 shall apply.

(c) With respect to loans secured by a first mortgage or deed of trust lien against a dwelling to refinance an existing loan to finance the acquisition of the dwelling and providing additional sums for any other purpose that are not subject to this code pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (26), the lender shall disclose to the consumer that the refinance loan creates a lien against the dwelling or property and that the limits set forth in section 5-5-112 on the amount of attorney fees that a lender may charge the consumer are not applicable.

(d) For purposes of this subsection (26):

(I) A "loan secured by a first mortgage or deed of trust lien against a dwelling to finance the acquisition of the dwelling" includes a loan secured by a first mortgage or deed of trust lien against a dwelling to finance the original construction of such dwelling or to refinance any such construction loan;

(II) "Dwelling" means any improved real property, or portion thereof, that is used or intended to be used as a residence and contains not more than four dwelling units; and

(III) "First mortgage or deed of trust" means a mortgage or deed of trust having priority as a lien over the lien of any other mortgage or deed of trust on the same dwelling and subject to the lien of taxes levied on that dwelling.

(27) "Material disclosures" means the disclosure, as required by this code, of the annual percentage rate, the method of determining the finance charge and the balance upon which a finance charge will be imposed, the amount of the finance charge, the amount to be financed, the total of payments, the number and amount of payments, and the due dates or periods of payments scheduled to repay the indebtedness.

(28) "Merchandise certificate" means a writing not redeemable in cash and usable in its face amount in lieu of cash in exchange for goods or services.

(29) "Mobile home" means a dwelling that is built on a chassis designed for long-term residential occupancy, that is capable of being installed in a permanent or semi-permanent location, with or without a permanent foundation, and with major appliances and plumbing, gas, and electrical systems installed but needing the appropriate connections to make them operable, and that may be occasionally drawn over the public highways, by special permit, as a unit or in sections to its permanent or semi-permanent location.

(30) "Official fees" means:

(b) Premiums payable for insurance in lieu of perfecting a security interest otherwise required by the creditor in connection with the consumer credit transaction if the premium does not exceed the fees and charges described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (30) that would otherwise be payable.

(31) "Organization" means a corporation, limited liability company, government or governmental subdivision or agency, trust, estate, partnership, limited liability partnership, cooperative, or association.

(32) "Payable in installments" means that payment is required or permitted by agreement to be made in more than four periodic payments, excluding a down payment. If any periodic payment other than the down payment under an agreement requiring or permitting two or more periodic payments is more than twice the amount of any other periodic payment, excluding the down payment, the consumer credit transaction is "payable in installments".

(33) "Person" includes a natural person or an individual and an organization.

(34) (a) "Person related to" means, with respect to an individual, the spouse of the individual; a brother, brother-in-law, sister, or sister-in-law of the individual; an ancestor or lineal descendant of the individual or the individual's spouse; and any other relative, by blood or marriage, of the individual or the individual's spouse who shares the same home with the individual.

(b) "Person related to" means, with respect to an organization, a person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the organization; an officer or director of the organization or a person performing similar functions with respect to the organization or to a person related to the organization; the spouse of a person related to the organization; and a relative by blood or marriage of a person related to the organization who shares the same home with such person.

(35) "Precomputed" means a consumer credit sale or consumer loan in which the debt is expressed as a sum comprising the amount financed and the amount of the finance charge computed in advance or in which any portion of the finance charge is prepaid and the amount of that portion of the finance charge either computed in advance or prepaid constitutes more than one-half of the total finance charge applicable to the consumer credit sale or consumer loan.

(36) "Presumed" or "presumption" means that the trier of fact must find the existence of the fact presumed unless and until evidence is introduced that would support a finding of its nonexistence.

(37) "Regularly" has the same meaning as stated in the federal "Truth in Lending Act" and the federal "Consumer Leasing Act".

(38) "Revolving credit" means an arrangement pursuant to which:

(a) A creditor may permit a consumer, from time to time, to purchase or lease on credit from the creditor or to obtain loans from the creditor;

(b) The amounts financed and the finance and other appropriate charges are debited to an account;

(c) The finance charge, if made, is computed on the account periodically; and

(d) Either the consumer has the privilege of paying in full or in installments or the creditor periodically imposes charges computed on the account for delaying payment and permits the consumer to continue to purchase or lease on credit.

(39) "Sale of goods" includes any agreement in the form of a bailment or lease of goods if the bailee or lessee agrees to pay as compensation for use a sum substantially equivalent to or in excess of the aggregate value of the goods involved and it is agreed that the bailee or lessee will become, or for no other or a nominal consideration has the option to become, the owner of the goods upon full compliance with his or her obligations under the agreement.

(40) "Sale of an interest in land" includes a lease in which the lessee has an option to purchase the interest and all or a substantial part of the rental or other payments previously made by him are applied to the purchase price.

(41) "Sale of services" means furnishing or agreeing to furnish services and includes making arrangements to have services furnished by another.

(42) "Seller", except as otherwise provided, includes an assignee of the seller's right to payment, but use of the term does not in itself impose on an assignee any obligation of the seller with respect to events occurring before the assignment.

(43) "Seller credit card" means an arrangement pursuant to which a person gives to a buyer or lessee the privilege of using a credit card, letter of credit, or other credit confirmation or identification primarily for the purpose of purchasing or leasing goods or services from that person or from that person and any other person.

(44) "Services" includes:

(a) Work, labor, and other personal services;

(b) Privileges with respect to transportation, hotel and restaurant accommodations, education, entertainment, recreation, physical culture, hospital accommodations, funerals, cemetery accommodations, and the like; and

(c) Insurance provided by a person other than the insurer.

(45) "Supervised financial organization" means a person, other than an insurance company or other organization primarily engaged in an insurance business:

(a) Organized, chartered, or holding an authorization certificate under the laws of any state or of the United States that authorize the person to make loans and to receive deposits, including a savings, share, certificate, or deposit account; and

(b) Subject to supervision by an official or agency of any state or of the United States.

(46) "Supervised lender" means a person authorized to make or take assignments of supervised loans under a license issued by the administrator or as a supervised financial organization.

(47) "Supervised loan" means a consumer loan, including a loan made pursuant to a revolving credit account, in which the rate of the finance charge exceeds twelve percent per year as determined according to the provisions on finance charges contained in section 5-2-201.

(48) "Written" or "in writing" means any record conveying information and that is in a form the consumer may retain, or is capable of being displayed in visual text in a form the consumer may retain, including paper, electronic, digital, magnetic, optical, and electromagnetic.

5-2-102. Scope. For purposes of this article, "consumer credit transaction" applies to consumer loans, including supervised loans, consumer credit sales, and refinancing and consolidations of these transactions but does not include consumer leases except for the charges and procedures in sections 5-2-202 and 5-2-203. The provisions concerning credit card surcharges contained in section 5-2-212 apply to all sales and leases.

PART 2

MAXIMUM FINANCE CHARGES AND OTHER FEES AND CHARGES

5-2-201. Finance charge for consumer credit transactions. (1) With respect to a consumer loan other than a supervised loan, including a revolving loan, a lender may contract for and receive a finance charge calculated according to the actuarial method not exceeding twelve percent per year on the unpaid balance of the amount financed.

(2) With respect to a supervised loan or a consumer credit sale, except for a loan or sale pursuant to a revolving account, a supervised lender or seller may contract for and receive a finance charge, calculated according to the actuarial method, not exceeding the equivalent of the greater of either of the following:

(a) The total of:

(I) Thirty-six percent per year on that part of the unpaid balances of the amount financed that is one thousand dollars or less;

(II) Twenty-one percent per year on that part of the unpaid balances of the amount financed that is more than one thousand dollars but does not exceed three thousand dollars; and

(III) Fifteen percent per year on that part of the unpaid balances of the amount financed that is more than three thousand dollars; or

(b) Twenty-one percent per year on the unpaid balances of the amount financed.

(3) (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (3), the finance charge for a supervised loan or consumer credit sale pursuant to a revolving credit account, calculated according to the actuarial method, may not exceed twenty-one percent per year on the unpaid balance of the amount financed.

(b) Notwithstanding paragraph (a) of this subsection (3), if there is an unpaid balance on the date as of which the finance charge is applied, the creditor may contract for and receive a minimum finance charge not exceeding fifty cents.

(4) (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (4), this section does not limit or restrict the manner of contracting for the finance charge, whether by way of add-on, discount, single annual percentage rate, or otherwise, so long as the rate of the finance charge does not exceed that permitted by this section.

(b) A seller or lender may contract for the payment by a consumer of a prepaid finance charge. In addition to any other disclosure required by this code, a seller or lender shall disclose to the consumer the amount of any such prepaid finance charge.

(c) If the consumer credit transaction is precomputed:

(I) The finance charge may be calculated on the assumption that all scheduled payments will be made when due;

(II) The effect of prepayment is governed by the provisions on rebate upon prepayment contained in section 5-2-211.

(5) Except as provided in subsection (8) of this section, the term of a consumer credit transaction, for the purposes of this section, commences on the date the consumer credit transaction is made. Differences in the lengths of months are disregarded and a day may be counted as one-thirtieth of a month. Subject to classifications and differentiations the creditor may reasonably establish, a part of a month in excess of fifteen days may be treated as a full month if periods of fifteen days or less are disregarded and that procedure is not consistently used to obtain a greater yield than would otherwise be permitted.

(6) Subject to classifications and differentiations the creditor may reasonably establish, the creditor may make the same finance charge on all amounts financed within a specified range. A finance charge so made does not violate this section if:

(a) When applied to the median amount within each range, it does not exceed the maximum permitted in this section; and

(b) When applied to the lowest amount within each range, it does not produce a rate of finance charge exceeding the rate calculated according to paragraph (a) of this subsection (6) by more than eight percent of such rate.

(7) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (1), (2), and (3) of this section, the creditor, in connection with a consumer credit transaction other than a deferred deposit loan as defined in section 5-3.1-102 (3) or one pursuant to a revolving credit account, may contract for and receive a minimum loan finance charge of not more than twenty-five dollars.

(8) With respect to a consumer insurance premium loan, the term of the loan commences on the earliest inception date of a policy or contract of insurance on which payment of the premium is financed by the loan.

Defendant was entitled to charge 21% interest with respect to installment payments on the purchase of vehicles from a used-car dealership. Transaction was a consumer credit sale, not a consumer loan, so defendant who was an assignee of the dealership was legally entitled to charge 21% interest under this section. De La Rosa v. Western Funding, Inc., 24 P.3d 637 (Colo. App. 2001).

5-2-202. Additional charges. (1) In addition to the finance charge permitted by this article and in a consumer lease, a creditor may contract for and receive the following additional charges in connection with a consumer credit transaction:

(a) Official fees and taxes;

(b) Charges for insurance as described in subsection (3) of this section;

(c) Annual charges, payable in advance, for the privilege of using a credit card or similar arrangement;

(d) Charges for other benefits conferred on the consumer, including insurance, if the benefits are of value to the consumer and if the charges are reasonable in relation to the benefits, are of a type that is not for credit, and are authorized as permissible additional charges by rule adopted by the administrator;

(e) The following charges if agreed to by the parties:

(I) A charge, not to exceed the greater of two dollars or two and one-half percent of the amount advanced, for each cash advance transaction made pursuant to a credit card; and

(II) A fee, not to exceed twenty-five dollars, assessed upon return or dishonor of a check or other instrument tendered as payment.

(2) No finance charge may be assessed on any charge listed in paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section.

(3) An additional charge may be made for insurance written in connection with the transaction, other than insurance protecting the creditor against the consumer's default or other credit loss, if:

(a) With respect to insurance against loss of or damage to property or against liability, the creditor furnishes a clear and specific statement in writing to the consumer setting forth the cost of the insurance if obtained from or through the creditor and stating that the consumer may choose the person through whom the insurance is to be obtained; and

(b) With respect to consumer credit insurance providing life, accident, or health coverage, the insurance coverage is not a factor in the approval by the creditor of the extension of credit and this fact is clearly disclosed in writing to the consumer and if, in order to obtain the insurance in connection with the extension of credit, the consumer gives specific affirmative written indication of the consumer's desire to do so after written disclosure to the consumer of the cost thereof.

(4) With respect to a debt secured by an interest in land, bona fide and reasonable closing costs described in section 5-1-301 (8) are additional charges.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-2-202, as it existed prior to 2000.

ANNOTATION

National Bank Act preempts this section to the extent that an out-of-state national bank may "export" a favorable interest rate from the state in which it is located. Copeland v. MBNA Am., N.A., 883 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1994) (decided prior to 2000 repeal and reenactment).

Applied in Empire Sav., Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Otero Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 640 P.2d 1151 (Colo. 1982) (decided prior to 2000 repeal and reenactment).

5-2-203. Delinquency charges. (1) With respect to a consumer credit transaction, the parties may contract for a delinquency charge on any installment or minimum payment not paid in full within ten days after its scheduled due date in an amount not exceeding:

(a) Fifteen dollars for a transaction not secured by an interest in land; except that, if the transaction is precomputed, the amount may not exceed the greater of fifteen dollars or the deferral charge described in section 5-2-204 (1) that would be permitted to defer the unpaid amount of the installment for the period that it is delinquent; or

(b) Five percent of the unpaid amount of the installment or minimum payment due for a transaction secured by an interest in land.

(2) A delinquency charge under this section may be collected only once on an installment or minimum payment however long it remains in default. No delinquency charge may be collected if the installment or minimum payment has been deferred and a deferral charge described in section 5-2-204 has been paid or incurred until ten days after the deferred due date. A delinquency charge may be collected at the time it accrues or at any time thereafter.

(3) No delinquency charge may be collected on an installment or minimum payment that is paid in full within ten days after its scheduled installment due date even though an earlier maturing installment, minimum payment, or a delinquency charge on an earlier installment or minimum payment may not have been paid in full. For purposes of this subsection (3), payments are applied first to current installments or minimum payments due and then to delinquent installments or minimum payments due.

(4) (a) A creditor who has imposed a delinquency charge shall notify the consumer in writing of the amount of the delinquency charge assessed as follows:

(I) Before the due date of the next scheduled payment;

(II) If the creditor provides the consumer with periodic statements for each installment, on or with the next periodic statement provided to the consumer after the delinquency charge has been assessed; or

(III) For a revolving credit account for which a credit card is issued and that is not secured by an interest in land, before, on, or with the next periodic statement after the delinquency charge has been assessed.

(b) A creditor shall not assess a delinquency charge unless the delinquency charge is assessed within thirty days after the scheduled due date of any installment not paid in full or, for a revolving credit account for which a credit card is issued and that is not secured by an interest in land, within ninety days after the scheduled due date of the delinquent minimum payment.

(5) No finance charge may be assessed on any delinquency charge. For purposes of this section, for revolving credit, an installment is the minimum payment that the debtor is required to make during any billing cycle excluding any past-due amount from any previous billing cycle.

(6) If two installments or parts thereof of a precomputed transaction are in default for ten days or more, the creditor may elect to convert the transaction from a precomputed transaction to one in which the finance charge is based on unpaid balances, and the terms of the converted transaction shall be no less favorable to the consumer than the terms of the original transaction. In this event the creditor shall make a rebate pursuant to the provisions on rebate upon prepayment contained in section 5-2-211 as of the maturity date of the first delinquent installment and thereafter may make a finance charge as authorized by the provisions on finance charges. The amount of the rebate shall not be reduced by the amount of any permitted minimum charge described in section 5-2-201. If the creditor proceeds under this subsection (6), any delinquency or deferral charges made with respect to installments due at or after the maturity date of the first delinquent installment shall be rebated and no further delinquency or deferral charges shall be made.

ANNOTATION

Section 521 of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 preempted plaintiff's claims against a Delaware bank that the bank's late charges violated this section and § 5-5-202. Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., 888 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1994) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2000 repeal and reenactment).

"Interest" under § 521 of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 includes late fees and, therefore, Colorado law is preempted by the federal law with respect to late charges. Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., 888 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1994); Richardson v. Citibank (S.D.), N.A., 908 P.2d 532 (Colo. 1995); Smiley v. Citibank (S.D.), 517 U.S. 735 (1996) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2000 repeal and reenactment).

Plaintiff's common law challenges were preempted by § 521 of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 since that law creates an exclusive federal remedy and an exclusive federal remedy is inconsistent with the idea that a plaintiff can seek relief under state common law theories. Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., 888 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1994) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2000 repeal and reenactment).

National Bank Act preempts this section to the extent that an out-of-state national bank may "export" a favorable interest rate from the state in which it is located. Copeland v. MBNA Am., N.A., 883 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1994) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2000 repeal and reenactment).

Section 86 of the National Bank Act of 1982 authorizes a national bank to charge interest at the rate allowed by the laws of the state where the bank is located. Copeland v. MBNA Am. Bank, N.A., 907 P.2d 87 (Colo. 1995) (decided under law in effect prior to 1993 amendment).

"Interest" under § 85 of the National Bank Act of 1982, includes late payment fees and, therefore, a national bank located in Delaware is authorized to charge such fees to a Colorado cardmember despite the fact that Colorado law prohibits late payment fees in addition to finance charges. Copeland v. MBNA Am. Bank, N.A., 907 P.2d 87 (Colo. 1995) (decided under law in effect prior to 1993 amendment).

5-2-204. Deferral charges. (1) With respect to a precomputed consumer credit transaction, the parties before or after default may agree in writing to a deferral of all or part of one or more unpaid installments, and the creditor may make and collect a charge not exceeding the rate previously stated to the consumer pursuant to the provisions on disclosure contained in section 5-3-101 applied to the amount or amounts deferred for the period of deferral calculated without regard to differences in the lengths of months, but proportionally for a part of a month, counting each day as one-thirtieth of a month. A deferral charge may be collected at the time it is assessed or at any time thereafter.

(2) The creditor, in addition to the deferral charge, may make appropriate additional charges described in section 5-2-202, and the amount of these charges that is not paid in cash may be added to the amount deferred for the purpose of calculating the deferral charge.

(3) The parties may agree in writing at the time of a precomputed consumer credit transaction that, if an installment is not paid within ten days after its due date, the creditor may unilaterally grant a deferral and make charges as provided in this section. No deferral charge may be made for a period after the date that the creditor elects to accelerate the maturity of the agreement.

(4) A delinquency charge made by the creditor on an installment may not be retained if a deferral charge is made pursuant to this section with respect to the period of delinquency.

(5) A deferral charge made according to this section is earned pro rata during the period in which no installment is scheduled to be paid by reason of the deferral and is fully earned on the last day of that period.

5-2-205. Finance charge on refinancing. (1) With respect to a consumer credit transaction, the creditor may by agreement with the consumer refinance the unpaid balance and may contract for and receive a finance charge based on the amount financed resulting from the refinancing at a rate not exceeding that permitted by the provisions on finance charges. For the purpose of determining the finance charge permitted, the amount financed resulting from the refinancing comprises the following:

(a) If the transaction was not precomputed, the total of the unpaid balance and the accrued charges on the date of the refinancing, or, if the transaction was precomputed, the amount that the consumer would have been required to pay upon prepayment pursuant to the provisions on rebate upon prepayment contained in section 5-2-211 on the date of refinancing; except that, for the purpose of computing this amount, no minimum charge described in section 5-2-201 shall be allowed; and

5-2-206. Finance charge on consolidation. If a consumer owes an unpaid balance to a creditor with respect to a consumer credit transaction and becomes obligated on another consumer credit transaction with the same creditor, the parties may agree to a consolidation resulting in a single schedule of payments. If the previous consumer credit transaction was not precomputed, the parties may agree to add the unpaid amount of the amount financed and accrued charges on the date of consolidation to the amount financed with respect to the subsequent consumer credit transaction. If the previous consumer credit transaction was precomputed, the parties may agree to refinance the unpaid balance pursuant to the provisions on refinancing contained in section 5-2-205 and to consolidate the amount financed resulting from the refinancing by adding it to the amount financed with respect to the subsequent consumer credit transaction. In either case, the creditor may contract for and receive a finance charge based on the aggregate amount financed resulting from the consolidation at a rate not in excess of that permitted by the provisions on finance charges.

5-2-207. Prepaid finance charge. (1) Subject to the provisions of subsection (2) of this section, a creditor may contract for the payment by the consumer of a prepaid finance charge; except that the total finance charge contracted for and received by the creditor shall not exceed that permitted for consumer credit transactions.

(2) With respect to a refinancing pursuant to section 5-2-205 or consolidation pursuant to section 5-2-206 of a previous consumer credit transaction for which a prepaid finance charge was imposed, if said refinancing or consolidation is consummated within one year after the previous transaction, a new prepaid finance charge may be imposed:

(a) Only on that portion of the aggregate amount financed resulting from the refinancing or consolidation that exceeds the unpaid balance of the previous transaction determined in accordance with the provisions of section 5-2-205 or section 5-2-206, whichever is appropriate; or

(b) On the aggregate amount financed resulting from the refinancing or consolidation; except that any unearned portion of the prepaid finance charge imposed in connection with the previous transaction shall be rebated to the consumer in accordance with the actuarial method as defined in section 5-1-301 and applicable rules adopted by the administrator.

5-2-208. Conversion to revolving account. The parties may agree to add to a revolving account the unpaid balance of a consumer credit transaction not made pursuant to a revolving account. The unpaid balance is an amount equal to the amount financed determined according to the provisions on refinancing contained in section 5-2-205.

5-2-209. Advances to perform covenants of consumer. (1) If the agreement with respect to a consumer credit transaction contains covenants by the consumer to perform certain duties pertaining to insuring or preserving collateral, and the creditor pursuant to the agreement pays for performance of the duties on behalf of the consumer, the creditor may add the amounts paid to the debt if:

(a) The expenditure is reasonable to protect the risk of loss or damage to the property;

(b) The creditor has mailed to the consumer, at the consumer's last known address, written notice of the consumer's nonperformance and has given the consumer reasonable opportunity after such notice to so perform; and

(c) In the absence of performance, the creditor has made all expenditures on behalf of the consumer in good faith and in a commercially reasonable manner.

(2) Within a reasonable time after advancing any sums, the creditor shall state to the consumer in writing the amount of the sums advanced, any charges with respect to this amount, and any revised payment schedule, and, if the duties of the consumer performed by the creditor pertain to insurance, a brief description of the insurance paid for by the creditor including the type and amount of coverage. No further information need be given.

(3) A finance charge may be made for sums advanced pursuant to this section at a rate not exceeding the rate stated to the consumer pursuant to the provisions on disclosure contained in section 5-3-101 with respect to the consumer credit transaction; except that, with respect to a revolving account, the amount of the advance may be added to the unpaid balance of the debt and the creditor may make a finance charge not exceeding that permitted by the provisions on finance charges.

5-2-210. Right to prepay. Subject to the provisions on rebate upon prepayment contained in section 5-2-211, the consumer may prepay in full, or in part if payment is no less than five dollars, the unpaid balance of a consumer credit transaction at any time without penalty. A payment in the amount of a scheduled installment, other than the last scheduled installment, not identified by the consumer as a partial prepayment shall not be deemed to be a partial prepayment regardless of when the payment is made if the amount equals the next scheduled installment. If such a payment is applied by the creditor to the scheduled installment, the payment shall be deemed to have been made on the due date for the scheduled installment to which it was applied.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Empire Sav., Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Otero Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 640 P.2d 1151 (Colo. 1982) (decided prior to 2000 repeal and reenactment).

5-2-211. Rebate upon prepayment - definitions. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, upon prepayment in full of the unpaid balance of a precomputed consumer credit transaction, an amount not less than the unearned portion of the finance charge calculated according to this section shall be rebated to the consumer. If the rebate otherwise required is less than one dollar, no rebate need be made.

(2) Upon prepayment in full of a consumer credit transaction, other than one pursuant to a revolving account, a refinancing, or a consolidation, whether or not precomputed, the creditor may collect or retain a minimum charge within the limits stated in this subsection (2) if the finance charge earned at the time of prepayment is less than any minimum charge contracted for. The minimum charge may not exceed the lesser of the amount of finance charge contracted for or twenty-five dollars.

(3) (a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, the unearned portion of the finance charge is a fraction of the finance charge of which the numerator is the sum of the periodic balances scheduled to follow the computational period in which prepayment occurs, and the denominator is the sum of all periodic balances under either the consumer credit agreement or, if the balance owing resulted from a refinancing described in section 5-2-205 or a consolidation described in section 5-2-206, under the refinancing agreement or consolidation agreement.

(b) With respect to a precomputed transaction entered into on or after October 28, 1975, and payable according to its original terms in more than sixty-one installments or on any precomputed transaction entered into on or after January 1, 1982, the unearned portion of the finance charge is, at the option of the lender, either:

(I) That portion that is applicable to all fully unexpired computational periods as originally scheduled, or if deferred, as deferred, that follow the date of prepayment. For this purpose, the applicable charge is the total of that which would have been made for each such period, had the consumer credit transaction not been precomputed, by applying to unpaid balances of the amount financed, according to the actuarial method, the annual percentage rate of charge previously stated to the consumer pursuant to the provisions on disclosure contained in section 5-3-101 based upon the assumption that all payments were made as originally scheduled, or if deferred, as deferred. The creditor, at the creditor's option, may round the annual percentage rate to the nearest one-half of one percent so long as such procedure is not consistently used to obtain a greater yield than would otherwise be permitted; or

(II) The total finance charge minus the earned finance charge. The earned finance charge shall be determined by applying the annual percentage rate previously stated to the consumer pursuant to the provisions on disclosure contained in section 5-3-101 according to the actuarial method to the actual unpaid balances for the actual time the balances were unpaid up to the date of prepayment. If a delinquency or deferral charge was collected, it shall be treated as a payment.

(c) In the case of a consumer credit transaction primarily secured by an interest in land, reasonable sums actually paid or payable to persons not related to the creditor for customary closing costs included in the finance charge shall be deducted from the finance charge before the calculation prescribed by this subsection (3) is made.

(4) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Computational period" means one month if one-half or more of the intervals between scheduled payments under the agreement is one month or more and otherwise means one week.

(b) The "interval" to the due date of the first scheduled installment or the final scheduled payment date is measured from the date of a consumer credit transaction and includes either the first or last day of the interval. If the interval to the due date of the first scheduled installment does not exceed one month by more than fifteen days when the computational period is one month or eleven days when the computational period is one week, the interval shall be considered as one computational period.

(c) "Periodic balance" means the amount scheduled to be outstanding on the last day of a computational period before deducting the payment, if any, scheduled to be made on that day.

(5) (a) This subsection (5) applies only if the schedule of payments is not regular.

(b) If the computational period is one month and:

(I) If the number of days in the interval to the due date of the first scheduled installment is less than one month by more than five days or more than one month by more than five but not more than fifteen days, the unearned finance charge shall be increased by an adjustment for each day by which the interval is less than one month and, at the option of the creditor, may be reduced by an adjustment for each day by which the interval is more than one month; the adjustment for each day shall be one-thirtieth of that part of the finance charge earned in the computational period prior to the due date of the first scheduled installment assuming that period to be one month; and

(II) If the interval to the final scheduled payment date is a number of computational periods plus an additional number of days less than a full month, the additional number of days shall be considered a computational period only if sixteen days or more. This subparagraph (II) applies whether or not subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) applies.

(c) Notwithstanding paragraph (b) of this subsection (5), if the computational period is one month, the number of days in the interval to the due date of the first installment exceeds one month by not more than fifteen days and the schedule of payments is otherwise regular, the creditor at the creditor's option may exclude the extra days and the charge for the extra days in computing the unearned finance charge; but if the creditor does so and a rebate is required before the due date of the first scheduled installment, the creditor shall compute the earned charge for each elapsed day as one-thirtieth of the amount the earned charge would have been if the first interval had been one month.

(d) If the computational period is one week and:

(I) If the number of days in the interval to the due date of the first scheduled installment is less than five days or more than nine days but not more than eleven days, the unearned finance charge shall be increased by an adjustment for each day by which the interval is less than seven days and, at the option of the creditor, may be reduced by an adjustment for each day by which the interval is more than seven days; the adjustment for each day shall be one-seventh of that part of the finance charge earned in the computational period prior to the due date of the first scheduled installment assuming that period to be one week; and

(II) If the interval to the final scheduled payment date is a number of computational periods plus an additional number of days less than a full week, the additional number of days shall be considered a computational period only if four days or more. This subparagraph (II) applies whether or not subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (d) applies.

(6) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of subsection (3) of this section, if a deferral described in section 5-2-204 has been agreed to, the unearned portion of the finance charge is the portion thereof attributable according to the sum of the balances method to the period from the first day of the computational period following that in which prepayment occurs; except that the numerator of the fraction is the sum of the periodic balances, after rescheduling to give effect to any deferral, scheduled to follow the computational period in which prepayment occurs. A separate rebate of the deferral charge is not required unless the unpaid balance of the transaction is paid in full during the deferral period, in which event the creditor shall also rebate the unearned portion of the deferral charge.

(7) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of subsection (3) of this section, this section does not preclude the collection or retention by the creditor of delinquency charges described in section 5-2-203.

(8) If the maturity is accelerated for any reason and judgment is obtained, the consumer is entitled to the same rebate as if payment had been made on the date judgment is entered.

(9) Upon prepayment in full of a consumer credit transaction by the proceeds of consumer credit insurance described in section 5-4-103, the consumer or the consumer's estate is entitled to the same rebate as though the consumer had prepaid the agreement on the date the proceeds of the insurance are paid to the creditor but no later than ten business days after satisfactory proof of loss is furnished to the creditor.

5-2-212. Surcharges on credit transactions - prohibition. (1) Except as otherwise provided in sections 24-19.5-103 (3) and 29-11.5-103 (3), C.R.S., no seller or lessor in any sales or lease transaction or any company issuing credit or charge cards may impose a surcharge on a holder who elects to use a credit or charge card in lieu of payment by cash, check, or similar means. A surcharge is any additional amount imposed at the time of the sales or lease transaction by the merchant, seller, or lessor that increases the charge to the buyer or lessee for the privilege of using a credit or charge card. For purposes of this section, charge card includes those cards pursuant to which unpaid balances are payable on demand.

(2) A discount offered by a seller or lessor for the purpose of inducing payment by cash, check, or other means not involving the use of a seller or lender credit card shall not constitute a finance charge if such discount is offered to all prospective buyers and its availability is disclosed to all prospective buyers clearly and conspicuously in accordance with regulations of the administrator.

5-2-213. Lender and seller credit cards. (1) For purposes of this section, "credit card bank or financial institution" means a commercial bank, industrial bank, credit union, thrift, savings and loan association, savings bank, or other state or federally supervised institution in this state that issues credit cards and may export rates and fees pursuant to the "National Bank Act", 12 U.S.C. sec. 85, "Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980", 12 U.S.C. secs. 1463, 1785, and 1831d, "Federal Credit Union Act", 12 U.S.C. sec. 1757, or "Alternative Mortgage Transaction Parity Act of 1982", 12 U.S.C. secs. 3801 to 3805, and any regulations thereunder.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this part 2, with respect to a lender or seller credit card issued by a credit card bank or financial institution:

(a) The finance charge, calculated according to the actuarial method, may not exceed the amounts provided in section 5-2-201; and

(b) Any fees imposed for a minimum finance charge described in section 5-2-201 (3) (b), annual charges described in section 5-2-202 (1) (c), cash advances described in section 5-2-202 (1) (e) (I), return or dishonor of a check described in section 5-2-202 (1) (e) (II), delinquency described in section 5-2-203, or exceeding the credit limit may be in an amount established by written agreement of the parties.

5-2-214. Alternative charges for loans not exceeding one thousand dollars. (1) For a consumer loan where the amount financed is not more than one thousand dollars, a supervised lender may charge, in lieu of the loan finance charges permitted by section 5-2-201, the following finance charges:

(a) An acquisition charge for making the original loan, not to exceed ten percent of the amount financed;

(a.5) An acquisition charge for making any refinanced loan, not to exceed seven and one-half percent of the amount financed; and

(b) A monthly installment account handling charge, not to exceed the following amounts:

Amount financed	Per month charge
$100.00 - $ 300	$12.50
$300.01 - $ 500	$15.00
$500.01 - $ 750	$17.50

(2) The minimum term of a loan made pursuant to this section shall be ninety days. The maximum term of a loan made pursuant to this section shall be twelve months. All loans shall be scheduled to be payable in substantially equal installments at equal periodic intervals.

(3) On a loan subject to the alternative charges authorized by this section, no other finance charge or any other charge or fee is permitted except as specifically provided for in this section and except for the delinquency charges provided for in section 5-2-203, reasonable attorney fees provided for in section 5-5-112, and the fee for a dishonored check provided for in section 5-2-202 (1) (e) (II).

(4) The acquisition charge authorized in this section shall be fully earned at the time the loan is made and shall not be subject to refund; except that, if the loan is prepaid in full, refinanced, or consolidated within the first sixty days, the first ten dollars of the acquisition charge shall be retained by the lender and the remainder of the acquisition charge shall be refunded at a rate of one-sixtieth of the remainder of the acquisition charge per day, beginning on the day after the date of the prepayment, refinancing, or consolidation and ending on the sixtieth day after the loan was made.

(5) Upon the prepayment of a loan made pursuant to this section, the unearned portion of the installment account handling charge shall be refunded to the consumer. The unearned portion of the installment account handling charge that is refunded shall be calculated pursuant to the provisions on rebate upon prepayment contained in section 5-2-211 on the date of refinancing; except that, for the purpose of computing this amount, no minimum charge described in section 5-2-201 shall be allowed.

(6) The rates and charges permitted by this section shall not apply to deferred deposit loans subject to article 3.1 of this title.

(7) A lender shall not take collateral from a consumer as security for payment for any loan made pursuant to this section.

(8) A lender may not refinance a loan made pursuant to this section more than three times in one year.

SUPERVISED LOANS AND SUPERVISED LENDERS

5-2-301. Authority to make supervised loans. (1) Unless a person is a supervised financial organization or has first obtained a license from the administrator authorizing him or her to make supervised loans, he or she shall not engage in the business of:

(a) Making supervised loans or undertaking direct collection of payments from or enforcement of rights against consumers arising from supervised loans he or she has previously made; or

(b) Taking assignments of and undertaking direct collection of payments from or enforcement of rights against consumers arising from supervised loans; except that a person who is licensed by the administrator as a collection agency pursuant to article 14 of title 12, C.R.S., or is licensed by the Colorado supreme court to practice law, and who takes assignment of supervised loans only after such loans are in default, is not required to obtain a supervised lender license to engage in the activities described in this paragraph (b).

5-2-302. License to make supervised loans. (1) The administrator shall receive and act on all applications for licenses to make supervised loans under this code. Applications shall be filed in the manner prescribed by the administrator and shall contain such information as the administrator may reasonably require. No license shall be issued without payment of a nonrefundable license fee. The license year shall be the calendar year.

(2) No license shall be issued unless the administrator, upon investigation, finds that the financial responsibility, character, and fitness of the applicant and of the members, managers, partners, officers, and directors thereof are such as to warrant belief that the business will be operated honestly and fairly within the purposes of this code. In determining financial responsibility of an applicant proposing to engage in making consumer insurance premium loans, the administrator shall consider the liabilities the lender may incur for erroneous cancellation of insurance. The administrator may deny an application for licensure for any of the grounds provided in section 5-2-303.

(3) (a) Upon written request, the applicant is entitled to a hearing on the question of the applicant's qualifications for a license if:

(I) The administrator has notified the applicant in writing that his or her application has been denied; or

(II) The administrator has not issued a license within sixty days after the application for the license was filed.

(b) A request for a hearing may not be made more than sixty days after the administrator has mailed a writing to the applicant notifying the applicant that the application has been denied and stating in substance the administrator's findings supporting denial of the application.

(4) If a supervised lender has more than one place of business, it must obtain a master license. The administrator may authorize the addition of branch locations to the master license. A separate license fee and proof of financial responsibility shall be required for each authorized branch location. Each master license and branch location license shall remain in full force and effect until surrendered, suspended, or revoked.

(5) (a) The application for approval of a branch location license may be more abbreviated than the application for a new or master supervised lender's license. An application for a branch location license may be filed by any means, including facsimile or electronic filing, followed by the license fee required by this section.

(b) Upon receipt of a completed branch location license application and the required license fee, the branch location is automatically licensed for a temporary period not to exceed one hundred twenty days. If the administrator does not deny the branch location application on or before the end of that period, the temporary branch location license shall become permanent. The administrator may deny an application for a branch location for any of the grounds provided in subsection (2) of this section and section 5-2-303.

(c) The administrator's approval of an additional branch location license may be provided by letter. No license certificate need be issued for a licensed branch location. All provisions of this part 3 relating to licenses apply equally to branch location licenses.

(6) No licensee shall change the location of any place of business or license without giving the administrator at least fifteen days prior written notice. The administrator may by rule promulgated in accordance with article 4 of title 24, C.R.S., establish an administrative fee for such a change of address.

(7) A licensee shall not engage in the business of making supervised loans at any place of business for which the licensee does not hold a license, nor shall a licensee engage in business under any other name than that in the license. The administrator may by rule establish an administrative fee for such a change of name. For the purposes of this subsection (7), a consumer insurance premium loan is made at the lender's business office.

(8) Each license shall be renewed by payment of a nonrefundable license fee and the filing of a renewal form. The fee and renewal form shall be due each January 31. If a licensee fails to pay the prescribed fee on or before March 1, it shall pay a penalty of five dollars per day per license from March 2 to the date the payment is postmarked. However, if a licensee fails to pay the appropriate renewal and penalty fees by March 15, its license shall automatically expire.

5-2-303. Denial and discipline of license. (1) The administrator may deny an application for a license or take disciplinary action against a person licensed to make supervised loans if the administrator finds that:

(a) The applicant or licensee has violated this code or any rule or order lawfully made pursuant thereto;

(b) Facts or conditions exist that would clearly have justified the administrator in refusing to grant a license had these facts or conditions been known to exist at the time the application for the license was made;

(c) The applicant has failed to complete an application for licensure;

(d) The applicant or licensee has failed to provide information required by the administrator within a reasonable time as fixed by the administrator;

(e) The applicant or licensee has failed to provide or maintain proof of financial responsibility;

(f) The applicant or licensee is insolvent;

(g) The applicant or licensee has made, in any document or statement filed with the administrator, a false representation of a material fact or has omitted to state a material fact;

(h) The applicant, licensee, or its owners, partners, members, officers, or directors have been convicted of or entered a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to a crime specified in part 4 of article 4 of title 18, C.R.S., or in part 1, 2, 3, 5, or 7 of article 5 of title 18, C.R.S., to a crime involving fraud or deceit, or to any similar crime under the jurisdiction of any federal court or court of another state;

(i) The applicant or licensee has failed to make, maintain, or produce records which comply with section 5-2-304 and any regulation adopted by the administrator;

(j) The applicant or licensee has been the subject of any disciplinary action by any state or federal agency;

(k) A final judgment has been entered against the applicant or licensee for violations of this code, any state or federal law concerning consumer finance, banking, or mortgage brokers or lenders, or any state or federal law prohibiting deceptive or unfair trade or business practices; or

(l) The applicant or licensee has failed to, in a timely manner as fixed by the administrator, take or provide proof of the corrective action required by the administrator subsequent to an examination or investigation pursuant to section 5-2-305 or 5-6-106.

(2) The administrator may summarily suspend a license as provided in section 24-4-104, C.R.S.

(3) Whenever the administrator denies a license application or takes disciplinary action pursuant to this section, the administrator shall enter an order to that effect and notify the licensee or applicant of the denial or disciplinary action. The notification required by this subsection (3) shall be given by personal service or by mail to the last known address of the licensee or applicant as shown on the application, license, or as subsequently furnished in writing to the administrator.

(4) Any person holding a license to make supervised loans may relinquish the license by notifying the administrator in writing of its relinquishment. The revocation, suspension, expiration, or relinquishment of a license shall not affect the licensee's liability for acts previously committed nor impair the administrator's ability to issue a final agency order or impose discipline against the licensee.

(5) No revocation, suspension, or relinquishment of a license shall impair or affect the obligation of any preexisting lawful contract between the licensee and any consumer.

(6) The administrator may reinstate a license, terminate a suspension, or grant a new license to a person whose license has been revoked or suspended if no fact or condition then exists that clearly would have justified the administrator in refusing to grant a license.

(7) After a finding of one or more of the conditions stated in subsection (1) of this section, the administrator may take any or all of the following actions:

(a) Deny an application for licensure including an application for a branch office license;

(b) Revoke the license;

(c) Suspend the license for a period of time;

(d) Issue an order to the licensee to cease and desist from such acts;

(e) Order the licensee to make refunds to consumers of excess charges under this code;

(f) Impose penalties of up to a maximum of one thousand dollars for each violation all or part of which may be specifically designated for consumer and creditor educational expenses;

(g) Bar the person from applying for or holding a license for a period of five years following revocation of his or her license;

(h) Issue a letter of admonition; or

(i) Impose a penalty of two hundred dollars per day for failure to make, produce, or retain records required to be maintained under this code within forty-eight hours after the administrator's written demand. If the administrator has provided advance written notice of forty-eight hours or more to a licensee prior to conducting an examination pursuant to section 5-2-305, the penalty may be imposed without allowing additional time.

(8) The discipline stated in paragraphs (h) and (i) of subsection (7) of this section may be imposed without a hearing, but the licensee may, within thirty days thereafter, file with the administrator a written notice requesting a hearing. If such request is timely made, the letter of admonition shall be deemed vacated and a hearing shall be held. If, after such hearing, there is a finding that one or more of the grounds for discipline exist, any or all of the forms of discipline listed in this section may be imposed.

5-2-304. Records - annual reports - proof of financial responsibility. (1) Every licensee shall maintain records in conformity with this code, rules adopted thereunder, and generally accepted accounting principles and practices in a manner that will enable the administrator to determine whether the licensee is complying with the provisions of this code. The record-keeping system of a licensee shall be sufficient if the licensee makes the required information reasonably available. The records need not be kept in the place of business where supervised loans are made if the administrator is given free access to the records wherever located. The records pertaining to any loan need not be preserved for more than four years after making the final entry relating to the loan, but, in the case of a revolving loan account, the four years is measured from the date of each entry.

(2) On or before June 1 of each year, every licensee shall file with the administrator an annual report in the form prescribed by the administrator relating to all supervised loans made by the licensee, which report shall also demonstrate satisfactory proof of the licensee's financial responsibility. At all other times, the licensee shall maintain satisfactory proof of financial responsibility. The administrator shall consult with comparable officials in other states for the purpose of making the kinds of information required in annual reports uniform among the states. Information contained in annual reports shall be confidential and may be published only in composite form. The administrator may, by rule, determine the types and amounts of financial responsibility deemed to be satisfactory.

(3) If a licensee fails to file the annual report or proof of financial responsibility by July 1, the administrator may impose a penalty of five dollars per day from July 2 to the date the filing is postmarked. However, if a licensee fails to file and pay the appropriate penalty by July 15, or, at all other times, fails to provide satisfactory proof of financial responsibility within thirty days after receiving notice from the administrator, its license shall automatically expire.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-3-505, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-2-305. Examinations and investigations. (1) The administrator shall examine periodically, at intervals the administrator deems appropriate, the loans, business, and records of every licensee. In addition, for the purpose of discovering violations of this code or securing information lawfully required, the administrator or, in lieu thereof, the official or agency to whose supervision the organization is subject pursuant to section 5-6-105, may at any time investigate the loans, business, and records of any supervised lender or any supervised financial organization. For these purposes the administrator shall have free and reasonable access to the offices, places of business, and records of the lender.

(2) (a) If the lender's records are located outside this state, the lender shall, at the lender's option, either make them available to the administrator at a convenient location within this state or pay the reasonable and necessary expenses for the administrator or the administrator's representative to examine them at the place where they are maintained; except that the lender shall make the records available for examination at the administrator's office or at any other location the administrator deems appropriate, at the cost of the lender, if the administrator determines that the examination of the records at the location where the records are maintained endangers the safety of the administrator's representative or that there are not adequate facilities at the location where the records are maintained to conduct the examination. The administrator may designate representatives, including comparable officials of the state in which the records are located, to inspect them on the administrator's behalf.

(b) The administrator may require any lender whose records are located within the state to make its records available for examination at the administrator's office or at any other location the administrator deems appropriate at the cost of the lender if the administrator determines that the examination of the records at the location where the records are maintained endangers the safety of the administrator's representative or that there are not adequate facilities at the location where the records are maintained to conduct the examination.

(3) For the purposes of this section, the administrator may administer oaths or affirmations, and, upon the administrator's own motion or upon request of any party, may subpoena witnesses, compel their attendance, adduce evidence, and require the production of any matter that is relevant to the investigation, including the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of any books, documents, or other tangible things and the identity and location of persons having knowledge of relevant facts or any other matter reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

(4) Upon failure without lawful excuse to obey a subpoena or to give testimony, the administrator may apply to the district court in the city and county of Denver for an order compelling compliance.

(5) After the administrator has examined a licensee pursuant to this section, the administrator shall provide a report of the examination to the licensee and request the licensee to take the corrective action required therein. The licensee shall, within a time and manner as fixed by the administrator, take the corrective action required in the report and provide proof that the corrective action was taken. The corrective action required may include refunds of excess charges and corrections of disclosures required by this code. This subsection (5) does not require the administrator to allow a licensee to take corrective action prior to the administrator filing legal or administrative action for repeated or willful violations of this code.

5-2-308. Regular schedule of payments - maximum loan term. (1) Supervised loans not made pursuant to a revolving credit account and in which the principal is three thousand dollars or less shall be scheduled to be payable in substantially equal installments at equal periodic intervals except to the extent that the schedule of payments is adjusted to the seasonal or irregular income of the debtor and:

(a) Over a period of not more than thirty-seven months if the principal is more than one thousand dollars; or

(b) Over a period of not more than twenty-five months if the principal is one thousand dollars or less.

PART 5

OTHER CREDIT TRANSACTIONS

5-2-501. Transactions subject to code by agreement of parties. The parties to a transaction other than a consumer credit transaction may agree in a writing signed by the parties that the transaction is subject to the provisions of this code. If the parties so agree, the transaction is a consumer credit transaction for the purposes of this code.

5-2-502. Finance charge for other transactions. With respect to a transaction that is specifically exempt from the rate ceilings of this code by the provisions of section 5-1-301 (15) (c), the parties may contract for the payment by the consumer of any finance charge up to a rate not to exceed an annual percentage rate of forty-five percent pursuant to section 18-15-104, C.R.S. The rate of the finance charge shall be calculated on the unpaid balances of the debt on the assumption that the debt will be paid according to its terms and will not be paid before the end of the agreed term.

5-3-101. Applicability - information required. (1) For purposes of this section, a consumer credit transaction includes a transaction secured primarily by an interest in land without regard to the rate of the finance charge if the consumer credit transaction is otherwise a consumer credit transaction.

(2) The creditor shall disclose to the consumer to whom credit is extended with respect to a consumer credit transaction the information, disclosures, and notices required by the federal "Truth in Lending Act", the federal "Consumer Leasing Act", and any regulation thereunder.

5-3-102. Notice of assignment. The consumer is authorized to pay the original creditor until the consumer receives notification of assignment of rights to payment pursuant to a consumer credit transaction and that payment is to be made to the assignee. A notification that does not reasonably identify the rights assigned is ineffective. If requested by the consumer, the assignee must seasonably furnish reasonable proof that the assignment has been made and unless the assignee does so the consumer may pay the original creditor.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-3-406, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-103. Change in terms of revolving credit accounts. (1) If a creditor makes a change in the terms of a revolving account without complying with this section, any additional cost or charge to the consumer resulting from the change is an excess charge and subject to the remedies available to consumers described in section 5-5-202 and to the administrator described in section 5-6-114.

(2) (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) or (c) of this subsection (2), whenever any term of a revolving credit account is changed or the required minimum periodic payment thereon is increased, the creditor shall mail or deliver written notice of the change, at least one billing cycle before the effective date of the change, to each consumer who may be affected by the change.

(b) The notice required by paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall be given in advance, but need not be given one billing cycle in advance, if the change has been agreed to by the consumer or if the change is an increase in a finance charge, periodic rate, or other charge permitted under section 5-2-202 as a result of the consumer's delinquency or default.

(c) The notice otherwise required by paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) is not required if the change:

(I) Results from the consumer's delinquency or default but is not of a kind listed in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2);

(II) Results from an agreement related to a court proceeding or arbitration;

(III) Is a reduction of any charge or component thereof; or

(IV) Is a suspension of future credit privileges or termination of a consumer credit transaction.

(3) The notice provisions of subsection (2) of this section shall not apply if:

(a) The consumer, after receiving notice in writing of the specific change, agrees in writing to the change;

(b) The consumer elects to pay an amount designated on a billing statement as including a new charge for a benefit offered to the consumer when the benefit and charge constitutes the change in terms and when the billing statement also states the amount payable if the new charge is excluded;

(c) The change involves no significant cost to the consumer; or

(d) The agreement provides limitations on changing of terms that are more restrictive than the requirements of subsection (2) of this section.

(4) The notice provided for in this section is given to the consumer when mailed to the consumer at the address used by the creditor for sending periodic billing statements.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-2-416, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-104. Receipts - statements of account - evidence of payment. (1) The creditor shall deliver or mail to the consumer, without request, a written receipt for each payment by coin or currency on an obligation pursuant to a consumer credit transaction. A periodic statement showing a payment received by the creditor complies with this subsection (1).

(2) Upon written request of a consumer, the creditor of a consumer credit transaction, other than one pursuant to a revolving credit account, shall provide a written statement of the dates and amounts of payments made within the twelve months preceding the month in which the request is received and the total amount unpaid as of the end of the period covered by the statement. The statement shall be provided without charge twice during each year of the term of the obligation. If additional statements are requested, the creditor may charge not more than ten dollars for each additional statement.

(3) Within thirty days after a consumer has fulfilled all obligations with respect to a consumer credit transaction, other than one pursuant to a revolving credit account, the creditor shall deliver or mail to the consumer written evidence acknowledging payment in full of all obligations with respect to the transaction and written evidence of release of any security interest and termination of any financing statement held, retained, or acquired.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-5-110, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-105. Notice to cosigners and similar parties. (1) No natural person, other than the spouse of the consumer, shall be obligated as a cosigner, comaker, guarantor, endorser, surety, or similar party with respect to a consumer credit transaction, unless before or contemporaneously with signing any agreement of obligation or any writing setting forth the terms of the consumer's agreement, the person receives a written notice that contains a completed identification of the debt he or she may have to pay and reasonably informs such person of his or her obligation with respect to it. Such written notice may be set forth in the consumer's agreement of obligation or in a separate writing. For purposes of this section, the word "cosigner", "comaker", "guarantor", "endorser", or "surety" means a natural person who, by agreement and without compensation, renders himself or herself liable for the obligation of another in a consumer credit transaction, and the terms "agreement" and "consumer's agreement" mean the original underlying agreement.

(2) The notice required by this section must be clear and conspicuous notice and comply with the disclosure requirements of 16 CFR 444.3, 12 CFR 227.14, or 12 CFR 535.3.

(3) The notice required by this section need not be given to a seller, lessor, or lender who is obligated to an assignee of his or her rights.

(4) A person entitled to notice pursuant to this section shall also be given a copy of any writing setting forth the terms of the consumer's agreement and of any separate agreement of obligation signed by the person entitled to the notice.

(5) A cosignor is entitled to a notice of right to cure pursuant to sections 5-5-110 (4) and 5-5-111 (3).

(2) Although this section was effective July 1, 2000, section 5 of chapter 265, Session Laws of Colorado 2000, provides that the disclosures described in subsection (5) are effective January 1, 2001.

5-3-106. Disclosures for real estate secured consumer credit transactions. (1) With respect to a real estate secured consumer credit transaction payable in installments, other than one pursuant to a revolving credit account, if the creditor credits payments made after the due date as of the date of receipt rather than the date payment was due, the creditor must clearly and conspicuously disclose to the consumer at or before the time that credit is extended the effect of untimely payments using language in substantially the following form:

"The dollar amount of the finance charge disclosed to you for this credit transaction is based upon your payments being received by the creditor on the date payments are due. If your payments are received after the due date, even if received before the date a late fee applies, you may owe additional and substantial money at the end of the credit transaction and there may be little or no reduction of principal. This is due to the accrual of daily interest until a payment is received."

(2) A creditor that makes or arranges for extensions of consumer loans secured by a dwelling and that uses credit scores for that purpose shall, upon request of the consumer, provide to the consumer to whom the credit report relates, as soon as practicable and reasonable, but in a period not to exceed thirty days, a copy of the information specifically required to be disclosed pursuant to section 12-14.3-104.3 (1), C.R.S., in such form as obtained from a consumer reporting agency as defined in section 12-14.3-102 (4), C.R.S. The creditor may charge a reasonable fee for making such information available to the consumer and such charge shall be an additional charge within the meaning of section 5-2-202 and not part of the finance charge.

(3) (a) Nothing in subsection (2) of this section shall require the creditor to:

(I) Explain to the consumer the information specifically required to be disclosed pursuant to section 12-14.3-104.3 (1), C.R.S.;

(II) Disclose any information other than the information required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section;

(III) Disclose any credit score or related information obtained by the creditor after the transaction occurs; or

(IV) Provide more than one disclosure to any one consumer per credit transaction.

(b) The creditor's obligation pursuant to subsection (2) of this section and this subsection (3) shall be limited to providing a copy of the information that was received from a consumer reporting agency, as defined in section 12-14.3-102 (4), C.R.S. A creditor who uses a credit score has no liability under this subsection (3) or subsection (2) of this section for the content of the credit score information received from a consumer reporting agency or from the omission of any information within the report provided by the consumer reporting agency.

5-3-108. Written agreement required. No consumer credit transaction shall be valid or enforceable in this state unless its terms are contained in a written agreement and a copy is provided to the consumer at or before the time credit is extended. A creditor may provide the copy to the consumer in a form other than paper upon the consumer's written authorization.

5-3-109. Records. Every creditor shall maintain records in conformity with this code, rules adopted thereunder, and generally accepted accounting principles and practices in a manner that will establish that the creditor is complying with the provisions of this code. The record-keeping system of a creditor shall be sufficient if the creditor makes the required information reasonably available. The records pertaining to any credit transaction need not be preserved for more than four years after making the final entry relating to the transaction, but, in the case of a revolving credit account, the four years is measured from the date of each entry.

5-3-110. Advertising. (1) A creditor may not advertise, print, display, publish, distribute, broadcast, transmit or cause to be advertised, printed, displayed, published, distributed, broadcast, or transmitted in any manner any false, misleading, or deceptive statement or representation with regard to the rates, terms, or conditions of credit of a consumer credit transaction.

(2) This section imposes no liability on the owner or personnel, as such, of any medium in which an advertisement appears or through which it is disseminated.

(3) Advertising that complies with the federal "Truth in Lending Act" and the federal "Consumer Leasing Act" does not violate this section.

5-3-111. Use of credit scores. Any provision in a contract that prohibits the disclosure of a credit score by a consumer reporting agency or a person who makes or arranges loans secured by a dwelling is void. For the purposes of this section, "dwelling" means a residential structure that contains one to four units, whether or not that structure is attached to real property. The term includes an individual condominium unit, cooperative unit, mobile home, or trailer, if it is used as a residence.

PART 2

LIMITATIONS ON AGREEMENTS AND PRACTICES

5-3-201. Security in sales or leases. (1) With respect to a consumer credit sale, a creditor may take a security interest in the property sold. In addition, a creditor may take a security interest in goods upon which services are performed or to which goods sold are annexed, or in land to which the goods are affixed or that is maintained, repaired, or improved as a result of the sale of the goods or services, if in the case of a security interest in land the debt secured is three thousand dollars or more, or in the case of a security interest in goods the debt secured is one thousand dollars or more. Except as provided with respect to cross-collateral described in section 5-3-202, a creditor may not otherwise take a security interest in property of the consumer to secure the debt arising from a consumer credit sale.

(2) With respect to a consumer lease, a creditor may not take a security interest in property of the consumer to secure the debt arising from the lease. This subsection (2) does not apply to a security deposit for a consumer lease.

(3) A security interest taken in violation of this section is void.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-2-407, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-202. Cross-collateral. (1) In addition to contracting for a security interest pursuant to the provisions on security in sales or leases contained in section 5-3-201, a seller in a consumer credit sale may secure the debt arising from the sale by contracting for a security interest in other property if as a result of a prior sale the seller has an existing security interest in the other property. The seller may also contract for a security interest in the property sold in the subsequent sale as security for the previous debt.

(2) If the seller contracts for a security interest in other property pursuant to this section, the rate of finance charge thereafter on the aggregate unpaid balances so secured may not exceed that permitted if the balances so secured were consolidated pursuant to the provisions on consolidation involving a refinancing contained in section 5-2-205 (1). The seller has a reasonable time after so contracting to make any adjustments required by this section. "Seller" in this section does not include an assignee not related to the original seller.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-2-408, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-203. Debt secured by cross-collateral. (1) If debts arising from two or more consumer credit sales, other than sales pursuant to a revolving credit account, are secured by cross-collateral or consolidated into one debt payable on a single schedule of payments and the debt is secured by security interests taken with respect to one or more of the sales, payments received by the seller after the taking of the cross-collateral or the consolidation are deemed, for the purpose of determining the amount of the debt secured by the various security interests, to have been applied first to the payment of the debts arising from the sales first made. To the extent debts are paid according to this section, security interests in items of property terminate as the debts originally incurred with respect to each item are paid.

(2) Payments received by the seller upon a revolving credit account are deemed, for the purpose of determining the amount of the debt secured by the various security interests, to have been applied first to the payment of finance charges in the order of their entry to the account and then to the payment of debts in the order in which the entries to the account showing the debts were made.

(3) If the debts consolidated arose from two or more sales made on the same day, payments received by the seller are deemed, for the purpose of determining the amount of the debt secured by the various security interests, to have been applied first to the payment of the smallest debt.

5-3-204. Restrictions on interest in land as security. (1) With respect to a consumer loan in which the amount financed is three thousand dollars or less, a lender may not contract for an interest in land as security. A security interest taken in violation of this section is void.

(2) For the purposes of this section, on revolving credit accounts, the amount financed shall be determined by the limit in the amount of credit made available to or for the account of the consumer if that limit is established by an express written agreement by the lender and if the lender does not retain the right to unilaterally reduce that credit limit, except in the event of default.

5-3-205. Use of multiple agreements. A creditor may not use multiple agreements with respect to a single consumer credit transaction for the purpose of obtaining a higher finance charge than would otherwise be permitted by this code or to avoid disclosure of an annual percentage rate pursuant to the provisions on disclosure and advertising. Dividing a single consumer credit transaction between a husband and wife shall be presumed to be a violation of this section. The excess amount of finance charge provided for in agreements in violation of this section is an excess charge for the purposes of the provisions on the effect of violations on rights of parties contained in section 5-5-201 and the provisions on civil actions by the administrator contained in section 5-6-114.

5-3-206. No assignment of earnings. (1) A creditor may not take an assignment of earnings of the consumer for payment or as security for payment of a debt arising out of a consumer credit transaction. An assignment of earnings in violation of this section is unenforceable by the assignee of the earnings and revocable by the consumer.

(2) A sale of unpaid earnings made in consideration of the payment of money to or for the account of the seller of the earnings is deemed to be a loan to him or her secured by an assignment of earnings.

5-3-208. Balloon payments. With respect to a consumer credit transaction other than one pursuant to a revolving credit account, if any scheduled payment is more than twice as large as the average of all other regularly scheduled payments, the consumer has the right to refinance the amount of that payment at the time it is due at the creditor's prevailing rates for such type of transaction if the consumer meets the creditor's normal credit standards and if the creditor is, at that time, in the business of making such transactions. The creditor shall disclose this right in writing to the consumer at the time the transaction is entered into. These provisions do not apply to the extent that the payment schedule is adjusted to the seasonal or irregular income of the consumer. This section shall not apply to a transaction of a class defined by rule of the administrator promulgated in accordance with article 4 of title 24, C.R.S., as not requiring for the protection of the consumer his or her right to refinance as provided in this section.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "State Variations of the Uniform Consumer Credit Code: The Case for Legislative Restraint", see 48 Den. L.J. 239 (1971).

5-3-209. Referral sales. With respect to a consumer credit sale or consumer lease, the seller or lessor may not give or offer to give a rebate or discount or otherwise pay or offer to pay value to the consumer as an inducement for a sale or lease in consideration of the consumer giving to the seller or lessor the names of prospective purchasers or lessees, or otherwise aiding the seller or lessor in making a sale or lease to another person, if the earning of the rebate, discount, or other value is contingent upon the occurrence of an event subsequent to the time the consumer agrees to buy or lease. If a consumer is induced by a violation of this section to enter into a consumer credit sale or consumer lease, the agreement is unenforceable by the seller or lessor and the consumer, at his or her option, may rescind the agreement or retain the goods delivered and the benefit of any services performed without any obligation to pay for them.

5-3-210. Discrimination prohibited. No consumer credit transaction regulated by this code shall be denied any person, nor shall terms and conditions be made more stringent, on the basis of discrimination, solely because of disability, race, creed, religion, color, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, national origin, or ancestry. This section shall not apply to any consumer credit transaction made or denied by a seller, lessor, or lender whose total original unpaid balances arising from consumer credit transactions for the previous calendar year are less than one million dollars.

LIMITATIONS ON CONSUMERS' LIABILITIES

5-3-301. Restriction on liability in consumer lease. The obligation of a lessee upon expiration of a consumer lease, may not exceed twice the average payment allocable to a monthly period under the lease. This limitation does not apply to charges for damages to the leased property or for other default.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-2-406, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-302. Limitation on default charges. Except for reasonable expenses incurred in realizing on a security interest, the agreement with respect to a consumer credit transaction may not provide for charges as a result of default by the consumer other than those authorized by this code. A provision in violation of this section is unenforceable.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former §§ 5-2-414 and 5-3-405, as they existed prior to 2000.

ANNOTATION

Because this section provides that only those charges allowable elsewhere under the UCCC plus reasonable expenses in realizing a security interest are permissible as default charges, higher default interest on a note is unenforceable. First Nat. Bank v. Union Tavern Corp., 794 P.2d 261 (Colo. App. 1990) (decided prior to 2000 repeal and reenactment).

5-3-303. Assignee subject to claims and defenses. (1) With respect to a consumer credit sale or consumer lease, an assignee of the rights of the seller or lessor is subject to all claims and defenses of the buyer against the seller or lessor arising from the sale or lease of goods or services, notwithstanding that the assignee is a holder in due course of a negotiable instrument issued in connection with the consumer credit sale or consumer lease.

(2) A claim or defense of a consumer specified in subsection (1) of this section may be asserted against the assignee under this section only to the extent of the amount owing to the assignee with respect to the sale or lease of the goods or services as to which the claim or defense arose at the time the assignee has written notice of the claim or defense.

(3) For the purpose of determining the amount owing to the assignee with respect to the sale or lease:

(a) Payments received by the assignee after the consolidation of two or more consumer credit sales, except pursuant to a revolving credit account, are deemed to have been first applied to the payment of the sales first made; if the sales consolidated arose from sales made on the same day, payments are deemed to have been first applied to the smallest sale; and

(b) Payments received upon a revolving credit account are deemed to have been first applied to the payment of finance charges in the order of their entry to the account and then to the payment of debts in the order in which the entries of the debts are made to the account.

(4) An agreement may not limit or waive the claims or defenses of a consumer under this section.

5-3-304. Use of account - constructive assent to terms. The use of a revolving credit account by a consumer, or by any person authorized by the consumer, constitutes the consumer's acceptance of the creditor's offer of credit and creates a binding contract on the creditor's terms then in effect. Such terms may be modified in the future as agreed by the parties and subject to the requirements of this article, including, but not limited to, the notice requirements of section 5-3-103.

5-3-305. Advance payment to reserve lodging and motor vehicle rental services - notice to consumer required. If a deposit, reservation fee, or other advance payment is to be charged to a revolving credit account for lodging or motor vehicle rental services to be provided in the future in this state, the seller shall not charge such advance payment to the consumer's account without first notifying the consumer, either orally or in writing, and giving the consumer the opportunity to reject the services.

HOME SOLICITATION SALES

5-3-401. Definitions - "home solicitation sale". "Home solicitation sale" means a consumer credit sale of goods or services in which the seller or a person acting for the seller personally solicits the sale and the buyer's agreement or offer to purchase is given to the seller or a person acting for the seller at a residence. It does not include a sale made pursuant to a preexisting revolving credit account, a sale made pursuant to prior negotiations between the parties at a business establishment at a fixed location where goods or services are offered or exhibited for sale, a transaction conducted and consummated entirely by mail or telephone, or a sale that is subject to the provisions of the federal "Truth in Lending Act" on the consumer's right to rescind certain transactions.

Cross references: For the definition and federal statutory cite of the "Truth in Lending Act", see § 5-1-302.

5-3-402. Buyer's right to cancel. (1) Except as provided in subsection (5) of this section, in addition to any right otherwise to revoke an offer, the buyer has the right to cancel a home solicitation sale until midnight of the third business day after the day on which the buyer signs an agreement or offer to purchase that complies with this part 4.

(2) Cancellation occurs when the buyer gives written notice of cancellation to the seller at the address stated in the agreement or offer to purchase.

(3) Notice of cancellation, if given by mail, is given when it is deposited in a mail box properly addressed and postage prepaid.

(4) Notice of cancellation given by the buyer need not take a particular form and is sufficient if it indicates by any form of written expression the intention of the buyer not to be bound by the home solicitation sale.

(5) The buyer may not cancel a home solicitation sale if, by separate dated and signed statement that is not as to its material provisions a printed form and describes an emergency requiring immediate remedy, the buyer requests the seller to provide goods or services without delay in order to safeguard the health, safety, or welfare of natural persons or to prevent damage to property the buyer owns or for which the buyer is responsible, and:

(a) The seller in good faith makes a substantial beginning of performance of the contract before the buyer gives notice of cancellation; and

(b) In the case of goods, the goods cannot be returned to the seller in substantially as good condition as when received by the buyer.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-2-502, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-403. Form of agreement or offer - statement of buyer's rights. (1) In a home solicitation sale, unless the buyer requests the seller to provide goods or services without delay in an emergency, the seller must present to the buyer, and obtain his signature to, a written agreement or offer to purchase that designates as the date of the transaction the date on which the buyer actually signs and contains a statement of the buyer's rights that complies with subsection (2) of this section. A copy of any writing required by this subsection (1) to be signed by the buyer, completed at least as to the date of the transaction and the name and mailing address of the seller, shall be given to the buyer at the time the buyer signs the writing.

(2) The statement shall comply with any notice of cancellation or a similar requirement of any trade regulation rule of the federal trade commission that by its terms applies to the home solicitation sale.

(3) Until the seller has complied with this section, the buyer may cancel the home solicitation sale by notifying the seller in any manner and by any means of the buyer's intention to cancel; except that the buyer's right of cancellation shall expire three years after the date of the consummation of the home solicitation sale, notwithstanding the fact that the seller has not complied with this part 4.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-2-503, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-404. Restoration of down payment. (1) Within ten days after a notice of cancellation has been received by the seller or an offer to purchase has been otherwise revoked, the seller shall tender to the buyer any payments made by the buyer, any note or other evidence of indebtedness, and any goods traded in. A provision permitting the seller to keep all or any part of any goods traded in, payment, note, or other evidence of indebtedness is in violation of this section and unenforceable.

(2) If the down payment includes goods traded in, the goods shall be tendered in substantially as good condition as when received by the seller. If the seller fails to tender the goods as provided by this section, the buyer may elect to recover an amount equal to the trade-in allowance stated in the agreement.

(3) Until the seller has complied with the obligations imposed by this section, the buyer may retain possession of goods delivered to the buyer by the seller and has a lien on the goods in the buyer's possession or control for any recovery to which the buyer is entitled.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-2-504, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-405. Duty of buyer - no compensation for services prior to cancellation. (1) Except as provided by the provisions on retention of goods by the buyer contained in section 5-3-404 (3) and allowing for ordinary wear and tear or consumption of the goods contemplated by the transaction, within a reasonable time after a home solicitation sale has been canceled or an offer to purchase revoked, the buyer upon demand must tender to the seller any goods delivered by the seller pursuant to the sale, but the buyer is not obligated to tender at any place other than the buyer's residence. If the seller fails to demand possession of goods within a reasonable time after cancellation or revocation, the goods become the property of the buyer without obligation to pay for them. For the purpose of this section, forty days is presumed to be a reasonable time.

(2) The buyer has a duty to take reasonable care of the goods in his or her possession before cancellation or revocation and for a reasonable time thereafter during which time the goods are otherwise at the seller's risk.

(3) If a home solicitation sale is canceled, the seller is not entitled to compensation for any services the seller performed pursuant to it.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-7-101, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-502. Form of insurance premium loan agreement. An agreement pursuant to which a consumer insurance premium loan is made shall contain the names of the insurance agent or broker negotiating each policy or contract and of the insurer issuing each policy or contract, the number and inception date of and premium for each policy or contract, the date on which the term of the loan begins, and a clear and conspicuous notice that each policy or contract may be canceled if payment is not made in accordance with the agreement. If a policy or contract has not been issued by the time the agreement is signed, the agreement may provide that the insurance agent or broker may insert the appropriate information in the agreement and, if he or she does so, shall furnish the information promptly in writing to the insured.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-7-102, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-3-503. Notice of cancellation. If a default exists on a consumer insurance premium loan and any right to cure that exists has expired without cure being effected, the lender may give notice of cancellation of each insurance policy or contract to be canceled. If given, the notice of cancellation shall be in writing and given to the insurer who issued the policy or contract and to the insured. The insurer, within two business days after receipt of the notice of cancellation together with a copy of the insurance premium loan agreement if not previously given to the insurer, shall give any notice of cancellation required by the policy, contract, or law and, within ten business days after the effective date of the cancellation, pay to the lender any premium unearned on the policy or contract as of that effective date. Within ten business days after receipt of the unearned premium, the lender shall pay to the consumer indebted upon the insurance premium loan any excess of the unearned premium received over the amount owing by the consumer upon the insurance premium loan.

ARTICLE 3.1

Deferred Deposit Loan Act

Law reviews: For article, "Borrowing from Peter to Pay Paul: A Statistical Analysis of Colorado's Deferred Deposit Loan Act", see 83 Den. U.L. Rev. 387 (2005).

5-3.1-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Deferred Deposit Loan Act".

Source: L. 2000: Entire article added, p. 439, § 1, effective July 1.

5-3.1-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Administrator" means the administrator of the "Uniform Consumer Credit Code".

(1.5) "Annual percentage rate" means an annual percentage rate as determined pursuant to section 107 of the federal "Truth in Lending Act", 15 U.S.C. sec. 1601 et seq. All finance charges shall be included in the calculation of the annual percentage rate.

(2) "Consumer" means a person other than an organization who is the buyer, lessee, or debtor to whom credit is granted in a consumer credit transaction.

(2.5) "Default" means a consumer's failure to repay a deferred deposit loan in compliance with the terms contained in a deferred deposit loan agreement.

(3) "Deferred deposit loan" or "payday loan" means a consumer loan whereby the lender, for a fee, finance charge, or other consideration, does the following:

(a) Accepts a dated instrument from the consumer as sole security for the loan and no other collateral;

(b) Agrees to hold the instrument for a period of time prior to negotiation or deposit of the instrument; and

(c) Pays to the consumer, credits to the consumer's account, or pays to another person on the consumer's behalf the amount of the instrument, less finance charges permitted by section 5-3.1-105.

(4) "Instrument" means a personal check or authorization to transfer or withdraw funds from an account signed by the consumer and made payable to a person subject to this article.

(5) (a) "Lender" means any person who offers or makes a deferred deposit loan, who arranges a deferred deposit loan for a third party, or who acts as an agent for a third party, regardless of whether the third party is exempt from licensing under this article or whether approval, acceptance, or ratification by the third party is necessary to create a legal obligation for the third party, through any method including mail, telephone, internet, or any electronic means.

(b) Lender includes, but is not limited to, a supervised financial organization as defined in section 5-1-301 (45).

(c) Notwithstanding that a bank, saving and loan association, credit union, or supervised lender may be exempted by federal law from this code's interest rate, finance charges, and licensure provisions, all other applicable provisions of this code apply to both a deferred deposit loan and a deferred deposit lender.

(6) "Loan amount" means the amount financed as defined in regulation z of the federal "Truth in Lending Act", 12 CFR 226.18 (b), as amended, or as supplemented by this code, articles 1 to 9 of this title.

5-3.1-103. Written agreement requirements. Each deferred deposit loan transaction and renewal shall be documented by a written agreement signed by both the lender and consumer. The written agreement shall contain the name of the consumer; the transaction date; the amount of the instrument; the annual percentage rate charged; a statement of the total amount of finance charges charged, expressed both as a dollar amount and an annual percentage rate; and the name, address, and telephone number of any agent or arranger involved in the transaction. In addition, the written agreement shall include all disclosures required by section 5-3-101 (2). The written agreement shall set a date upon which the instrument may be deposited or negotiated. There shall be no maximum loan term or minimum finance charge. The minimum loan term shall be six months from the loan transaction date. The lender shall accept prepayment from a consumer prior to the loan due date and shall not charge the consumer a penalty if the consumer opts to prepay the loan. A lender may hold an instrument and delay completion of the transaction beyond the loan due date without any additional written agreement or new disclosure, but the lender may not charge any additional fees for holding the instrument or delaying the completion of the transaction.

5-3.1-104. Notice to consumers. A lender shall provide the following notice in a prominent place on each loan agreement in at least ten-point type:

A DEFERRED DEPOSIT LOAN IS NOT INTENDED TO MEET LONG-TERM FINANCIAL NEEDS.

A DEFERRED DEPOSIT LOAN SHOULD BE USED ONLY TO MEET SHORT-TERM CASH NEEDS.

RENEWING THE DEFERRED DEPOSIT LOAN RATHER THAN PAYING THE DEBT IN FULL WILL REQUIRE ADDITIONAL FINANCE CHARGES.

5-3.1-105. Authorized interest rate. A lender may charge a finance charge for each deferred deposit loan or payday loan that may not exceed twenty percent of the first three hundred dollars loaned plus seven and one-half percent of any amount loaned in excess of three hundred dollars. Such charge shall be deemed fully earned as of the date of the transaction. The lender may also charge an interest rate of forty-five percent per annum for each deferred deposit loan or payday loan. If the loan is prepaid prior to the maturity of the loan term, the lender shall refund to the consumer a prorated portion of the annual percentage rate based upon the ratio of time left before maturity to the loan term. In addition, the lender may charge a monthly maintenance fee for each outstanding deferred deposit loan, not to exceed seven dollars and fifty cents per one hundred dollars loaned, up to thirty dollars per month. The monthly maintenance fee may be charged for each month the loan is outstanding thirty days after the date of the original loan transaction. The lender shall charge only those charges authorized in this article in connection with a deferred deposit loan.

5-3.1-106. Maximum loan amount - right to rescind. (1) A lender shall not lend an amount greater than five hundred dollars nor shall the amount financed exceed five hundred dollars by any one lender at any time to a consumer. Nothing in this subsection (1) shall preclude a lender from making more than one loan to a consumer so long as the total amount financed does not exceed five hundred dollars at any one time and there is at least a thirty-day waiting period between loans.

(2) A consumer shall have the right to rescind the deferred deposit loan on or before 5 p.m. the next business day following the loan transaction.

5-3.1-107. Multiple outstanding transactions notice. A lender shall provide the following notice in a prominent place on each deferred deposit loan agreement in at least ten-point type:

> STATE LAW PROHIBITS DEFERRED DEPOSIT LOANS EXCEEDING FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($500) TOTAL DEBT PLUS APPLICABLE FINANCE CHARGES PERMITTED BY LAW FROM A DEFERRED DEPOSIT LENDER. EXCEEDING THIS AMOUNT MAY CREATE FINANCIAL HARDSHIPS FOR YOU AND YOUR FAMILY. YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO RESCIND THIS TRANSACTION BY 5 P.M. THE NEXT BUSINESS DAY FOLLOWING THIS TRANSACTION.

5-3.1-108. Renewal - new loan - consecutive loans - payment plan - definitions. (1) A deferred deposit loan shall not be renewed more than once. After such renewal, the consumer shall pay the debt in cash or its equivalent. If the consumer does not pay the debt, then the lender may deposit the consumer's instrument.

(2) Upon renewal of a deferred deposit loan, the lender may assess an additional finance charge not to exceed an annual percentage rate of forty-five percent. If the deferred deposit loan is renewed prior to the maturity date, the lender shall refund to the consumer a prorated portion of the finance charge based upon the ratio of time left before maturity to the loan term.

(3) A transaction is completed when the lender presents the instrument for payment or the consumer redeems the instrument by paying the full amount of the instrument to the holder. Once the consumer has completed the deferred deposit transaction, the consumer may enter into a new deferred deposit agreement with the lender. If the consumer's instrument is dishonored by the payor financial institution after the transaction is complete and, before the lender receives a notice of dishonor, the lender makes a new loan that does not exceed the maximum allowable loan, the lender shall not be in violation of the maximum loan amount provisions in section 5-3.1-106.

(4) Nothing in this section prohibits a lender from refinancing a deferred deposit loan as a supervised loan subject to the provision of this code, articles 1 to 9 of this title; except that the lender may not contract for or receive the minimum finance charge contained in section 5-2-201 (7).

5-3.1-109. Form of loan proceeds. A lender may pay the proceeds from a deferred deposit loan to the consumer in the form of a business instrument, money order, cash, stored value card, internet transfer, or authorized automated clearinghouse transaction. The consumer shall not be charged an additional finance charge or fee for cashing the lender's business instrument or for negotiating forms of loan proceeds other than cash.

5-3.1-112. Authorized dishonored instrument charge. If an instrument held by a lender as a result of a deferred deposit loan is returned unpaid to the lender from a payor financial institution due to insufficient funds, a closed account, a stop-payment order, or any other reason, not including a bank error, the lender shall have the right to exercise all civil means authorized by law to collect the face value of the instrument; except that the provisions and remedies of section 13-21-109, C.R.S., are not applicable to any deferred deposit loan. In addition, the lender may contract for and collect one returned instrument charge for each deferred deposit loan, not to exceed twenty-five dollars, plus court costs and reasonable attorney fees as awarded by a court and incurred as a result of the default. However, such attorney fees shall not exceed the loan amount. The lender shall not collect any other fees as a result of default. A returned instrument charge shall not be allowed if the loan proceeds instrument is dishonored by the financial institution or the consumer places a stop-payment order due to forgery or theft.

5-3.1-118. Denial of license - discipline. (1) The administrator may deny a license or discipline a lender in accordance with sections 5-2-302, 5-2-303, and 5-2-306.

(2) (a) If the administrator finds that a lender has violated the code, articles 1 to 9 of this title, the administrator shall notify the lender in writing of such violations and the actions the lender must take to cure the violations. The administrator shall allow the lender thirty days after the postmark date of the notice, or the date of delivery if not mailed, to cure the violations before taking disciplinary action in accordance with subsection (1) of this section. If the administrator determines that such lender has performed such actions contained in such notice, the lender shall not be liable for the violations that have been cured.

(b) This subsection (2) shall not apply if the lender violated the code, articles 1 to 9 of this title, in a repeated or willful manner.

(c) If an alleged violation of the code, articles 1 to 9 of this title, is the result of a bona fide clerical oversight or computer-based error and not the product of the lender's established lending practices, and the alleged violation can be corrected without material change to the terms and conditions of a consumer's loan, the lender shall have thirty days after the postmark date of the notice, or the date of delivery if not mailed, to cure the alleged violation without incurring any fine or penalty or any required refund of any finance charges associated with the alleged violation. Nothing in this subsection (2) shall exempt a lender from making required refunds if the violation resulted in an overcharge or excess charge to the consumer.

(3) A lender shall have ninety days to comply with any rule, interpretation, or opinion of the administrator that requires a lender to implement new policies or procedures that involve the reprinting of the lender's forms to include new disclosures, or that requires the lender to revise existing computer programs or add new computer programs to comply with the rule, interpretation, or opinion. During the ninety-day period, the administrator shall not deem the lender to be in violation of articles 1 to 9 of this title for noncompliance with the new rule, interpretation, or opinion.

5-3.1-122. Unconscionability. (1) In applying the provisions of sections 5-5-109 and 5-6-112 to the actions of a lender, consideration shall be given to the following, among other factors:

(a) The financial benefits of the loan to the consumer and the level of risk incurred by the lender in extending credit;

(b) The absence of collateral other than the instrument executed by the consumer payable to the lender;

(c) The relation between the amount and terms of credit granted and the cost of making the loan.

(2) A lender shall require a consumer to fill out a loan application at least once in each twelve-month period of time and shall maintain this application on file. The application shall be signed and dated by the consumer.

(3) (a) A lender shall require the consumer to provide a pay stub or other evidence of income at least once each twelve-month period. Such evidence shall not be over forty-five days old when presented. If a lender requires a consumer to present a bank statement to secure a loan, the lender shall allow the consumer to delete from the statement the information regarding to whom the debits listed on the statement were payable.

(b) If the amount borrowed is not more than twenty-five percent of the consumer's monthly gross income and benefits, as evidenced by a paycheck stub or otherwise substantiated, a lender shall not be obligated to investigate the consumer's continued debt position, and the consumer's ability to repay the loan need not be further demonstrated.

(4) If a lender complies with the requirements of subsections (2) and (3) of this section, and the deferred deposit loan otherwise complies with this article and other applicable law, neither the consumer's inability to repay the loan nor the lender's decision to obtain or not obtain additional information concerning the consumer's creditworthiness shall be cause to determine that a loan is unconscionable.

5-3.1-123. Use of multiple agreements for deferred deposit loans. If a consumer obtains a deferred deposit loan voluntarily and separately from his or her spouse and the consumer's action is documented in writing, signed by the consumer, and retained by the lender, the transaction shall not be considered a violation of section 5-3-205.

OBLIGOR PROTECTION

PART 2

ENFORCEMENT AND LIABILITY

PART 3

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

PART 1

OBLIGOR PROTECTION

5-3.5-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Bridge loan" means temporary or short-term financing with a maturity of less than eighteen months that requires payments of only interest until the entire unpaid balance is due and payable.

(2) "Covered loan" means a consumer credit transaction secured by property located within this state that is considered a mortgage under section 152 of the federal "Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act of 1994", 15 U.S.C. sec. 1602 (aa), as amended, and regulations adopted pursuant thereto by the federal reserve board, including, without limitation, 12 CFR 226.32, as amended; except that, if the total points and fees paid by the obligor at or before closing exceed six percent of the total loan amount, such loan shall be deemed to be a covered loan if the transaction otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection (2).

(3) "Lender" means any individual or entity that originates one or more covered loans. The individual or entity to whom a covered loan is initially payable, either on the face of the note or contract or by agreement when there is no note or contract, shall be deemed to be the lender.

(4) "Mortgage broker" means a person other than an employee or exclusive agent of a lender who, for compensation, brings an obligor and lender together to obtain a covered loan.

(5) "Obligor" means each obligor, co-obligor, co-signer, or grantor obligated to repay a covered loan.

(6) "Political subdivision" means a county, city and county, city, town, service authority, school district, local improvement district, law enforcement authority, city or county housing authority, or water, sanitation, fire protection, metropolitan, irrigation, drainage, or other special district or any other kind of municipal, quasi-municipal, or public corporation organized pursuant to law.

(7) "Principal balance" means the amount financed plus prepaid finance charges as defined in the federal "Truth in Lending Act", 15 U.S.C. sec. 1601 et. seq., as amended.

(8) "Servicer" has the same meaning as set forth in section 2605 (i) (2) of the federal "Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974", 12 U.S.C. sec. 2601 et. seq., as amended.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1594, § 1, effective June 7. L. 2003: (2) amended, p. 1894, § 8, effective July 1.

5-3.5-102. Protection of obligors. (1) A covered loan is subject to the following limitations:

(a) Limitation on balloon payment. No covered loan may contain a provision for a scheduled payment that is more than twice as large as the average of earlier regularly scheduled payments, unless such balloon payment becomes due and payable not less than one hundred twenty months after the date of execution of the loan. This prohibition does not apply when the payment schedule is adjusted to account for the seasonal or irregular income of the obligor or if the purpose of the loan is a bridge loan connected with, or related to, the acquisition or construction of a dwelling intended to become the obligor's principal dwelling.

(b) No call provision. No covered loan may contain a call provision that permits the lender, in its sole discretion, to accelerate the indebtedness. This prohibition shall not apply when:

(I) Acceleration of repayment of the loan is justified:

(A) By default in which the obligor fails to meet the repayment terms of the agreement for any outstanding balance; or

(B) Pursuant to a due-on-sale provision;

(II) There is fraud or material misrepresentation by an obligor in connection with the loan;

(III) There is a provision permitting acceleration if the lender, in good faith, believes itself to be materially insecure or believes that the prospect of future payment has become materially impaired; or

(IV) There is any action or inaction by the obligor that adversely affects the lender's security for the loan or any rights of the lender in such security.

(c) No negative amortization. No covered loan may contract for a payment schedule with regular periodic payments that cause the principal balance to increase; except that this paragraph (c) shall not prohibit negative amortization as a consequence of a temporary forbearance or restructure sought by the obligor.

(d) No increased interest rate upon default. No covered loan may contract for any increase in the interest rate as a result of a default; except that this paragraph (d) shall not apply to periodic interest rate changes in a variable rate loan that is otherwise consistent with the provisions of the loan agreement if the change in the interest rate is not occasioned by the event of default or a permissible acceleration of the indebtedness.

(e) Limitations on mandatory arbitration clauses. No covered loan may be subject to a mandatory arbitration clause that:

(I) Does not comply with rules set forth by a nationally recognized arbitration organization such as the American arbitration association;

(II) Does not require the arbitration proceeding to be conducted:

(A) Within the federal judicial district in which the subject property is located;

(B) In the city nearest the obligor's residence where a federal district court is located; or

(C) At such other location as may be mutually agreed upon by the parties;

(III) Does not require the lender to contribute at least fifty percent of the amount of any filing fee; and

(IV) Does not require the lender to pay standard daily arbitration fees, both its own and those of the obligor, for at least the first day of arbitration.

(f) No advance payments. No covered loan may include terms under which any periodic payments required under the loan are paid in advance from the loan proceeds provided to the obligor.

(g) Limitations on prepayment fees. (I) First thirty-six months only. A prepayment fee or penalty shall be permitted only on a refinance to a different lender other than pursuant to a sale and only during the first thirty-six months after the date of execution of a covered loan. Prepayment fees and penalties shall not exceed six months' interest for prepayment within the first three years of the loan. The prepayment fees or penalties permitted by this paragraph (g) shall apply only to covered loans that are secured by a first mortgage, deed of trust, or security interest to refinance, by amendment, payoff, or otherwise, an existing loan made to finance the acquisition or construction of a dwelling, including a refinance loan providing additional sums of money for any purpose, regardless of whether related to acquisition or construction. No prepayment fees or penalties shall be included in the loan documents or charged to the obligor for prepayment:

(A) After the third year of the loan;

(B) Pursuant to a refinance with the same lender; or

(C) That is partial.

(II) No prepayment fees for certain refinancing. No prepayment fee or penalty may be charged on a refinancing of a covered loan if the covered loan being refinanced is owned by the refinancing lender at the time of such refinancing.

(III) Lender must offer choice. A lender shall not include a prepayment penalty fee in a covered loan unless the lender offers the obligor the option of choosing a loan product without a prepayment penalty fee. A lender shall be deemed to have complied with this requirement if the obligor receives and executes the following disclosure, which may be incorporated with any other required disclosure:

LOAN PRODUCT CHOICE

I was provided with an offer to accept a product both with and without a prepayment penalty provision. I have chosen to accept the product ________ with / ________ without a prepayment penalty.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1595, § 1, effective June 7. L. 2003: (1)(a) amended, p. 1894, § 9, effective July 1.

5-3.5-103. Restricted acts and practices. (1) The following acts and practices are prohibited in the making of a covered loan:

(a) No lending without cautionary notice. (I) A lender may not make a covered loan unless the lender or a mortgage broker has given the following notice, or a substantially similar notice, in writing to the obligor within a reasonable period of time after determining that the loan would result in a covered loan, but no later than the time by which the notice is required under the notice provision contained in 12 CFR 226.31 (c), as amended:

CONSUMER CAUTION

If you obtain this loan, the lender will have a mortgage in Colorado; this is a deed of trust on your home. You could lose your home, and any money you have put into it, if you do not meet your obligations under the loan. Mortgage loan rates and closing costs and fees vary based on many factors, including your particular credit and financial circumstances, your earnings history, the loan-to-value requested, and the type of property that will secure your loan. The loan rate and fees could vary based on which lender or broker you select.

You are not required to complete any loan agreement merely because you have received these disclosures or have signed a loan application. If you proceed with this mortgage loan, you should also remember that you may face serious financial risks if you use this loan to pay off credit card debts and other debts in connection with this transaction and then later incur significant new credit card charges or other debts. If you continue to accumulate debt after this loan is closed and then experience financial difficulties, you could lose your home and any equity you have in it if you do not meet your mortgage loan obligations.

Property taxes and homeowner's insurance are your responsibility. Not all lenders provide escrow services for these payments. You should ask your lender about these services.

Your payments on existing debts contribute to your credit ratings. You should not accept any advice to ignore your regular payments to your existing creditors.

(II) It shall be a rebuttable presumption that a lender or broker has met its obligation to provide this disclosure if the consumer provides the lender or broker with a signed acknowledgment of receipt of a copy of the notice set forth in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a).

(b) No lending without due regard to repayment ability. (I) A lender may not make a covered loan to a consumer based on the consumer's collateral without regard to the consumer's repayment ability, including the consumer's current and expected income, current obligations, and employment.

(II) There is a presumption that a creditor has violated this paragraph (b) if the creditor engages in a pattern or practice of making loans subject to 12 CFR 226.32 without verifying and documenting consumers' repayment abilities.

(III) (A) In the case of a stated income loan, the reasonable basis for believing that there are sufficient funds to support the covered loan may not be based solely on the income stated by the obligor, but may include other information in the possession of the lender after the solicitation of all information that the lender customarily solicits in connection with stated income loans. A lender shall not knowingly or willfully originate a covered loan as a stated income loan with the intent of evading this subparagraph (III).

(B) A person who willfully and knowingly gives false or inaccurate information or fails to provide information that the person is required to disclose pursuant to applicable law may have violated and may be subject to penalties established in 15 U.S.C. sec. 1611.

(c) Refinancing within a one-year period. Within one year after having extended credit subject to this article, no lender shall refinance any covered loan to the same obligor into another covered loan unless the refinancing is in the obligor's interest. An assignee holding or servicing an extension of mortgage credit subject to this article shall not, for the remainder of the one-year period following the date of origination of the credit, refinance any covered loan to the same obligor into another covered loan unless the refinancing is in the obligor's interest. A creditor or assignee shall not engage in acts or practices to evade this paragraph (c), including a pattern or practice of arranging for the refinancing of its own loans by affiliated or unaffiliated creditors, or modifying a loan agreement, regardless of whether the existing loan is satisfied and replaced by the new loan, and charging a fee.

(d) No refinancing certain low-rate loans. A lender shall not replace or consolidate a zero interest rate, or other low-rate, loan made by a governmental or nonprofit lender with a covered loan within the first ten years after the low-rate loan was made unless the current holder of the loan consents in writing to the refinancing. For purposes of this paragraph (d), a "low-rate" loan is a loan that carries a current interest rate two percentage points or more below the current yield on United States department of the treasury securities with a comparable maturity. If the loan's current interest rate is either a discounted introductory rate or a rate that automatically steps up over time, then the fully-indexed rate or the fully stepped-up rate, as appropriate, should be used in lieu of the current rate to determine whether a loan is a low-rate loan.

(e) Restrictions on covered loan proceeds to pay home improvement contracts. A lender shall not pay a contractor under a home-improvement contract from the proceeds of a covered loan other than by an instrument payable to the obligor or jointly to the obligor and the contractor or, at the election of the obligor, through a third-party escrow agent in accordance with terms established in a written agreement signed by the obligor, the lender, and the contractor prior to the disbursement of funds to the contractor.

(f) No financing of credit insurance. No covered loan may include, directly or indirectly, financing of any premiums for any credit life, credit disability, credit property, or credit unemployment insurance, any other life or health insurance products, or any payments for any debt cancellation or suspension agreement or contracts; except that calculated insurance premiums or debt cancellation or suspension fees paid on a monthly basis shall not be considered to have been financed by the lender for purposes of this paragraph (f).

(g) No recommending default. No lender shall recommend or encourage default on an existing loan or other debt prior to and in connection with the closing or planned closing of a covered loan that refinances all or any portion of such existing loan or debt.

(h) No fee for payoff quote. No creditor may charge a fee for informing or transmitting to any person the balance due to pay off a covered loan or to provide a release upon prepayment. A creditor shall provide a payoff balance within a reasonable time after a request, but in any event not more than five business days after a written request.

5-3.5-104. Reporting to credit bureaus. A lender or its servicer shall report at least quarterly both the favorable and unfavorable payment history information of the obligor on payments due to the lender on a covered loan to a nationally recognized consumer credit reporting agency. This section shall not prevent a lender or its servicer from agreeing with the obligor not to report specified payment history information in the event of a resolved or unresolved dispute with an obligor, and shall not apply to covered loans held or serviced by a lender for less than ninety days.

5-3.5-201. Enforcement - liability. The attorney general and any obligor of a covered loan may enforce this article with respect to such covered loan in the manner provided for violations of the federal "Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act of 1994", 15 U.S.C. sec. 1639, and regulations adopted pursuant thereto by the federal reserve board, including, without limitation, 12 CFR 226.32, as set forth in the federal "Truth in Lending Act", 15 U.S.C. sec. 1640, and regulations adopted pursuant thereto by the federal reserve board, including the provisions on civil liability, class actions, rescission, correction, and bona fide error. Persons engaged in the purchase, sale, assignment, securitization, or servicing of covered loans shall be liable under this article for the action or inaction of persons originating such loans only in the manner and to the extent provided for violation of the federal "Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act of 1994" and the federal "Truth in Lending Act", 15 U.S.C. sec. 1641, and regulations adopted pursuant thereto by the federal reserve board.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

5-3.5-301. Effective date - applicability. Section 5-3.5-303 is intended to restate and confirm the existing law of this state, namely that the laws of this state relating to the financial and lending activities are to be applied on a uniform, statewide basis. Parts 1 and 2 of this article shall take effect January 1, 2003. This part 3 shall take effect upon passage. This article shall apply to covered loans offered or entered into on or after January 1, 2003.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added, p. 1601, § 1, effective June 7.

5-3.5-302. Severability. The provisions of this article are severable and if any of its provisions are held unconstitutional, the decision of the court shall not affect or impair any of the remaining provisions of this article. It is hereby declared to be the legislative intent that this article would have been adopted if the unconstitutional provisions had not been included.

5-3.5-303. Relationship to other laws. (1) General rule. All political subdivisions of this state, including municipalities, shall be prohibited from enacting and enforcing ordinances, resolutions, and regulations pertaining to lending activities.

(2) Preemption. Any provision of this article preempted by federal law with respect to a national bank or federal savings association shall also, to the same extent, not apply to an operating subsidiary of a national bank or federal savings association that satisfies the requirements for operating subsidiaries established in 12 CFR 5.34, relating to operating subsidiaries, or 12 CFR 559.3, relating to the characteristics of and requirements for subordinate organizations of federal savings associations, nor to a bank chartered under the laws of Colorado or any operating subsidiary of such a state chartered bank.

(3) Interpretation. The provisions of this article shall be interpreted and applied to the fullest extent practical in a manner consistent with applicable federal laws and regulations, and shall not be deemed to constitute an attempt to override federal law.

ARTICLE 3.7

Consumer Credit Solicitation Protection

5-3.7-101. Consumer credit solicitation protection - definitions. (1) A solicitor that makes a firm offer of credit for a lender credit card or a seller credit card to a consumer by mail solicitation and receives an acceptance of that offer that lists the address of the consumer accepting the offer as different from the address to which the offer was sent shall, prior to issuing or directing issuances of the lender credit card or seller credit card, verify that the consumer accepting the offer is the same consumer to whom the offer was sent.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Firm offer of credit" shall have the same meaning as set forth in 15 U.S.C. sec. 1681a (l).

(b) "Solicitor" means the person making the offer by mail solicitation and does not include a card issuer or other creditor when that creditor or card issuer relies on an independent third party to provide the services.

(c) "Verify" means the use of commercially reasonable efforts to ascertain that the consumer responding to a mail solicitation is the same consumer to whom the solicitation was directed. For the purposes of this article, a solicitor shall be deemed to verify that the consumer accepting a mail solicitation is the same consumer to whom the solicitation was directed if:

(I) A consumer responding at a telephone number appearing in a publicly available directory or database as the telephone number of the consumer to whom the solicitation was mailed identifies himself or herself as the consumer to whom the solicitation was mailed and acknowledges the consumer's acceptance of the solicitation; or

(II) A consumer presents the solicitor, including presentation by facsimile transmission or mail, the original or a copy of one or more documents, including a driver's license, social security card, passport, or any other identification document issued by a state or federal governmental agency, that, on the face of the document or documents, appears to confirm such consumer's identity as the consumer to whom a solicitation was mailed and the consumer acknowledges acceptance of the solicitation; or

(III) The solicitor verified, by any means adopted in federal regulations, that the consumer accepting the solicitation is the consumer to whom the solicitation was directed; or

(IV) The solicitor verified by any other means, that under the standards and practices of the industry in which the solicitor is engaged would be deemed sufficient, that the consumer accepting the solicitation is the same consumer to whom the solicitation was sent.

PART 1

INSURANCE IN GENERAL

PART 1

INSURANCE IN GENERAL

5-4-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as "Uniform Consumer Credit Code - Insurance".

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-4-101, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-4-102. Scope - relation to credit insurance act - applicability to parties. (1) This article applies to insurance provided or to be provided in relation to a consumer credit transaction.

(2) This article supplements and does not repeal the "Credit Insurance Act", article 10 of title 10, C.R.S. The provisions of this code concerning administrative controls, liabilities, and penalties do not apply to persons acting as insurers, and the similar provisions of the "Credit Insurance Act" do not apply to creditors and consumers.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-4-102, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-4-103. Definitions - "consumer credit insurance" - "Credit Insurance Act". As used in this code, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Consumer credit insurance" means insurance, other than insurance on property, by which the satisfaction of debt in whole or in part is a benefit provided but does not include:

(a) Insurance, as to which a finance charge is imposed and provided in relation to a credit transaction in which a payment is scheduled more than ten years after the extension of credit;

(b) Insurance issued as an isolated transaction on the part of the insurer not related to an agreement or plan for insuring consumers of the creditor; or

(c) Insurance indemnifying the creditor against loss due to the consumer's default.

(2) "Credit Insurance Act" means the "Credit Insurance Act", article 10 of title 10, C.R.S.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-4-103, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-4-104. Creditor's provision of and charge for insurance - excess amount of charge. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this article and subject to the provisions on additional charges contained in section 5-2-202 and maximum charges contained in section 5-2-201, a creditor may agree to provide insurance and may contract for and receive a charge for insurance separate from and in addition to other charges. A creditor need not make a separate charge for insurance provided or required by the creditor. This code does not authorize the issuance of any insurance prohibited under any statute, or rule thereunder, governing the business of insurance.

(2) The excess amount of a charge for insurance provided for in agreements in violation of this article is an excess charge for the purposes of:

(a) The provisions on remedies and penalties contained in article 5 of this title as to effect of violations on rights of parties under section 5-5-201; and

(b) The provisions on administration contained in article 6 of this title as to civil actions by the administrator under section 5-6-114.

5-4-105. Conditions applying to insurance to be provided by creditor. (1) If a creditor agrees with a consumer to provide insurance:

(a) The insurance shall be evidenced by an individual policy or certificate of insurance delivered to the consumer or sent to the consumer at his or her address as stated by the consumer within thirty days after the term of the insurance commences under the agreement between the creditor and consumer; or

(b) The creditor shall promptly notify the consumer of any failure or delay in providing the insurance.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-4-105, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-4-106. Unconscionability. (1) In applying the provisions of this code on unconscionability contained in sections 5-5-109 and 5-6-112 to a separate charge for insurance, consideration shall be given, among other factors, to:

(a) Potential benefits to the consumer including the satisfaction of the consumer's obligations;

(b) The creditor's need for the protection provided by the insurance; and

(c) The relation between the amount and terms of credit granted and the insurance benefits provided.

(2) If consumer credit insurance otherwise complies with this article and other applicable law, neither the amount nor the term of the insurance nor the amount of a charge therefor is in itself unconscionable.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-4-106, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-4-107. Maximum charge by creditor for insurance. (1) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, if a creditor contracts for or receives a separate charge for insurance, the amount charged to the consumer for the insurance may not exceed the premium to be charged by the insurer as computed at the time the charge to the consumer is determined conforming to any rate filings required by law and made by the insurer with the commissioner of insurance.

(2) A creditor who provides consumer credit insurance in relation to a revolving credit account may calculate the charge to the consumer in each billing cycle by applying the current premium rate to:

(a) The average daily unpaid balance of the debt in the cycle;

(b) The unpaid balance of the debt or a median amount within a specified range of unpaid balances of debt on approximately the same day of the cycle. The day of the cycle need not be the day used in calculating the finance charge, but the specified range shall be the range used for that purpose; or

(c) The unpaid balances of the amount financed calculated according to the actuarial method.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-4-107, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-4-108. Refund or credit required - amount. (1) (a) Except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, an appropriate refund or credit of unearned premiums shall be made to the person entitled thereto with respect to any separate charge made to the consumer for insurance if:

(I) The insurance is not provided or is provided for a shorter term than that for which the charge to the consumer for insurance was computed; or

(II) The insurance terminates prior to the end of the term for which it was written because of prepayment in full of the indebtedness or the insurance terminates for any other reason.

(b) All consumer credit insurance shall terminate upon prepayment in full of the indebtedness.

(2) If a refund or credit of unearned premiums is required pursuant to the provisions of subsection (1) of this section:

(a) The original creditor, if he or she is the holder of the indebtedness at the time of prepayment, shall either promptly make the appropriate refund or credit or shall promptly notify the consumer and the insurer in writing that a refund or credit is due. Upon the receipt of notice that a refund or credit is due, the insurer shall promptly make an appropriate refund or credit of unearned premiums pursuant to the provisions of section 10-10-110 (2), C.R.S. For purposes of this section, "original creditor" means the person to whom the indebtedness was initially payable, and "insurer" means every person engaged as principal, indemnitor, surety, or contractor in the business of making contracts of insurance, excluding any licensed insurance agent.

(b) (I) The assignee, if the indebtedness has been assigned, shall either promptly make the appropriate refund or credit or shall promptly notify the consumer, the original creditor, and the insurer, if known, in writing that a refund or credit is due. For the purposes of this section, "assignee" means a person other than the original creditor who at the time of prepayment holds the indebtedness.

(II) The original creditor, upon receipt of notice pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b), shall either promptly make the appropriate refund or credit or shall promptly notify the insurer in writing that a refund or credit of unearned premiums is due.

(c) The insurer, upon the receipt of notice that a refund or credit is due pursuant to paragraph (a) or (b) of this subsection (2), shall make an appropriate refund or credit of unearned premiums pursuant to the provisions of section 10-10-110 (2), C.R.S., and subsection (1) of this section.

(d) An assignee or original creditor gives notice pursuant to this section upon delivery or mailing of the notice to the last address provided to him or her. Once an original creditor or an assignee has notified the appropriate party, as provided in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this subsection (2), the original creditor and the assignee shall have no further obligations.

(3) This article does not require a refund or credit of unearned premiums if:

(a) All refunds and credits due to the debtor under this article amount to less than one dollar; or

(b) The charge for insurance is computed from time to time on the outstanding balance of the indebtedness and the charge relates to only one premium period.

(4) Except as otherwise required, a refund or credit is not required because:

(a) The insurance is terminated by payment of proceeds under the policy; or

(b) The original creditor or assignee pays or accounts for premiums to the insurer in the amounts and at the times determined by the agreement between them; or

(c) The original creditor or assignee receives directly or indirectly under any policy of insurance a gain or advantage not prohibited by law.

(5) If a single type of insurance is terminated by the payment of proceeds under the policy pursuant to paragraph (a) of subsection (4) of this section, a refund or credit of unearned premiums for all other types of consumer credit insurance issued on the same indebtedness shall be made if so required by the provisions of this section and section 10-10-110 (2), C.R.S.

(6) A refund or credit required by subsection (1) of this section is appropriate as to amount if it is computed according to a method prescribed or approved by the commissioner of insurance or a formula filed by the insurer with the commissioner of insurance at least thirty days before the consumer's right to a refund or credit becomes determinable unless the method or formula is employed after the commissioner of insurance notifies the insurer that he or she disapproves it.

5-4-109. Existing insurance - choice of insurer. If a creditor requires insurance, upon notice to the creditor the consumer shall have the option of providing the required insurance through an existing policy of insurance owned or controlled by the consumer or through a policy to be obtained and paid for by the consumer, but the creditor may for reasonable cause decline the insurance provided by the consumer.

5-4-110. Charge for insurance in connection with a deferral, refinancing, or consolidation - duplicate charges. (1) A creditor may not contract for or receive a separate charge for insurance in connection with a deferral described in section 5-2-204, a refinancing described in section 5-2-205, or a consolidation described in section 5-2-206 unless:

(a) The consumer agrees at or before the time of the deferral, refinancing, or consolidation that the charge may be made;

(b) The consumer is or is to be provided with insurance for an amount or a term, or insurance of a kind, in addition to that to which the consumer would have been entitled had there been no deferral, refinancing, or consolidation;

(c) The consumer receives a refund or credit on account of any unexpired term of existing insurance in the amount that would be required if the insurance were terminated under section 5-4-108; and

(d) The charge does not exceed the amount permitted under section 5-4-107.

(2) A creditor may not contract for or receive a separate charge for insurance that duplicates insurance with respect to which the creditor has previously contracted for or received a separate charge.

5-4-111. Cooperation between administrator and commissioner of insurance. The administrator and the commissioner of insurance are authorized and directed to consult and assist one another in maintaining compliance with this article. They may jointly pursue investigations, prosecute suits, and take other official action, as may seem to them appropriate, if either of them is otherwise empowered to take the action. If the administrator is informed of a violation or suspected violation by an insurer of this article or of the insurance laws, rules, and regulations of this state, the administrator shall advise the commissioner of insurance of the circumstances.

5-4-112. Administrative action of commissioner of insurance. (1) To the extent that the commissioner's responsibility under this article requires, the commissioner of insurance shall promulgate rules in accordance with article 4 of title 24, C.R.S., with respect to insurers, and with respect to refunds described in section 5-4-108, and, in case of violation, may make an order for compliance.

(2) Sections 24-4-102 to 24-4-106, C.R.S., apply to and govern all administrative action taken by the commissioner of insurance pursuant to this section.

CONSUMER CREDIT INSURANCE

5-4-201. Term of insurance. (1) Consumer credit insurance provided by a creditor may be subject to the furnishing of evidence of insurability satisfactory to the insurer. Whether or not such evidence is required, the term of the insurance shall commence no later than when the consumer becomes obligated to the creditor or when the consumer applies for the insurance, whichever is later, except as follows:

(a) If any required evidence of insurability is not furnished until more than thirty days after the term would otherwise commence, the term may commence on the date when the insurer determines the evidence to be satisfactory; or

(b) If the creditor provides insurance not previously provided covering debts previously created, the term may commence on the effective date of the policy.

(2) The originally scheduled term of the insurance shall extend at least until the due date of the last scheduled payment of the debt except as follows:

(a) If the insurance relates to a revolving credit account, the term need extend only until the payment of the debt under the account and may be sooner terminated after at least thirty days' notice to the consumer; or

(b) If the consumer is advised in writing that the insurance will be written for a specified shorter time, the term need extend only until the end of the specified time.

(3) The term of the insurance shall not extend more than thirty days after the originally scheduled due date of the last scheduled payment of the debt unless it is extended without additional cost to the consumer or as an incident to a deferral, refinancing, or consolidation.

5-4-202. Amount of insurance. (1) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section:

(a) In the case of consumer credit insurance providing life coverage, the amount of insurance may not initially exceed the debt and, if the debt is payable in installments, may not at any time exceed the greater of the scheduled or actual amount of the debt; or

(b) In the case of any other consumer credit insurance, the total amount of periodic benefits payable may not exceed the total of scheduled unpaid installments of the debt, and the amount of any periodic benefit may not exceed the original amount of debt divided by the number of periodic installments in which it is payable.

(2) If consumer credit insurance is provided in connection with a revolving credit account, the amounts payable as insurance benefits may be reasonably commensurate with the amount of debt as it exists from time to time. If consumer credit insurance is provided in connection with a commitment to grant credit in the future, the amounts payable as insurance benefits may be reasonably commensurate with the total from time to time of the amount of debt and the amount of the commitment.

PART 3

PROPERTY AND LIABILITY INSURANCE

5-4-301. Property insurance. (1) A creditor may not contract for or receive a separate charge for insurance against loss of or damage to property unless:

(a) The insurance covers a substantial risk of loss of or damage to property related to the credit transaction;

(b) The amount, terms, and conditions of the insurance are reasonable in relation to the character and value of the property insured or to be insured; and

(c) The term of the insurance is reasonable in relation to the terms of credit.

(2) The term of the insurance is reasonable if it is customary and does not extend substantially beyond a scheduled maturity.

(3) A creditor may not contract for or receive a separate charge for insurance against loss of or damage to property unless the amount financed exclusive of charges for the insurance is one thousand dollars or more and the value of the property is one thousand dollars or more.

ANNOTATION

A creditor named as a beneficiary in a policy on the debtor's life is entitled out of the proceeds only to the amount of the actual debt, together with interest. Where the sole purpose to be accomplished in the issuance of an insurance policy upon the life of a debtor is to secure the payment of a debt to the creditor, or where the same single purpose is accomplished by a change in beneficiary, the creditor's right to the proceeds of the policy on the death of a debtor extends no further than indemnity. Under such circumstances all proceeds from the policy beyond the debt owed the creditor plus interest and premiums paid by him, are payable to the legal representatives of the deceased debtor. Forster v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 135 Colo. 383, 311 P.2d 700 (1957) (decided under repealed § 73-5-1, CRS 53).

5-4-303. Liability insurance. A creditor may not contract for or receive a separate charge for insurance against liability unless the insurance covers a substantial risk of liability arising out of the ownership or use of property related to the credit transaction.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-4-303, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-4-304. Cancellation by creditor. This section does not apply to an insurance premium loan. A creditor shall not request cancellation of a policy of property or liability insurance except after the consumer's default or in accordance with a written authorization by the consumer, and in either case the cancellation does not take effect until written notice is delivered to the consumer or mailed to the consumer at his or her address as stated by the consumer. The notice shall state that the policy may be canceled on a date not less than ten days after the notice is delivered or, if the notice is mailed, not less than thirteen days after it is mailed.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-5-102, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-5-103. Restrictions on deficiency judgments in consumer credit sales. (1) This section applies to a consumer credit sale of goods or services. A consumer is not liable for a deficiency unless the creditor has disposed of the goods in accordance with the provisions on the disposition of collateral of the "Uniform Commercial Code" contained in part 6 of article 9 of title 4, C.R.S.

(2) If the creditor repossesses, with or without the aid of judicial process, or voluntarily accepts surrender of goods that were the subject of the sale and in which the creditor has a security interest, the parties obligated are not personally liable to the creditor for the unpaid balance of the debt arising from the sale of a commercial unit of goods of which the cash sale price was three thousand dollars or less, and the creditor's duty to dispose of the collateral is governed by the provisions on the disposition of collateral of the "Uniform Commercial Code" contained in part 6 of article 9 of title 4, C.R.S.

(3) If the creditor repossesses, with or without the aid of judicial process, or voluntarily accepts surrender of goods that were not the subject of the sale but in which the creditor has a security interest to secure a debt arising from a sale of goods or services or a combined sale of goods and services and the cash price of the sale was three thousand dollars or less, the parties obligated are not personally liable to the creditor for the unpaid balance of the debt arising from the sale, and the creditor's duty to dispose of the collateral is governed by the provisions on disposition of collateral of the "Uniform Commercial Code" contained in part 6 of article 9 of title 4, C.R.S.

(4) For the purpose of determining the unpaid balance of consolidated debts or debts pursuant to revolving credit accounts, the allocation of payments to a debt shall be determined in the same manner as provided for determining the amount of debts secured by various security interests under sections 5-3-202 and 5-3-203.

(5) The consumer may be liable in damages to the creditor if the consumer has misused, abused, or wrongfully damaged the collateral or if, after default and demand in writing, the consumer has wrongfully failed to make the collateral available to the creditor. Nothing in this section shall limit or restrict the remedies of the holders of a security interest for damage to the collateral because of conversion, destruction, or other wrongful acts.

(6) If the creditor elects to bring an action against the consumer for a debt arising from a consumer credit sale of goods or services, when under this section the creditor would not be entitled to a deficiency judgment if the creditor took possession of the collateral, and obtains judgment:

(a) The creditor may not take possession of the collateral; and

(b) The collateral is not subject to levy or sale on execution or similar proceedings pursuant to the judgment.

5-5-104. Insecurity and impaired collateral. (1) If a creditor takes possession of any collateral because the creditor deems himself or herself insecure or because the creditor feels his or her collateral is impaired, and the creditor fails to prove that, at the time possession was taken, the creditor, in good faith, had reasonable cause to believe that he or she was insecure or that his or her collateral was impaired:

(a) The creditor shall be liable to the consumer for court costs and attorney fees as determined by the court; and

(b) The consumer shall not be liable for any finance charge incurred during the period the consumer is without use of the collateral.

5-5-105. No garnishment before judgment. Prior to entry of judgment in an action against the consumer for debt arising from a consumer credit transaction, the creditor may not replevin goods, except motor vehicles, of the consumer with the use of force from a dwelling upon an ex parte order of court or attach unpaid earnings of the consumer by garnishment or like proceedings.

ANNOTATION

Shares of common stock debtor purchased through an employee stock purchase plan are not exempt earnings pursuant to this section and § 13-54-104. In re Kramer, 339 P.3d 761 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2006).

5-5-106. Limitation on garnishment - definitions. (1) For the purposes of this part 1:

(a) "Disposable earnings" means that part of the earnings of an individual remaining after the deduction from those earnings of amounts required by law to be withheld.

(b) "Garnishment" means any legal or equitable procedure through which the earnings of an individual are required to be withheld for payment of a debt.

(2) (a) The maximum part of the aggregate disposable earnings of an individual for any work week that is subjected to garnishment to enforce payment of a judgment arising from a consumer credit transaction may not exceed the lesser of:

(I) Twenty-five percent of the individual's disposable earnings for that week; or

(II) The amount by which the individual's disposable earnings for that week exceed thirty times the federal minimum hourly wage prescribed by section 206 (a) (1) of the "Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938", 29 U.S.C. sec. 201 et seq., in effect at the time the earnings are payable; or

(III) The amount by which the individual's disposable earnings for that week exceed thirty times the state minimum hourly wage pursuant to section 15 of article XVIII of the state constitution in effect at the time the earnings are payable.

(b) In the case of earnings for a pay period other than a week, the administrator may prescribe by rule a multiple of the federal minimum hourly wage or the state minimum hourly wage, equivalent in effect to that set forth in subparagraphs (II) or (III) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2).

(3) No court may make, execute, or enforce an order or process in violation of this section.

(4) It shall not be necessary for any individual to claim the exemptions for that portion of the aggregate disposable earnings that are not subject to garnishment as set forth in subsection (2) of this section, and such exemption from garnishment shall be self-executing in any garnishment procedure.

(5) This section does not repeal, alter, or affect other statutes of this state prohibiting garnishments or providing for larger exemptions from garnishments than are allowed under this section.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 5-5-106 is similar to § 5-5-105 as it existed prior to the 2000 repeal and reenactment of articles 1 to 3 and 4 to 6 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is substantially similar to the federal wage garnishment law. First Nat'l Bank v. Columbia Credit Corp., 179 Colo. 242, 499 P.2d 1163 (1972).

Consequently, garnishments may be exempted from federal act. The secretary of labor may exempt from the garnishment provisions of the federal act garnishments under the law of any state which are substantially similar to those provided in the federal wage garnishment law. First Nat'l Bank v. Columbia Credit Corp., 179 Colo. 242, 499 P.2d 1163 (1972).

The federal wage garnishment law does not annul, alter, affect, or exempt any person from complying with state laws which prohibit garnishment, or which provide for more limited garnishments than are permitted under federal law. First Nat'l Bank v. Columbia Credit Corp., 179 Colo. 242, 499 P.2d 1163 (1972).

Whichever law is the more restrictive and results in the smaller garnishment is the one which must be applied in any given situation. First Nat'l Bank v. Columbia Credit Corp., 179 Colo. 242, 499 P.2d 1163 (1972).

Limitation inapplicable to child support obligations. The limitation contained in subsection (2) is inapplicable to an order of assignment of wages to enforce child support obligations. In re McCue, 645 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1982).

Applied in Bernstein v. Richardson, 34 Bankr. 611 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1983).

5-5-107. No discharge from employment for garnishment. No employer shall discharge an employee for the reason that a creditor of the employee has subjected or attempted to subject unpaid earnings of the employee to garnishment or like proceedings directed to the employer for the purpose of paying a judgment arising from a consumer credit transaction.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Punitive Damages in Wrongful Discharge Cases", see 15 Colo. Law. 658 (1986).

5-5-108. Extortionate extensions of credit. (1) If it is the understanding of the creditor and the consumer at the time an extension of credit is made that delay in making repayment or failure to make repayment could result in the use of violence or other criminal means to cause harm to the person, reputation, or property of any person, the repayment of the extension of credit is unenforceable through civil judicial processes against the consumer.

(2) If it is shown that an extension of credit was made at an annual percentage rate exceeding forty-five percent calculated according to the actuarial method and that the creditor then had a reputation for the use or threat of use of violence or other criminal means to cause harm to the person, reputation, or property of any person to collect extensions of credit or to punish the nonpayment thereof, there is prima facie evidence that the extension of credit was unenforceable under subsection (1) of this section.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-5-107, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-5-109. Unconscionability - inducement by unconscionable conduct - unconscionable debt collection. (1) With respect to a transaction that is, gives rise to, or leads the consumer to believe will give rise to a consumer credit transaction, if the court as a matter of law finds:

(a) The agreement or transaction to have been unconscionable at the time it was made, or to have been induced by unconscionable conduct, the court may refuse to enforce the agreement; or

(b) Any term or part of the agreement or transaction to have been unconscionable at the time it was made, the court may refuse to enforce the agreement, enforce the remainder of the agreement without the unconscionable term or part, or so limit the application of any unconscionable term or part as to avoid any unconscionable result.

(2) With respect to a consumer credit transaction, if the court as a matter of law finds that a person has engaged in, is engaging in, or is likely to engage in unconscionable conduct in collecting a debt arising from that transaction, the court may grant an injunction and award the consumer any actual damages the consumer has sustained.

(3) If it is claimed or appears to the court that the agreement or transaction or any term or part thereof may be unconscionable or that a person has engaged in, is engaging in, or is likely to engage in unconscionable conduct in collecting a debt, the parties shall be afforded a reasonable opportunity to present evidence as to the setting, purpose, and effect of the agreement or transaction or term or part thereof or of the conduct to aid the court in making the determination.

(4) In applying subsection (2) of this section, consideration shall be given to each of the following factors, among others, as applicable:

(a) Using or threatening to use force or violence against the consumer or members of the consumer's family;

(b) Communicating with the consumer or a member of the consumer's family at frequent intervals or at unusual hours or under other circumstances so that it is a reasonable inference that the primary purpose of the communication was to harass the consumer;

(c) Using fraudulent, deceptive, or misleading representations such as a communication that simulates legal process or that gives the appearance of being authorized, issued, or approved by a government, governmental agency, or attorney at law when it is not or threatening or attempting to enforce a right with knowledge or reason to know that the right does not exist;

(d) Causing or threatening to cause injury to the consumer's reputation or economic status by:

(I) Disclosing information affecting the consumer's reputation for credit worthiness with knowledge or reason to know that the information is false;

(II) Communicating with the consumer's employer before obtaining a final judgment against the debtor, except, as permitted by statute, to verify the consumer's employment, to ascertain the consumer's whereabouts, or to request that the consumer contact the creditor;

(III) Disclosing to a person, with knowledge or reason to know that the person does not have a legitimate business need for the information, or in any way prohibited by statute, information affecting the consumer's credit or other reputation; or

(IV) Disclosing information concerning the existence of a debt known to be disputed by the consumer without disclosing that fact;

(e) Engaging in conduct with knowledge that like conduct has been restrained or enjoined by a court in a civil action by the administrator against any person pursuant to the provisions on injunctions against fraudulent or unconscionable agreements or conduct contained in section 5-6-112.

(5) If, in an action in which unconscionability is claimed, the court finds unconscionability pursuant to subsection (1) or (2) of this section, the court may award reasonable fees to the attorney for the consumer. If the court does not find unconscionability and the consumer claiming unconscionability has brought or maintained an action the consumer knew to be groundless, the court may award reasonable fees to the attorney for the party against whom the claim is made. In determining attorney fees, the amount of the recovery on behalf of the consumer is not controlling.

(6) The remedies of this section are in addition to remedies otherwise available for the same conduct under laws other than this code, but double recovery of actual damages may not be had.

(7) For the purpose of this section, a charge or practice expressly permitted by this code is not in itself unconscionable.

Annotator's note. Since § 5-5-109 is similar to § 5-5-108 as it existed prior to the 2000 repeal and reenactment of articles 1 to 3 and 4 to 6 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Section 1681 h(e) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act does not furnish defendant immunity from a statutory claim under this section since nothing in this section is inconsistent with the regulatory provisions of the Act and since an action under this section is to enforce a statutory right, and is not an action in the nature of defamation or invasion of privacy. Conley v. Greenwood Trust Co., 923 P.2d 307 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 938 P.2d 1141 (Colo. 1997).

Liability under this section is not dependent upon proof demonstrating that the plaintiff was legally indebted to defendant. Once the purported creditor treats another party as a debtor, that party will be recognized as such for purposes of this section. Conley v. Greenwood Trust Co., 923 P.2d 307 (Colo. App. 1996).

This section applies to consumer credit, lease, or loan transactions and does not apply to a loan made by a person who was not in the business of making loans; therefore, even though 50% interest rate on note was usurious, realtor who made loan was entitled to maximum legal rate of 45% interest on note. Brown v. Fenner, 757 P.2d 184 (Colo. App. 1988).

5-5-110. Notice of right to cure. (1) With respect to a consumer credit transaction, after a consumer has been in default for ten days for failure to make a required payment and has not voluntarily surrendered possession of goods or the mobile home that are collateral, a creditor may give the consumer the notice described in this section. A creditor gives notice to the consumer pursuant to this section when the creditor delivers the notice to the consumer or mails the notice to the consumer at the consumer's residence, as defined in section 5-1-201 (6).

(2) Except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, the notice shall be in writing and conspicuously state: The name, address, and telephone number of the creditor to which payment is to be made, a brief identification of the credit transaction, the right to cure the default, and the amount of payment and date by which payment must be made to cure the default. A notice in substantially the following form complies with this subsection (2):

(Name, address, and telephone number of creditor)

(Account number, if any)

(Brief identification of credit transaction)

(Date) is the LAST DATE FOR PAYMENT.

(Amount) is the AMOUNT NOW DUE.

You are late in making your payment(s). If you pay the AMOUNT NOW DUE (above) by the LAST DAY FOR PAYMENT (above), you may continue with the contract as though you were not late. If you do not pay by this date, we may exercise our rights under the law.

If you are late again in making your payments, we may exercise our rights without sending you another notice like this one. If you have questions, write or telephone the creditor promptly.

(3) If the consumer credit transaction is a consumer insurance premium loan, the notice shall conform to the requirements of subsection (2) of this section, and a notice in substantially the form specified in subsection (2) of this section shall be deemed compliance with this subsection (3) except for the following:

(a) In lieu of a brief identification of the credit transaction, the notice shall identify the transaction as a consumer insurance premium loan and shall identify each policy or contract that may be canceled;

(b) In lieu of the statement in the form of notice specified in subsection (2) of this section that the creditor may exercise its rights under law, a statement shall be included that each policy or contract identified in the notice may be canceled; and

(c) The last paragraph of the form of notice specified in subsection (2) of this section shall be omitted.

(4) A notice of right to cure delivered or mailed to a cosigner pursuant to this section shall be modified to state that the consumer is late in making his or her payment, include the consumer's name, and that if the amount now due is not paid by the last date for payment, the creditor may exercise its rights against the consumer, cosigner, or both.

Buyer may also be entitled to redeem. In addition to the right to cure, as provided by this section and § 5-5-112, a buyer may be entitled to redeem, but only if the trial court determines that the equities so warrant. Woods v. Monticello Dev. Co., 656 P.2d 1324 (Colo. App. 1982).

Creditor choosing not to effect actual delivery must use method of mail likely to insure that the notice is actually delivered to the debtors' residence. Aetna Fin. Co. v. Summers, 44 Colo. App. 491, 618 P.2d 726 (1980), aff'd, 642 P.2d 926 (Colo. 1982).

Mailing by certified mail return receipt requested does not per se constitute notice to the debtor under subsection (1). Aetna Fin. Co. v. Summers, 44 Colo. App. 491, 618 P.2d 726 (1980), aff'd, 642 P.2d 926 (Colo. 1982).

Statutory notice method required when debtor had knowledge alternate method failed. Once the creditor has actual knowledge that the debtor has not received a notice mailed by certified mail, return receipt requested, it was incumbent upon creditor to satisfy the statutory notice requirement by personal service or by sending the notice by regular mail to debtor's home. Aetna Fin. Co. v. Summers, 642 P.2d 926 (Colo. 1982).

5-5-111. Cure of default. (1) With respect to a consumer credit transaction, except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, after a default consisting only of the consumer's failure to make a required payment, a creditor, because of that default, may neither accelerate maturity of the unpaid balance of the obligation nor take possession of or otherwise enforce a security interest in the goods or the mobile home that are collateral until twenty days after giving the consumer a notice of right to cure described in section 5-5-110. Until the expiration of the minimum applicable period after the notice is given, all defaults consisting of a failure to make the required payment may be cured by tendering to the creditor the amount of all unpaid sums due at the time of the tender, without acceleration, plus any unpaid delinquency or deferral charges. Cure restores the consumer to his or her rights under the agreement as though the defaults had not occurred.

(2) With respect to defaults on the same obligation, other than defaults on an obligation secured by a mobile home, after a creditor has once given the consumer a notice of right to cure described in section 5-5-110, this section gives no right to cure and imposes no limitation on the creditor's right to proceed against the consumer or goods that are collateral with respect to any subsequent default that occurs within twelve months of such notice. With respect to defaults on the same obligation that is secured by a mobile home, this section gives no right to cure and imposes no limitation on the creditor's right to proceed against the consumer or goods that are collateral with respect to any third default that occurs within twelve months of such notice. For the purpose of this section, in connection with revolving credit accounts, the obligation is the consumer's account, and there is no right to cure and no limitation on the creditor's rights with respect to any default that occurs within twelve months after an earlier default as to which a creditor has given the consumer notice of right to cure.

(3) Unless a creditor has provided the cosignor on a consumer credit transaction with a notice of right to cure that complies with section 5-5-110 and this section, in addition to the notice of right to cure provided to the consumer, the creditor may neither accelerate maturity of the unpaid balance of the obligation as to the cosignor nor report that amount on the cosignor's consumer report with a consumer reporting agency as defined in section 12-14.3-102, C.R.S., and 15 U.S.C. sec. 1681a.

(4) This section and the provisions on waiver, agreements to forego rights, and settlement of claims do not prohibit a consumer from voluntarily surrendering possession of goods that are collateral and the creditor from thereafter enforcing its security interest in the goods at any time after default.

(5) This section shall not apply to consumer credit transactions that are payable in four or fewer installments.

Buyer may also be entitled to redeem. In addition to the right to cure, as provided by this section and § 5-5-111, a buyer may be entitled to redeem, but only if the trial court determines that the equities so warrant. Woods v. Monticello Dev. Co., 656 P.2d 1324 (Colo. App. 1982).

A lender must strictly comply with notice provisions of the UCCC before it can accelerate a loan and repossess collateral. This section permits acceleration only after a notice of a debtor's right to cure is given. Accelerating a loan prior to the giving of notice as required by this section is improper. First Nat. Bank v. Union Tavern Corp., 794 P.2d 261 (Colo. App. 1990).

This section prohibits a lender from charging default interest against a debtor prior to giving notice of default as required by this section. First Nat. Bank v. Union Tavern Corp., 794 P.2d 261 (Colo. App. 1990).

This section and next section preclude a creditor under a consumer credit transaction from pursuing a replevin remedy prior to the expiration of the 20-day notice period set forth in this section. Green Tree Fin. v. Short, 10 P.3d 721 (Colo. App. 2000).

Applied in Aetna Fin. Co. v. Summers, 642 P.2d 926 (Colo. 1982).

5-5-112. Attorney fees. (1) With respect to a consumer credit transaction, the agreement may provide for the payment by the consumer of reasonable attorney fees not in excess of fifteen percent of the unpaid debt after default and referral to an attorney not a salaried employee of the creditor or such additional fee as may be directed by the court. A provision in violation of this section is unenforceable.

(2) This section does not authorize the imposition of attorney fees for preparation of a notice of right to cure if the consumer cures the default pursuant to sections 5-5-110 and 5-5-111.

CONSUMERS' REMEDIES

5-5-201. Effect of violations on rights of parties. (1) If a creditor has violated the provisions of this code applying to limitations on the schedule of payments or loan term for supervised loans contained in section 5-2-308 or authority to make supervised loans contained in section 5-2-301, the consumer is not obligated to pay the finance charge and has a right to recover from the person violating this code or from an assignee of that person's rights who undertakes direct collection of payments or enforcement of rights arising from the debt a penalty in an amount determined by the court not in excess of three times the amount of the finance charge. With respect to violations arising from consumer credit transactions made pursuant to revolving credit accounts, no action pursuant to this subsection (1) may be brought more than two years after the violation occurred. With respect to violations arising from other consumer credit transactions, no action pursuant to this subsection (1) may be brought more than one year after the due date of the last scheduled payment of the agreement with respect to which the violation occurred.

(2) A consumer is not obligated to pay a charge in excess of that allowed by this code, and if a consumer has paid an excess charge he or she has a right to a refund. A refund may be made by reducing the consumer's obligation by the amount of the excess charge. If the consumer has paid an amount in excess of the lawful obligation under the agreement, the consumer may recover the excess amount from the person who made the excess charge or from an assignee of that person's rights who undertakes direct collection of payments from or enforcement of rights against consumers arising from the debt.

(3) If a consumer is entitled to a refund and a person liable to the consumer refuses to make a refund within a reasonable time after demand, the consumer may recover from that person a penalty in an amount determined by a court not exceeding the greater of either the amount of the finance charge or ten times the amount of the excess charge. If the creditor has made an excess charge in deliberate violation of or in reckless disregard for this code, the penalty may be recovered even though the creditor has refunded the excess charge. No penalty pursuant to this subsection (3) may be recovered if a court has ordered a similar penalty assessed against the same person in a civil action by the administrator described in section 5-6-114. With respect to excess charges arising from revolving credit accounts, no action pursuant to this subsection (3) may be brought more than two years after the time the excess charge was made. With respect to excess charges arising from other consumer credit transactions, no action pursuant to this subsection (3) may be brought more than one year after the due date of the last scheduled payment of the agreement pursuant to which the charge was made.

(4) Except as otherwise provided, no violation of this code impairs rights on a debt.

(5) If an employer discharges an employee in violation of the provisions prohibiting discharge contained in section 5-5-107, the employee may within ninety days bring a civil action for recovery of wages lost as a result of the violation and for an order requiring the reinstatement of the employee. Damages recoverable shall not exceed lost wages for six weeks.

(6) If the creditor establishes by a preponderance of evidence that a violation is unintentional or the result of a bona fide error, notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adopted to avoid the error, no liability is imposed under subsections (1) and (3) of this section, and the validity of the transaction is not affected.

(7) In any case in which it is found that a creditor has violated this code, the court may award reasonable attorney fees incurred by the consumer.

(8) If a creditor repeatedly fails to provide a consumer with a statement of an annual percentage rate or finance charge as and to the extent required by the provisions on disclosure contained in section 5-3-101 of this code and has received written notice from the administrator of such repeated failure, any such subsequent failure by the creditor shall relieve any consumer receiving such defective disclosure from any obligation to pay any finance charge in connection with such consumer credit transaction.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Usury", see 11 Colo. Law. 2557 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 5-5-201 is similar to § 5-5-202 as it existed prior to the 2000 repeal and reenactment of articles 1 to 3 and 4 to 6 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Section 5-5-204(2) is interpreted to be as "otherwise provided" under subsection (5) of this section, which states that "except as otherwise provided, no violation of this code impairs rights on a debt". Strader v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 191 Colo. 206, 551 P.2d 720 (1976).

Section 521 of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 preempted plaintiff's claims against a Delaware bank that the bank's late charges violated this section and § 5-5-203. Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., 888 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1994).

"Interest" under § 521 of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 includes late fees and, therefore, Colorado law is preempted by the federal law with respect to late charges. Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., 888 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1994).

Plaintiff's common law challenges were preempted by § 521 of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 since that law creates an exclusive federal remedy and an exclusive federal remedy is inconsistent with the idea that a plaintiff can seek relief under state common law theories. Stoorman v. Greenwood Trust Co., 888 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in Greeley Nat. Bank v. Sloan, 677 P.2d 409 (Colo. App. 1983).

5-5-202. Civil liability for violation of disclosure provisions. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, a creditor who, in violation of the provisions on disclosure contained in section 5-3-101, other than the provisions on advertising, fails to disclose information to a person entitled to the information under this code is liable to that person in an amount equal to the sum of:

(a) Twice the amount of the finance charge in connection with the transaction, but the liability pursuant to this paragraph (a) shall be not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars; and

(b) In the case of a successful action to enforce the liability under paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), the costs of the action together with reasonable attorney fees as determined by the court.

(2) A creditor has no liability under this section if, within sixty days after discovering an error and prior to the institution of an action under this section or the receipt of written notice of the error, the creditor notifies the person concerned of the error and makes whatever adjustments in the appropriate account are necessary to assure that the person will not be required to pay a finance charge in excess of the amount or percentage rate actually disclosed.

(3) A creditor may not be held liable in any action brought under this section for a violation of this code if the creditor shows by a preponderance of evidence that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid the error.

(4) Any action that may be brought under this section against the original creditor in any credit transaction involving a security interest in land may be maintained against any subsequent assignee of the original creditor where the assignee, its subsidiaries, or affiliates were in a continuing business relationship with the original creditor either at the time the credit was extended or at the time of the assignment unless the assignment was involuntary or the assignee shows by a preponderance of evidence that it did not have reasonable grounds to believe that the original creditor was engaged in violations of this code and that it maintained procedures reasonably adapted to apprise it of the existence of the violations.

(5) No action pursuant to this section may be brought more than one year after the date of the occurrence of the violation.

(6) In this section, creditor includes a person who in the ordinary course of business regularly extends or arranges for the extension of credit or offers to arrange for the extension of credit.

(7) No provision of this section or section 5-5-201 imposing any liability shall apply to any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any rule, regulation, interpretation, or written response to a person pursuant to a written request on behalf of such identified person by the administrator or the board of governors of the federal reserve system pursuant to the federal "Truth in Lending Act" or federal "Consumer Leasing Act", notwithstanding that, after such act or omission has occurred, such rule, regulation, interpretation, or written response is amended, rescinded, or determined by judicial or other authority to be invalid for any reason.

(8) The multiple failure to disclose to any person any information required under this code to be disclosed in connection with a single account under a revolving credit account, other single consumer credit sale, consumer loan, or other extension of consumer credit shall entitle the person to a single recovery under this section, but continued failure to disclose after recovery has been granted shall give rise to rights to additional recoveries.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 5-5-202 is similar to § 5-5-203 as it existed prior to the 2000 repeal and reenactment of articles 1 to 3 and 4 to 6 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section specifically authorized the award of reasonable attorney's fees "as determined by the court". Rachbach v. Cogswell, 547 F.2d 502 (10th Cir. 1976).

In an action under the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.), even if the Colorado law were applicable to the issue of attorney's fees, where the record contained no showing of what were reasonable fees, the federal circuit court could not determine whether the trial court abused its discretion in denying those fees. Rachbach v. Cogswell, 547 F.2d 502 (10th Cir. 1976).

Borrowers not barred in demand for attorneys' fees. Where, by its continued breach of its duty, even after being ordered to take corrective action by the Colorado uniform consumer credit code administration, a lender delayed the borrowers' knowledge of the true 19.07 percent interest rate on the loan for a period of five and one-half months, to permit the lender to raise the statute of limitations to bar the borrowers would be unjust, and, therefore, the borrowers were not barred by the statute of limitations in their demand for attorneys' fees. Strader v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 191 Colo. 206, 551 P.2d 720 (1976).

Applied in Hull v. Bowest Corp., 649 P.2d 334 (Colo. App. 1982).

5-5-203. Consumer's right to rescind certain transactions. In the case of a consumer credit transaction with respect to which a security interest is retained or acquired in any property that is used as the principal dwelling of the person to whom credit is extended, the consumer shall have the same right to rescind the transaction as provided in the federal "Truth in Lending Act" and regulations thereunder. In order to comply with this code, a creditor shall comply with those provisions on the right of rescission of certain transactions.

Annotator's note. Since § 5-5-203 is similar to § 5-5-204 as it existed prior to the 2000 repeal and reenactment of articles 1 to 3 and 4 to 6 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section expressly applies to consumer credit sales and consumer loans. Strader v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 191 Colo. 206, 551 P.2d 720 (1976).

The consumer borrower and the consumer buyer are to be treated the same under this section. Strader v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 191 Colo. 206, 551 P.2d 720 (1976).

Subsection (2) is interpreted to be as "otherwise provided" under § 5-5-202(5), which states that "except as otherwise provided, no violation of this code impairs rights on a debt". Strader v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 191 Colo. 206, 551 P.2d 720 (1976).

The requirement of tender arises only after the security interest is released. Strader v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 191 Colo. 206, 551 P.2d 720 (1976).

The creditor is specifically obligated to take any action necessary or appropriate to reflect the termination of the security interest within 10 days after receipt of the notice of rescission and no duty is imposed upon the debtor until after the performance of the creditor's obligations. Strader v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 191 Colo. 206, 551 P.2d 720 (1976).

When debtor relieved of obligation to tender. If the security interest is not released within the 10 days following notice of rescission, the debtor is relieved of the obligation to tender and the property vests in the debtor. Strader v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 191 Colo. 206, 551 P.2d 720 (1976).

Effect of failure to take possession of property tendered. After tender by the debtor, if the creditor fails to take possession of the property tendered, "ownership of the property vests in the debtor without obligation to pay . . . ". This statutory provision is intended as an impetus for the creditor to take immediate action to clear title and to fulfill its obligations. Strader v. Beneficial Fin. Co., 191 Colo. 206, 551 P.2d 720 (1976).

Applied in Griffin v. United Bank, 40 Colo. App. 513, 580 P.2d 818 (1978); Griffin v. United Bank, 198 Colo. 239, 599 P.2d 866 (1979); Varady v. White, 42 Colo. App. 389, 595 P.2d 272 (1979); Varady v. White, 661 P.2d 284 (Colo. App. 1982); Campbell v. Commercial Credit Plan, Inc., 670 P.2d 813 (Colo. App. 1983).

5-5-204. Interests in land. For purposes of the provisions on civil liability for violation of the disclosure provisions contained in section 5-5-202 and on a consumer's right to rescind certain transactions contained in section 5-5-203, "consumer credit transaction" includes a transaction primarily secured by an interest in land without regard to the rate of the finance charge if the transaction is otherwise a consumer credit transaction.

5-5-205. Refunds and penalties as set-off to obligation. 5-5-206. Civil liability for discrimination. If a person has failed to comply with section 5-3-210, the person aggrieved by such failure to comply has a right to recover actual damages from such person but in no event less than one hundred dollars for actual and exemplary damages nor more than one thousand dollars for actual and exemplary damages. In the case of a successful action to enforce such right of recovery, the aggrieved person shall recover the costs of the action together with reasonable attorney fees as determined by the court.

CRIMINAL PENALTIES

5-5-301. Willful violations. (1) A supervised lender who willfully makes charges in excess of those permitted by the provisions of this code is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(2) A person, other than a supervised financial organization, who willfully engages in the business of making supervised loans without a license in violation of the provisions of this code applying to the authority to make supervised loans described in section 5-2-301 is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(3) A person who willfully engages in the business of making consumer credit transactions or of taking assignments of rights against consumers arising therefrom and undertakes direct collection of payments or enforcement of these rights without complying with the provisions of this code concerning notification contained in section 5-6-202 or payment of fees contained in section 5-6-203 is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars.

(4) Any person who violates the provisions of this section and by the same act or acts violates the provisions of section 18-15-104 or 18-15-107, C.R.S., or both, shall be prosecuted for the violation of either or both of said sections and not for a violation of this section.

5-5-302. Disclosure violations. (1) A person is guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment if such person willfully and knowingly:

(a) Gives false or inaccurate information or fails to provide information that such person is required to disclose under the provisions of this code on disclosure and advertising or of any related rule of the administrator adopted pursuant to this code;

(b) Uses any rate table or chart in a manner which consistently understates the annual percentage rate determined according to those provisions; or

(c) Otherwise fails to comply with any requirement of the provisions of this code on disclosure and advertising or of any related rule of the administrator adopted pursuant to this code.

5-6-102. Applicability. (1) This part 1 applies to persons who in this state:

(a) Make or solicit consumer credit transactions; or

(b) Directly collect payments from or enforce rights against consumers arising from sales, leases, or loans specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) wherever they are made.

5-6-103. Definitions - "administrator". "Administrator" means the assistant attorney general to be designated by the attorney general. Any district attorney may, with the consent of the administrator, exercise the powers and perform the duties of the administrator as provided in section 5-6-104 (1) (a) and (1) (b) and sections 5-6-105 to 5-6-116.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-6-103, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-6-104. Powers of administrator - harmony with federal regulations - reliance on rules. (1) In addition to other powers granted by this code, the administrator, within the limitations provided by law, may:

(a) Receive and act on complaints, take action designed to obtain voluntary compliance with this code, or commence proceedings on his or her own initiative;

(b) Counsel persons and groups on their rights and duties under this code;

(c) Establish programs for the education of consumers with respect to credit practices and problems;

(d) Make studies appropriate to effectuate the purposes and policies of this code and make the results available to the public;

(e) With approval of the council of advisors on consumer credit subcommittee, adopt, amend, and repeal substantive rules and regulations to carry out the specific provisions of this code, but not with respect to unconscionable agreements or fraudulent or unconscionable conduct, and adopt, amend, and repeal procedural rules to carry out the provisions of this code;

(f) Maintain offices within this state;

(g) Enforce the provisions of article 14.5 of title 12, C.R.S.;

(h) Employ administrative law judges from the office of administrative courts in the department of personnel to conduct hearings on any matter within the administrator's jurisdiction;

(i) License and regulate collection agencies pursuant to article 14 of title 12, C.R.S.; and

(j) Exchange information with another governmental agency or official that has regulatory authority comparable to that of the administrator, subject to an appropriate confidentiality agreement between the administrator and the other agency or official or as otherwise permitted by law. This paragraph (j) shall not be construed to allow the exchange of information with lenders or creditors.

(2) The administrator may adopt rules not inconsistent with the federal "Truth in Lending Act" and federal "Consumer Leasing Act" to assure a meaningful disclosure of credit terms so that a prospective consumer will be able to compare more readily the various credit terms available to him or her and to avoid the uninformed use of credit. Such rules shall supersede any provisions of this code that are inconsistent with the federal "Truth in Lending Act" and federal "Consumer Leasing Act", may contain classifications, differentiations, or other provisions, and may provide for adjustments and exceptions for any class of transactions subject to this code that, in the judgment of the administrator, are necessary or proper to effectuate the purposes of, or to prevent circumvention or evasion of, or to facilitate compliance with, the provisions of this code relating to disclosure of credit terms.

(3) To keep the administrator's rules in harmony with the federal "Truth in Lending Act" and the federal "Consumer Leasing Act" and the regulations prescribed from time to time pursuant to that act by the board of governors of the federal reserve system and with the rules of administrators in other jurisdictions that enact the "Uniform Consumer Credit Code", the administrator, so far as is consistent with the purposes, policies, and provisions of this code, shall:

(a) Before adopting, amending, and repealing rules and regulations, advise and consult with administrators in other jurisdictions that enact the "Uniform Consumer Credit Code"; and

(b) In adopting, amending, and repealing rules and regulations, take into consideration:

(I) The regulations so prescribed by the board of governors of the federal reserve system; and

(II) The rules of administrators in other jurisdictions that enact the "Uniform Consumer Credit Code".

(4) Except for a refund of an excess charge, no liability is imposed under this code for an act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with a rule, regulation, interpretation, or written response to a person pursuant to a written request on behalf of such identified person by the administrator, notwithstanding that after the act or omission the rule, regulation, interpretation, or written response may be amended or repealed or be determined by judicial or other authority to be invalid for any reason.

5-6-105. Administrative powers with respect to supervised financial organizations. (1) With respect to supervised financial organizations, the powers of examination and investigation described in sections 5-2-305 and 5-6-106 and administrative enforcement described in section 5-6-108 shall be exercised by the official or agency to whose supervision the organization is subject. All other powers of the administrator under this code may be exercised by the administrator with respect to a supervised financial organization.

(2) If the administrator receives a complaint or other information concerning noncompliance with this code by a supervised financial organization, the administrator shall inform the official or agency having supervisory authority over the organization concerned. The administrator may request information about supervised financial organizations from the officials or agencies supervising them.

(3) The administrator and any official or agency of this state having supervisory authority over a supervised financial organization are authorized and directed to consult and assist one another in maintaining compliance with this code. They may jointly pursue investigations, prosecute suits, and take other official action, as they deem appropriate, if either of them otherwise is empowered to take the action. The administrator may recover from a supervised financial organization the administrator's reasonable costs incurred in such investigation, suit, or other official action as part of any relief granted the administrator by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-6-105, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-6-106. Investigatory powers. (1) If the administrator has reasonable cause to believe that a person has engaged in an act that is subject to action by the administrator, the administrator may make an investigation to determine if the act has been committed, and, to the extent necessary for this purpose, may administer oaths or affirmations, and, upon his or her own motion or upon request of any party, may subpoena witnesses, compel their attendance, adduce evidence, and require the production of any matter that is relevant to the investigation, including the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of any books, documents, or other tangible things and the identity and location of persons having knowledge of relevant facts, or any other matter reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In any civil action brought by the administrator as a result of such an investigation, the administrator may recover the reasonable costs of making the investigation if the administrator prevails in the action.

(2) If the person's records are located outside this state, the person at his or her option shall either make them available to the administrator at a convenient location within this state or pay the reasonable and necessary expenses for the administrator or the administrator's representative to examine them at the place where they are maintained. The administrator may designate representatives, including comparable officials of the state in which the records are located, to inspect them on the administrator's behalf.

(3) Upon failure without lawful excuse to obey a subpoena or to give testimony, the administrator may apply to the district court for an order compelling compliance.

(4) The administrator shall not make public the name or identity of a person whose acts or conduct he or she investigates pursuant to this section or the facts disclosed in the investigation, but this subsection (4) does not apply to disclosures in actions or enforcement proceedings pursuant to this code.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-6-108, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-6-109. Administrative enforcement orders. (1) After notice and hearing, the administrator may order a creditor or a person acting in the creditor's behalf to cease and desist from engaging in violations of this code or any rule or order lawfully made pursuant to this code. The order issued by the administrator may also require the creditor or person to make refunds to consumers of excess charges under this code and pay a penalty up to a maximum of one thousand dollars for each violation, all or part of which may be specifically designated for consumer and creditor educational purposes.

(2) A respondent aggrieved by an order of the administrator may obtain judicial review of the order in the Colorado court of appeals. The administrator may obtain an order of the court for enforcement of the administrator's order in the district court under section 24-4-106, C.R.S. All proceedings under this section shall be governed by sections 24-4-105 and 24-4-106, C.R.S.

(3) With respect to unconscionable agreements or fraudulent or unconscionable conduct by the respondent, the administrator may not issue an order pursuant to this section but may bring a civil action for an injunction under section 5-6-112.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-6-108, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-6-110. Assurance of discontinuance. If it is claimed that a person has engaged in conduct subject to an order by the administrator described in section 5-6-108 or by a court described in sections 5-6-111 to 5-6-113, the administrator may accept an assurance in writing that the person will not engage in the conduct in the future. The assurance may also require the person to make refunds to consumers of excess charges under this code, pay a penalty up to a maximum of one thousand dollars for each violation, all or part of which may be specifically designated for consumer and creditor educational purposes, and reimburse the administrator for the administrator's reasonable costs incurred in investigating the conduct. If a person giving an assurance of discontinuance fails to comply with its terms, the assurance is evidence that prior to the assurance such person engaged in the conduct described in the assurance.

5-6-112. Injunctions against unconscionable agreements and fraudulent or unconscionable conduct. (1) The administrator may bring a civil action to restrain a creditor or a person acting in the creditor's behalf from engaging in a course of:

(a) Making or enforcing unconscionable terms or provisions of consumer credit transactions;

(b) Fraudulent or unconscionable conduct in inducing consumers to enter into consumer credit transactions;

(c) Conduct of any of the types specified in paragraph (a) or (b) of this subsection (1) with respect to transactions that give rise to or lead persons to believe they will give rise to consumer credit transactions; or

(d) Fraudulent or unconscionable conduct in the collection of debts arising from consumer credit transactions.

(2) In an action brought pursuant to this section, the court may grant relief only if it finds:

(a) That the respondent has made unconscionable agreements or has engaged or is likely to engage in a course of fraudulent or unconscionable conduct;

(b) That the agreements or conduct of the respondent has caused or is likely to cause injury to consumers; and

(c) That the respondent has been able to cause or will be able to cause the injury primarily because the transactions involved are credit transactions.

(3) In applying this section, consideration shall be given to each of the following factors, among others:

(a) Whether the creditor should have reasonably believed at the time consumer credit transactions were made that, according to the credit terms or schedule of payments, there was no reasonable probability of payment in full of the obligation by the consumer;

(b) Whether the creditor reasonably should have known, at the time of the transaction, of the inability of the consumer to receive substantial benefits from the transaction;

(c) Gross disparity between the price of the transaction and its value measured by the price at which similar transactions are readily obtainable by like consumers;

(d) The fact that the creditor contracted for or received separate charges for insurance with respect to consumer credit transactions with the effect of making the transactions, considered as a whole, unconscionable;

(e) The fact that the respondent has knowingly taken advantage of the inability of the consumer reasonably to protect his or her interests by reason of physical or mental infirmities, ignorance, illiteracy, or inability to understand the language of the agreement, or similar factors; and

(f) Any of the factors set forth in section 5-5-109 (4).

(4) The administrator may bring a civil action to restrain a creditor or a person acting in the creditor's behalf from engaging in a course of making or arranging consumer loans to enable consumers to buy or lease from a particular seller or lessor goods or services, a principal purpose of which course of action is to avoid giving the consumers those rights that they would have had if the transactions were entered into as a consumer credit sale if:

(a) The lender is a person related to the seller or lessor unless the relationship is remote or is not a factor in the transaction;

(b) The seller or lessor guarantees the loans or otherwise assumes the risk of loss by the lender upon the loans;

(c) The loans are conditioned upon the consumer's purchase or lease of the goods or services from the particular seller or lessor, but the lender's payment of proceeds of the loan to the seller or lessor does not in itself establish that the loan was so conditioned; or

(d) The lender, before the lender makes the consumer loan, has knowledge or, from the lender's course of dealing with the particular seller or lessor or from the lender's records, notice of substantial complaints by other consumers of the particular seller's or lessor's failure or refusal to perform his or her contracts with them and of the particular seller's or lessor's failure to remedy his or her defaults within a reasonable time after notice to him or her of the complaints.

(5) In an action brought pursuant to this code, a charge or practice expressly permitted by this code is not in itself unconscionable.

5-6-113. Temporary relief. With respect to an action brought to enjoin violations of this code under section 5-6-111 or unconscionable agreements or fraudulent or unconscionable conduct under section 5-6-112, the administrator may apply to the court for a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction against a respondent pending final determination of proceedings. If the court finds after a hearing that there is reasonable cause to believe that the respondent is engaging in or is likely to engage in conduct sought to be restrained, it may grant any such temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction it deems appropriate. The court may also issue such orders or judgments as may be necessary to completely compensate or restore to his or her original position any consumer affected by such violation, agreement, or conduct or if there is reasonable cause to believe funds to make refunds of excess charges under this code will not be available at a future date. No bond or other security is required of the administrator before relief under this section may be granted.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 5-6-112, as it existed prior to 2000.

5-6-114. Civil actions by administrator. (1) (a) The administrator may bring a civil action against a creditor for making or collecting charges in excess of those permitted by this code, violating any of the provisions of this code applying to limitations on the schedule of payments or loan term for supervised loans or authority to make supervised loans, or for disclosure violations. An action may relate to transactions with more than one consumer. If it is found that an excess charge has been made, the court shall order the respondent to refund to the consumer the amount of the excess charge and to pay a penalty to the consumer as provided in sections 5-5-201 and 5-5-202. In addition, the court may assess a civil penalty of up to one thousand dollars for each violation of this code.

(b) If a creditor has made an excess charge in deliberate violation of or in reckless disregard for this code or if a creditor has refused to refund an excess charge within a reasonable time after demand by the consumer or the administrator, the court may also order the respondent to pay to the consumers a civil penalty in an amount determined by the court not in excess of the greater of either the amount of the finance charge or ten times the amount of the excess charge. Refunds and penalties to which the consumer is entitled pursuant to this subsection (1) may be set off against the consumer's obligation.

(c) If a consumer brings an action against a creditor to recover an excess charge or civil penalty, an action by the administrator to recover for the same excess charge or civil penalty shall be stayed while the consumer's action is pending and shall be dismissed if the consumer's action is dismissed with prejudice or results in a final judgment granting or denying the consumer's claim. There shall be no double recovery for refunds of excess charges or a penalty payable to the consumer.

(d) With respect to excess charges arising from revolving accounts, no action pursuant to this subsection (1) may be brought more than four years after the time the excess charge was made. With respect to excess charges arising from other consumer credit transactions, no action pursuant to this subsection (1) may be brought more than four years after the due date of the last scheduled payment of the agreement pursuant to which the charge was made.

(e) If the creditor establishes by a preponderance of evidence that a violation is unintentional or the result of a bona fide error, no liability to pay a penalty shall be imposed under this subsection (1).

(2) The administrator may bring a civil action against a creditor or a person acting in the creditor's behalf to recover a civil penalty for willfully violating this code, and, if the court finds that the defendant has engaged in a course of repeated and willful violations of this code, it may assess a civil penalty of no more than five thousand dollars. All or part of the penalty under this subsection (2) may be specifically designated for consumer and creditor education. No civil penalty pursuant to this subsection (2) may be imposed for violations of this code occurring more than four years before the action is brought or for making unconscionable agreements or engaging in a course of fraudulent or unconscionable conduct.

(3) If the administrator prevails in an action brought under this section, the administrator may recover his or her reasonable costs in investigating and bringing the action and request an order for reimbursement of his or her reasonable attorney fees.

PART 2

NOTIFICATION AND FEES

5-6-201. Applicability. (1) Except as provided in subsections (2) and (3) of this section, this part 2 applies if a person:

(a) Makes consumer credit sales and charges or collects a finance charge, or makes consumer leases; or

(b) Takes assignments of and undertakes direct collection of payments from, or enforcement of rights against, consumers arising from consumer credit sales or consumer leases.

(2) This part 2 does not apply to supervised lenders described in section 5-1-301 (46), persons making consumer loans described in section 5-1-301 (15), or to persons licensed as collection agencies pursuant to article 14 of title 12, C.R.S.

(3) Sections 5-6-203 (5) and 5-6-204 of this part 2 apply to all fees collected under this code.

5-6-202. Notification. (1) Persons subject to this part 2 shall file notification with, and pay the fee prescribed in section 5-6-203 to, the administrator within thirty days after commencing business in this state and, thereafter, on or before January 31 of each year. The notification shall state:

(a) Name of the person;

(b) Name in which business is transacted if different from paragraph (a) of this subsection (1);

(c) Address of principal office, which may be outside this state;

(d) Address of all offices or retail stores, if any, in this state at which consumer credit sales or consumer leases are made or, in the case of a person taking assignments of obligations, the offices or places of business within this state at which business is transacted;

(e) If consumer credit sales or consumer leases are made otherwise than at an office or retail store in this state, a brief description of the manner in which they are made;

(f) Address of designated agent upon whom service of process may be made in this state described in section 5-1-203; and

(g) Whether supervised loans are made.

(2) If information in a notification becomes inaccurate after filing, no further notification is required until the following January 31.

5-6-203. Fees. (1) A person required to file notification shall, with the first notification and on or before January 31 of each year thereafter, pay to the administrator a nonrefundable annual notification fee. The administrator is entitled to examine the loans, business, and records of such person without issuance of a subpoena.

(2) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2009, (HB 09-1141), ch. 41, p. 158, § 5, effective January 1, 2010.)

(3) Persons required to file notification who are assignees of consumer credit sales or consumer leases shall pay an additional nonrefundable annual volume fee on or before January 31 of each year for each one hundred thousand dollars, or part thereof, of the unpaid balances at the time of the assignment of obligations arising from consumer credit sales or consumer leases made in this state and taken by assignment during the preceding calendar year.

(4) A penalty of five dollars per day shall be imposed on any person failing to comply with this section; except that, if the fees required by this section are paid on or before March 1 of each year, no penalty shall be imposed. If a person required to file notification and pay a notification fee fails to do so, the consumer shall have no obligation to pay the finance charge due under the consumer credit transaction, and any finance charges paid shall be refunded to the consumer. In addition, if the administrator examines the loans, business, or records of such person, the person shall pay the reasonable and necessary examination expenses of the administrator.

(5) The administrator shall determine the amount of the notification, volume, and license fees required in this section and in section 5-2-302 and may periodically reduce or increase the amount of one or more of the fees if necessary pursuant to section 24-75-402 (3) and (4), C.R.S., to reduce the uncommitted reserves of the uniform consumer credit code cash fund created in section 5-6-204 to which all or any portion of one or more of the fees is credited; except that the fund shall be subject to an alternative reserve balance of one-third of the amount expended during the previous fiscal year.

5-6-204. Cash fund created. (1) All fees collected under this code and under article 10 of this title shall be credited to the uniform consumer credit code cash fund, which fund is hereby created, and all moneys credited to such fund shall be used for the administration and enforcement of this code, article 10 of this title, and article 14.5 of title 12, C.R.S. Interest earned on the fund shall be credited to the fund. The general assembly shall make annual appropriations out of the fund for the administration and enforcement of this code, article 10 of this title, and article 14.5 of title 12, C.R.S.; except that expenditures by the administrator for consumer and creditor education resulting from the penalties provided in sections 5-2-303 (7) (f), 5-6-109 (1), 5-6-110, and 5-6-114 (2) shall not require appropriation by the general assembly if such expenditures do not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars per fiscal year and do not include the hiring of any full-time equivalents.

(2) Notwithstanding any provision of subsection (1) of this section to the contrary, on March 27, 2002, the state treasurer shall deduct one hundred fifty thousand dollars from the uniform consumer credit code cash fund and transfer such sum to the general fund.

(3) Notwithstanding any provision of subsection (1) of this section to the contrary, on March 5, 2003, the state treasurer shall deduct one hundred thousand dollars from the uniform consumer credit code cash fund and transfer such sum to the general fund.

(4) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, the state treasurer shall transfer the penalties collected pursuant to section 5-6-114 (1) (a) to the general fund.

PART 3

COUNCIL OF ADVISORS ON CONSUMER CREDIT

5-6-301. Council of advisors on consumer credit. (1) There is hereby created the council of advisors on consumer credit consisting of nine members who shall be appointed by the governor. One of the advisors shall be designated by the governor as chairperson. In appointing members of the council, the governor shall seek to achieve a fair representation from the various segments of the consumer credit industry and public.

(2) The term of office of each member of the council is three years. A member chosen to fill a vacancy arising otherwise than by expiration of a term shall be appointed for the unexpired term of the member whom he or she is to succeed. A member of the council is eligible for reappointment.

(3) Members of the council shall serve without compensation but are entitled to reimbursement of actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of their duties.

5-6-302. Function of council - conflict of interest. (1) The council shall advise and consult with the administrator concerning the exercise of the administrator's powers under this code and may make recommendations to the administrator. Members of the council may assist the administrator in obtaining compliance with this code. Since it is an objective of this part 3 to obtain competent representatives of creditors and the public to serve on the council and to assist and cooperate with the administrator in achieving the objectives of this code, service on the council shall not in itself constitute a conflict of interest regardless of the occupations or associations of the members.

(2) (a) There is hereby created a subcommittee of the council of advisors on consumer credit for the purpose specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2). The subcommittee shall consist of the attorney general, the chairperson of the council, and three members of the council appointed by such chairperson. Of the subcommittee members who are also members of the council, two shall be representatives of the consumer credit industry and two shall be representatives of the public. Any action taken by a majority of the subcommittee shall constitute action by the council.

(b) The subcommittee may review, repeal, amend, or modify any rule promulgated by the administrator pursuant to section 5-6-104 (1) (e).

ARTICLE 9

Effective Date

Editor's note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1971. This article was numbered as article 9 of chapter 73, C.R.S. 1963. For historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment of this title in 1971, see the editor's note immediately following the title heading for this title.

5-9-101. Time of taking effect prior to June 30, 2000 - provisions for transition. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, this code as it existed prior to the enactment of House Bill 00-1185, as enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-second general assembly, took effect at 12:01 a.m. on October 1, 1971, and was in effect through June 30, 2000.

(2) To the extent appropriate to permit the administrator to prepare for operation of this code as it existed prior to the enactment of House Bill 00-1185, as enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-second general assembly, when it took effect and to act on applications for licenses to make supervised loans under this code as it existed prior to the enactment of House Bill 00-1185, as enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-second general assembly, (subsection (1) of section 5-3-503), the provisions on supervised loans (part 5) of the article on loans (article 3 of this title) and of the article on administration (article 6 of this title) took effect on July 1, 1971, and were in effect through June 30, 2000.

(3) Transactions entered into before October 1, 1971, and the rights, duties, and interests flowing from them thereafter, may be terminated, completed, consummated, or enforced as required or permitted by any statute, rule of law, or other law amended, repealed, or modified by this code as though the repeal, amendment, or modification had not occurred, but this code, as it existed prior to the enactment of House Bill 00-1185, as enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-second general assembly, applies to:

(a) Refinancings, consolidations, and deferrals made on or after October 1, 1971, and before July 1, 2000, concerning sales, leases, and loans whenever made;

(b) Sales or loans made on or after October 1, 1971, and before July 1, 2000, pursuant to revolving charge accounts (section 5-2-108) and revolving loan accounts (section 5-3-108) entered into, arranged, or contracted for before October 1, 1971; and

(c) All credit transactions made before October 1, 1971, insofar as the article on remedies and penalties (article 5 of this title) limits the remedies of creditors.

(4) With respect to revolving charge accounts (section 5-2-108) and revolving loan accounts (section 5-3-108) entered into, arranged, or contracted for before October 1, 1971, disclosure pursuant to the provisions on disclosure (section 5-2-310 and section 5-3-309), shall be made not later than thirty days after October 1, 1971.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

The 30-day period in subsection (4) is derived from CCPA Section 127 (c) [15 U.S.C.A. Section 1637(c)].

COLORADO COMMENT

Subsection (3)(c) makes the remedies and penalties provisions of this Code prospectively applicable to creditors under credit transactions entered into prior to October 1, 1971.

5-9-101.5. Time of taking effect - provisions for transition. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, this code as it exists following the repeal and reenactment contained in House Bill 00-1185, as enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-second general assembly, takes effect at 12:01 a.m. on July 1, 2000.

(2) Transactions entered into before July 1, 2000, and the rights, duties, and interests flowing from them thereafter, may be terminated, completed, consummated, or enforced as required or permitted by any statute, rule of law, or other law amended, repealed, or modified by this code as though the repeal, amendment, or modification had not occurred, but this code applies to:

(a) Refinancings, consolidations, and deferrals made on or after July 1, 2000, concerning sales, leases, and loans whenever made;

(b) Sales or loans made on or after July 1, 2000, pursuant to revolving credit accounts entered into, arranged, or contracted for before July 1, 2000; and

(c) All credit transactions made before July 1, 2000, insofar as article 5 of this title limits the remedies of creditors. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary, the disclosures described in sections 5-3-105 (5), 5-3-106, 5-5-110 (4), and 5-5-111 (3) of this code take effect January 1, 2001.

5-9-102. Continuation of licensing prior to July 1, 2000. Notwithstanding the repeal and reenactment of articles 2 and 3 of chapter 73, C.R.S. 1963, by this code, all persons licensed or otherwise authorized under the provisions of articles 2 or 3 of chapter 73, C.R.S. 1963, immediately prior to October 1, 1971, are licensed to make supervised loans under this code as it existed prior to the enactment of House Bill 00-1185, as enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-second general assembly, pursuant to the provisions on supervised loans of the article on loans (part 5 of article 3 of this title) in effect on and after October 1, 1971, but before July 1, 2000, and all provisions of said sections apply to the persons so previously licensed or authorized. The administrator may, but is not required to, deliver evidence of licensing to the persons so previously licensed or authorized.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

This section provides automatic licensing under Article 3, Part 5 [Section 5-3-501 et seq.] for all lenders previously licensed under the State's licensed lender statutes prior to the effective date. No application or administrative action is required and the formal license under the prior statute, which will be repealed, will be a license under Part 5 of Article 3. The Administrator, at such time as his new duties under the Code permit him an opportunity, may substitute new licenses for those in the lenders' possession, but this is entirely a ministerial act.

5-9-102.5. Continuation of licensing after July 1, 2000. Notwithstanding the repeal and reenactment of part 5 of article 3 of this title by House Bill 00-1185, as enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-second general assembly, all persons licensed or otherwise authorized under the provisions of part 5 of article 3 immediately prior to July 1, 2000, are licensed to make supervised loans under this code pursuant to the provisions on supervised loans contained in part 3 of article 2 of this title, and all provisions of said part 3 apply to the persons so previously licensed or authorized. The administrator may, but is not required to, deliver evidence of licensing to the persons so previously licensed or authorized.

Refund Anticipation Loans

5-9.5-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Refund Anticipation Loans Act".

Source: L. 2010: Entire article added, (HB 10-1400), ch. 237, p. 1034, § 1, effective November 1.

5-9.5-102. Legislative declaration - scope. The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that it is in the interest of the public health, safety, and welfare to enact minimum protections for the benefit of consumers availing themselves of refund anticipation loans offered by facilitators.

Source: L. 2010: Entire article added, (HB 10-1400), ch. 237, p. 1034, § 1, effective November 1.

5-9.5-103. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Administrator" means the administrator designated in section 5-6-103.

(2) "Consumer" means a natural person who is solicited for, applies for, or receives the proceeds of a refund anticipation loan.

(3) "Electronic return originator" means a person authorized by the internal revenue service to originate the electronic submission of income tax returns to the internal revenue service.

(4) "Person" has the meaning set forth in section 2-4-401, C.R.S.

(5) "Refund anticipation loan" means a loan made to a Colorado consumer based on the Colorado consumer's anticipated income tax refund.

(6) (a) "Refund anticipation loan facilitator" or "facilitator" means a person who, individually or in conjunction or cooperation with another person, solicits the execution of, processes, arranges for, receives, or accepts an application or agreement for a refund anticipation loan or in any other manner facilitates the making of a refund anticipation loan and includes an electronic return facilitator.

(b) "Refund anticipation loan facilitator" does not include a person validly:

(I) Doing business as a bank, thrift, savings association, or credit union under the laws of the United States or of this state or is an affiliate of such an entity that is acting as a servicer for that entity;

(II) Practicing as a certified public accountant licensed under article 2 of title 12, C.R.S.; or

(III) Licensed as an attorney by the Colorado supreme court in accordance with section 12-5-101, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2010: Entire article added, (HB 10-1400), ch. 237, p. 1034, § 1, effective November 1.

5-9.5-104. Restriction on facilitating refund anticipation loans. A person shall not act as a refund anticipation loan facilitator unless the person is, or is directly employed by, an electronic return originator.

Source: L. 2010: Entire article added, (HB 10-1400), ch. 237, p. 1035, § 1, effective November 1.

5-9.5-105. Disclosures required. (1) A facilitator shall not facilitate a refund anticipation loan unless the facilitator makes the disclosures required by subsections (2), (3), and (4) of this section.

(2) Fee schedule to be posted. (a) Every place of business in which facilitators facilitate refund anticipation loans shall post a schedule showing the current fees for facilitating refund anticipation loans and for the electronic filing of a consumer's tax return.

(b) Each fee schedule posted pursuant to this subsection (2) shall contain examples of the refund anticipation loan annual percentage rates for refund anticipation loans of two hundred dollars, five hundred dollars, one thousand dollars, one thousand five hundred dollars, two thousand dollars, and five thousand dollars.

(c) Each fee schedule shall also prominently contain the following statement, in at least twenty-eight-point, bold-faced type and in both English and Spanish:

NOTICE

When you take out a refund anticipation loan, you are taking out a loan by borrowing money against your tax refund. If your tax refund is less than expected, you will still owe the entire amount of the loan. If your refund is delayed, you may have to pay additional costs. YOU CAN USUALLY GET YOUR REFUND IN 8 TO 15 DAYS WITHOUT GETTING A LOAN OR PAYING EXTRA FEES. You can have your tax return filed electronically and your refund direct-deposited into your own bank account without obtaining a loan or other paid product. You can make complaints regarding your refund anticipation loan to the administrator of the Uniform Consumer Credit Code in the Colorado state attorney general's office at [current telephone number].

(d) The fee schedule and notice required by this subsection (2) shall be made on a sign measuring no less than sixteen inches by twenty inches and shall be displayed conspicuously and in a prominent location.

(3) Oral disclosures. (a) When a consumer applies for a refund anticipation loan, the facilitator shall orally disclose to the consumer:

(I) That the product is a loan that only lasts one to two weeks;

(II) That, if the consumer's tax refund is less than expected, the consumer is liable for the full amount of the loan and must repay any difference;

(III) The amount of the refund anticipation loan fee; and

(IV) The refund anticipation loan interest rate.

(b) The oral disclosure required under this subsection (3) shall be made in English, Spanish, or any other language that the facilitator uses to communicate orally with the consumer.

(4) Written statement. (a) When a consumer applies for a refund anticipation loan and before closing the refund anticipation loan, the facilitator facilitating the loan shall give the consumer a written statement informing the consumer:

(I) That a refund anticipation loan is a loan and is not the borrower's actual income tax refund;

(II) That the consumer may file an income tax return electronically without applying for a refund anticipation loan;

(III) That the consumer is responsible for repayment of the loan and related fees if the tax refund is not paid or is insufficient to repay the loan;

(IV) Any fee that will be charged if the loan is not approved;

(V) The average time, as published by the federal internal revenue service, within which a taxpayer can expect to receive a refund for an income tax return filed:

(A) Electronically, and the refund is deposited directly into the taxpayer's financial institution account or mailed to the taxpayer; and

(B) By mail, and the refund is deposited directly into the taxpayer's financial institution account or mailed to the taxpayer;

(VI) That the federal internal revenue service does not guarantee:

(A) Payment of the full amount of the anticipated refund;

(B) A specific date on which it will mail a refund or deposit the refund into a taxpayer's financial institution account; or

(C) The estimated time within which the proceeds of the refund anticipation loan will be paid to the consumer if the loan is approved;

(VII) The following information, specific to the consumer:

(A) The total fees for the loan; and

(B) The estimated annual percentage rate for the loan, calculated using the guidelines established under the federal "Truth in Lending Act", 15 U.S.C. sec. 1601 et seq., as amended;

(VIII) The procedure for making a complaint to the administrator regarding the refund anticipation loan, including the current address, telephone number, or web site of the administrator to which such complaints may be directed.

(b) The written statement required under this subsection (4) shall be provided to the consumer in English, Spanish, or both English and Spanish, as requested by the consumer.

Rental Purchase Agreements

PART 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

5-10-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Rental Purchase Agreement Act".

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 366, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

5-10-102. Legislative declaration. (1) This article shall be liberally construed and applied to promote its underlying purposes and policies.

(2) The underlying purposes and policies of this article are to:

(a) Simplify, clarify, and modernize the law governing rental purchase agreements;

(b) Provide certain disclosures to consumers who enter into rental purchase agreements and to promote consumer understanding of the terms of rental purchase agreements;

(c) To protect consumers against unfair practices by some rental purchase dealers, having due regard for the interest of legitimate and scrupulous rental dealers; and

(d) To permit and encourage the development of fair and economically sound rental purchase practices.

PART 2

SCOPE OF ARTICLE

5-10-201. Application. (1) This article shall apply to a rental purchase agreement, or acts, practices, or conduct relating to a rental purchase agreement if:

(a) The rental purchase agreement is entered into in this state; or

(b) The lessee is a resident of this state at the time the lessor offering the rental purchase agreement solicits the rental purchase agreement or modification thereof, whether such solicitation is made personally, by mail, or by telephone.

(2) For the purposes of this article, the residence of the lessee is the address given by the lessee as the lessee's residence in any writing signed by the lessee in connection with the rental purchase agreement. Unless the lessee notifies the lessor in writing of a new or different residence address, the given residence address is presumed to be unchanged.

DEFINITIONS

5-10-301. Definitions. (1) As used in this article, unless otherwise required by the context:

(a) "Administrator" means the administrator designated in section 5-6-103.

(b) "Advertisement" means a commercial message in any medium that aids, promotes, or assists, directly or indirectly, a rental purchase agreement.

(c) "Cash price" means the price at which a lessor in the ordinary course of business would offer the property that is the subject of a rental purchase agreement to the lessee for cash on the date of the execution of the rental purchase agreement.

(d) "Consummate" means the act of the lessee in entering into a rental purchase agreement.

(e) "Lessee" means a natural person who rents personal property under a rental purchase agreement.

(f) "Lessor" means a person, firm, or corporation who in the ordinary course of business, regularly leases, offers to lease, or arranges for the leasing of property under a rental purchase agreement.

(g) "Liability damage waiver" means a contract or contractual provision, whether separate from or a part of a rental purchase agreement, whereby the lessor agrees, for a charge, to waive any and all claims against the lessee for any damages to, or loss of, the property which is the subject of the rental purchase agreement during the term of the rental agreement.

(h) "Period" means a day, week, month, or other subdivision of the year.

(i) "Personal property" means any property which is made available for a rental purchase agreement and which is not considered real property under the laws of this state.

(j) "Rental purchase agreement" means an agreement for the use of personal property by an individual primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, for an initial period of four months or less, whether or not there is any obligation beyond the initial period, that is automatically renewable with each payment and that permits the lessee to become the owner of the property.

PART 4

DISCLOSURES AND FORM OF WRITING

5-10-401. Disclosures. (1) A lessor shall disclose to a lessee in a rental purchase agreement the information required either by this part 4 or by the provisions of the federal "Consumer Credit Protection Act" if the federal "Consumer Credit Protection Act" is amended to cover disclosure in a rental purchase agreement. In a rental purchase agreement, the lessor shall disclose the following:

(a) A brief description of the leased property, sufficient to identify the property to the lessee and lessor;

(b) The total number of payments and the total amount of such payments necessary to acquire ownership;

(c) The number, amount, and timing of each payment, including taxes paid to or through the lessor;

(d) A statement that the lessee will not own the property until the lessee has made the total number of payments and the total amount of such payments necessary to acquire ownership;

(e) A statement of all other charges which the lessee may have to pay together with the amount of any such charge and the conditions under which any such charge shall be incurred;

(f) If applicable, a statement that the lessee is responsible for the fair market value of the property if and as of the time it is lost, stolen, damaged, or destroyed;

(g) A statement indicating whether the property is new or used; except that it is not a violation of this paragraph (g) to indicate that the property is used if it is actually new;

(h) A statement that, at any time after the first lease payment is made, the lessee may acquire ownership of the property, and a brief explanation of the price, formula, or other method for determining the price at which the property may be purchased;

(i) A brief explanation of the lessee's right to reinstate, and a description of the amount, or method of determining the amount, of any penalty or other charge for reinstatement as established in section 5-10-602;

(j) The cash price of the property subject to the rental purchase agreement; and

(k) A statement of the maintenance services, if any, the lessor will provide with respect to the property subject to the rental purchase agreement.

(2) In addition to the disclosures required pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, the lessor shall also make the following disclosure:

NOTICE TO LESSEE — READ BEFORE SIGNING

(1) DO NOT SIGN THIS BEFORE YOU READ THE ENTIRE AGREEMENT INCLUDING ANY WRITING ON THE REVERSE SIDE, EVEN IF OTHERWISE ADVISED.

(2) DO NOT SIGN THIS IF IT CONTAINS ANY BLANK SPACES.

(3) YOU ARE ENTITLED TO AN EXACT COPY OF ANY AGREEMENT YOU SIGN.

(4) YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO EXERCISE ANY EARLY BUY-OUT OPTION AS PROVIDED IN THIS AGREEMENT. EXERCISE OF THIS OPTION MAY RESULT IN A REDUCTION OF YOUR TOTAL COST TO ACQUIRE OWNERSHIP UNDER THIS AGREEMENT.

(5) IF YOU ELECT TO MAKE WEEKLY RATHER THAN MONTHLY PAYMENTS AND EXERCISE YOUR PURCHASE OPTION, YOU MAY PAY MORE FOR THE LEASED PROPERTY.

5-10-402. Form requirements. (1) The information required by this part 4:

(a) Shall be disclosed in writing in a rental purchase agreement;

(b) Shall be set forth clearly and conspicuously, in not less than eight point standard type;

(c) Shall be set apart and not contain any information not directly related to the disclosures;

(d) Shall be stated using words and phrases of common meaning;

(e) Need not be contained in a single writing or made in the order set forth in this part 4; and

(f) May be supplemented by additional information or explanations supplied by the lessor, so long as the additional information is not stated, utilized, or placed in a manner which will confuse the lessee or contradict, obscure, or distract attention from the required information. The additional information or explanations shall not have the effect of circumventing, evading, or unduly complicating the information required to be disclosed.

(2) The lessor shall disclose all information required by this part 4 before the rental purchase agreement is consummated.

(3) Before any payment is due, the lessor shall furnish the lessee with an exact copy of the rental purchase agreement, which shall be signed by the lessee and which shall evidence the lessee's agreement. If there is more than one lessee in a rental purchase agreement, delivery of a copy of the rental purchase agreement to one of the lessees constitutes compliance with this subsection (3).

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 370, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

5-10-403. Receipts. The lessor shall furnish the lessee a written receipt for each payment made in cash or by any other method of payment that does not provide evidence of payment when any such payment is delivered in person during normal working hours.

PART 5

LIMITATION ON AGREEMENTS AND PRACTICES

5-10-501. Acquiring ownership. At any time after the first lease payment is made, the lessee may acquire ownership of the property under the terms specified in the rental purchase agreement.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 370, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

5-10-502. Prohibited provisions. (1) A rental purchase agreement shall not contain a provision requiring any of the following:

(a) Assignment of earnings. No lessor shall accept an assignment of earnings from the lessee for payment or as security for payment of a charge arising out of a rental purchase agreement. An assignment of earnings in violation of this paragraph (a) is unenforceable by the assignee of the earnings and revocable by the lessee. This paragraph (a) shall not prohibit a lessee from voluntarily authorizing deductions from his earnings if the authorization is revocable and otherwise permitted by law.

(b) Authorization to confess judgment. No lessor shall take or accept a power of attorney or other authorization from the lessee, or other person acting on his behalf, to confess judgment.

(c) Waivers. No lessor may require a lessee to waive service of process or to waive any defense, counterclaim, or right of action against the lessor, or a person acting on the lessor's behalf as the lessor's agent in collection of payments under the lease or in the repossession of the lease property.

(d) Breach of the peace. No lessor may require a lessee to authorize the lessor or a person acting on the lessor's behalf to enter unlawfully upon the lessee's premises or to commit any breach of the peace in the repossession of the lease property.

(e) Garnishment of wages. No lessor may require a lessee to authorize a prejudgment garnishment of the lessee's wages.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 370, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

5-10-503. Balloon payments. A lessee shall not be required to make a payment in addition to regular lease payments in order to acquire ownership of the lease property, nor shall the lessee be required to pay lease payments totaling more than the cost to acquire ownership, as provided in section 5-10-401 (1) (b).

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 371, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

5-10-504. Prohibited charges. (1) A lessor shall not contract for or receive charges for any of the following:

(a) The purchase of insurance by the lessee from the lessor;

(b) A penalty for early termination of a rental purchase agreement or for the return of an item at any point, except for those charges authorized by sections 5-10-601 and 5-10-602; or

(c) A payment by a co-signer of the rental purchase agreement for any fees or charges which could not be imposed upon the lessee as part of the rental purchase agreement.

(2) No payment or obligation on the part of the lessee shall accrue when the property is being repaired or replaced unless a loaner is provided to the lessee.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 371, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

PART 6

LIMITATIONS ON CHARGES

5-10-601. Additional charges. (1) A lessor may contract for and receive an initial nonrefundable fee not to exceed ten dollars per contract. Should any security deposit be required by the lessor, the amount of such deposit and the conditions under which it will be returned shall be disclosed with the disclosures required by section 5-10-401.

(2) A lessor may contract for and receive an initial delivery charge per contract not to exceed fifteen dollars in the case of a rental purchase agreement covering five or fewer items and a delivery charge not to exceed forty-five dollars in the case of a rental purchase agreement covering more than five items, if, in either case, the lessor actually delivers the items to the lessee's dwelling and the delivery charge is disclosed with the disclosures required by section 5-10-401. Said delivery charge shall be assessed in lieu of and not in addition to the initial charge in subsection (1) of this section. A lessor may not contract for or receive a delivery charge on property redelivered after repair or maintenance.

(3) A lessor may contract for and receive a charge for picking up late payments from the lessee if the lessor is required to do so pursuant to the rental purchase agreement or is requested to visit the lessee to pick up a payment. In a rental purchase agreement with payment or renewal dates which are on a monthly basis, this charge may not be assessed more than three times in any six-month period. In rental purchase agreements with payments or renewal options on a weekly or biweekly basis, this charge may not be assessed more than six times in any six-month period. No charge assessed pursuant to this subsection (3) may exceed ten dollars. A pickup fee may be assessed pursuant to this subsection (3) only in lieu of and not in addition to any late charge assessed pursuant to subsection (4) of this section.

(4) (a) The parties may contract for late charges as follows:

(I) For rental purchase agreements with monthly renewal dates, a late charge not exceeding five dollars may be assessed on any payment not made within five days after payment is due, or return of the property is required.

(II) For rental purchase agreements with weekly or bi-weekly renewal dates, a late charge not exceeding three dollars may be assessed on any payments not made within three days after payment is due, or return of the property is required.

(b) A late charge on a rental purchase agreement may be collected only once on any accrued payment, no matter how long it remains unpaid. A late charge may be collected at the time it accrues or at any time thereafter. A lessor may elect to waive imposition of a late charge due on an accrued payment in accordance with the terms of the rental purchase agreement; except that, such waiver shall be in writing and, once a late charge is waived for a specific payment, the lessor may not thereafter seek to impose a late fee for the accrued payment in question. No late charge may be assessed against a payment that is timely made, even though an earlier late charge has not been paid in full.

5-10-602. Reinstatement fees. A reinstatement fee as provided for in section 5-10-701 shall equal the outstanding balance of any accrued missed payments and late charges plus an additional fee not to exceed five dollars.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 372, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

5-10-603. Liability damage waivers - fees. (1) In addition to the other charges permitted by this part 6, the parties may contract for a liability waiver fee not to exceed the greater of ten percent of any periodic lease payment due or two dollars in the case of any rental purchase agreement with weekly or biweekly renewal dates, and not to exceed the greater of ten percent of any periodic lease payment due or five dollars in the case of any rental purchase agreement with monthly renewal dates. The selling or offering for sale of a liability damage waiver pursuant to this article is subject to the following prohibitions and requirements:

(a) A lessor may not sell or offer to sell a liability damage waiver unless all restrictions, conditions, and exclusions are printed in the rental purchase agreement, or in a separate agreement, in eight-point type, or larger, or written in pen and ink or typewritten in or on the face of the rental purchase agreement in a blank space provided therefor. The liability damage waiver may exclude only loss or damage to the property which is the subject of the rental purchase agreement due to moisture, scratches, mysterious disappearance, vandalism, abandonment of the property, or due to any other damages caused intentionally by the lessee or which result from the lessee's willful or wanton misconduct.

(b) The liability damage waiver agreement must include a statement of the total charge for the liability damage waiver. The liability damage waiver agreement must display in eight-point boldface type the following notice:

> NOTICE: THIS CONTRACT OFFERS, FOR AN ADDITIONAL CHARGE, A LIABILITY DAMAGE WAIVER TO COVER YOUR RESPONSIBILITY FOR DAMAGE TO THE PROPERTY. BEFORE DECIDING WHETHER TO PURCHASE THE LIABILITY DAMAGE WAIVER, YOU MAY WISH TO DETERMINE WHETHER YOUR OWN HOMEOWNERS OR CASUALTY INSURANCE AFFORDS YOU COVERAGE FOR DAMAGE TO THE RENTAL PROPERTY, AND THE AMOUNT OF THE DEDUCTIBLE UNDER YOUR OWN INSURANCE COVERAGE. THE PURCHASE OF THIS LIABILITY DAMAGE WAIVER IS NOT MANDATORY AND MAY BE DECLINED.

(c) The restrictions, conditions, and exclusions of the liability damage waiver must be disclosed on a separate agreement, sheet, or handout given to the lessee prior to entering into the rental purchase agreement. The separate contract, sheet, or handout must be signed, or otherwise acknowledged by the lessee as being received prior to entering into the rental purchase agreement.

REMEDIES

5-10-701. Lessee's remedies - reinstatement. (1) A lessee who breaches any rental purchase agreement, including but not limited to the failure to make timely rental payments, has the right to reinstate the original rental purchase agreement without losing any rights or options previously acquired under the rental purchase agreement if both of the following apply:

(a) Subsequent to having failed to make a timely rental payment, the lessee has promptly surrendered the property to the lessor, in the manner as set forth in the rental purchase agreement, and if and when requested by lessor; and

(b) Not more than sixty days have passed since the lessee returned the lease property; except that if the lessee has made more than sixty percent of the total number of payments required under the rental purchase agreement to acquire ownership, such sixty-day period shall be extended to a one-hundred-twenty-day period.

(2) As a condition precedent to reinstatement of the rental purchase agreement, a lessor may collect a reinstatement fee as set forth in section 5-10-602, plus delivery charges allowable by section 5-10-601 (2) if redelivery of the item is necessary.

(3) If reinstatement occurs pursuant to this section, the lessor shall provide the lessee with either the same item leased by the lessee prior to reinstatement or a substitute item of equivalent quality and condition. If a substitute item is provided, the lessor shall provide the lessee with all the information required by section 5-10-401.

5-10-702. Limitations on lessor's remedies. With respect to a debt arising from a rental purchase agreement, regardless of where made, the lessor may not attach unpaid earnings of the debtor by garnishment or like proceedings prior to the entry of judgment in an action against the lessee arising from the said rental purchase agreement.

5-10-703. Assignee liability. (1) With respect to a rental purchase agreement, an assignee of the rights of the lessor is subject to all claims and defenses of the lessee against the lessor arising from the lease of property or services, notwithstanding that the assignee is the holder in due course of a negotiable instrument issued in violation of the provisions prohibiting certain negotiable instruments.

(2) A claim or defense of a lessee specified in subsection (1) of this section may be asserted against the assignee under this section only to the extent of the amount owing and paid to the assignee and assignor.

(3) An agreement may not limit or waive the claims or defenses of a lessee under this section.

5-10-704. Notice of assignment. The lessee is authorized to pay the original lessor until the lessee receives written notification that the rights to payment pursuant to a rental purchase agreement have been assigned to an assignee and that payment is to be made to the assignee. A notification which does not reasonably identify the rights assigned shall be ineffective. If requested by the lessee, the assignee shall furnish reasonable proof that the assignment has been made, and, unless he does so, the lessee may pay the lessor.

ENFORCEMENT

5-10-801. Administrator responsibility. (1) The administrator shall enforce this article. To carry out this responsibility, the administrator shall be authorized to:

(a) Receive and act on complaints, take action designed to obtain voluntary compliance with this article, or commence proceedings on the administrator's own initiative;

(b) Issue and enforce cease and desist or other administrative enforcement orders in the same manner as set forth in section 5-6-109;

(c) Counsel persons and groups on their rights and duties under this article;

(d) Establish programs for the education of consumers with respect to rental purchase agreement practices and problems;

(e) Bring a civil action to restrain a person from violating this article and for other appropriate relief in the same manner as set forth in sections 5-6-111 to 5-6-114 and for a civil penalty of up to one thousand dollars per violation; and

(f) Use any of his enforcement powers to restrain or take other action against any person found to be making or enforcing rental purchase agreements which contain any unconscionable provisions or clauses.

5-10-802. Lessor's records and investigations. (1) In administering this article and in order to determine compliance with this article, the administrator may examine the books and records of persons subject to the article and may make investigations of persons necessary to determine compliance. For this purpose, the administrator may administer oaths or affirmations, and, upon the administrator's own motion or upon request of any party, may subpoena witnesses, compel their attendance, compel testimony, and require the production of any matter that is relevant to the investigation, including the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of, any books, documents, or other tangible things and the identity and location of persons having knowledge of relevant facts, or any other matter reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. If the administrator prevails in any civil action brought as a result of such an investigation, the court shall award the administrator costs and a reasonable attorney fee.

(2) If the person's records are located outside Colorado, the person shall, at the person's option, either make them available to the administrator at a convenient location in Colorado, or pay the reasonable and necessary expenses for the administrator or the administrator's representative to examine them at the place where they are maintained. The administrator may designate representatives, including comparable officials of the state in which the records are located, to inspect them on the administrator's behalf.

(3) Upon failure without lawful excuse to obey a subpoena or to give testimony and upon reasonable notice to all persons affected thereby, the administrator may apply to a court for an order compelling compliance.

(4) The administrator may not make public the name or identity of a person whose acts or conduct the administrator investigates under this section or the facts disclosed in the investigation, but this subsection (4) shall not apply to disclosures in actions or enforcement proceedings under this article.

5-10-803. Assurance of discontinuance. If it is claimed that a person has engaged in conduct subject to an order by the administrator or by a court under this article, the administrator may accept an assurance in writing that the person will not engage in the conduct in the future. If a person giving an assurance of discontinuance fails to comply with its terms, the assurance shall be evidence that before the assurance the person engaged in the conduct described in the assurance.

5-10-804. Notification by lessors - contents. (1) A lessor shall file a notification as prescribed in subsection (2) of this section with the administrator:

(a) Within thirty days after soliciting or entering into a rental purchase agreement subject to this article; and

(b) Before February 1 in each subsequent year that the lessor solicits or enters into a rental purchase agreement subject to this article.

(2) The notification required under subsection (1) of this section shall state the following:

(a) The name of the lessor and, if different, the name in which business is transacted;

(b) The address of the lessor's principal office, which may be outside Colorado;

(c) The address of all offices or stores, if any, in Colorado at which rental purchase agreements are made;

(d) If rental purchase agreements are made in a place other than an office or store in Colorado, a brief description of the place and manner in which they are made; and

(e) The address of the registered agent upon whom service of process may be made in Colorado.

(3) If information in a notification becomes inaccurate after filing, no further notification is required until the lessor is required to file a subsequent notification pursuant to subsection (1) of this section.

5-10-805. Fees. (1) A lessor required to file a notification with the administrator under section 5-10-804 shall pay to the administrator the following fees:

(a) Fifty dollars for each address listed in section 5-10-804 (2) (c) paid at the time of the filing of the initial notification with the administrator;

(b) Twenty-five dollars for each address listed in section 5-10-804 (2) (c) paid at the time of the filing of each annual notification subsequently filed with the administrator.

(2) In addition to the fees required under subsection (1) of this section, if the administrator examines the books and records of the lessor, the lessor shall pay to the administrator a fee of two hundred dollars for each day required for the administrator or the administrator's representative to conduct the examination. However, the sum of all fees collected from a lessor under this subsection (2) may not exceed one thousand dollars in any calendar year.

(3) Notwithstanding the amount specified for any fee in this section, the administrator by rule or as otherwise provided by law may reduce the amount of one or more of the fees if necessary pursuant to section 24-75-402 (3), C.R.S., to reduce the uncommitted reserves of the fund to which all or any portion of one or more of the fees is credited. After the uncommitted reserves of the fund are sufficiently reduced, the administrator by rule or as otherwise provided by law may increase the amount of one or more of the fees as provided in section 24-75-402 (4), C.R.S.

PART 9

VIOLATIONS AND PENALTIES

5-10-901. Unlawful acts - fines - deceptive trade practice. (1) Any person who willfully and intentionally violates any provision of this article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars.

(2) Any intentional violation of the provisions of this article shall constitute a deceptive trade practice and shall be subject to the provisions of article 1 of title 6, C.R.S.

Source: L. 90: Entire article added, p. 376, § 1, effective January 1, 1991.

5-10-902. Remedies of lessee. (1) In case of a violation by a lessor of any provision of this article with respect to any rental purchase agreement, the lessee in such agreement may bring a suit in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover from such lessor or may set off or counterclaim in any action by such lessor actual damages. If the court finds that any such violation has occurred, it shall award a minimum recovery of two hundred fifty dollars or twenty-five percent of the total cost to acquire ownership under the rental purchase agreement, whichever is greater.

(2) The remedies specified in subsection (1) of this section are in addition to, and not in limitation of, any other remedies provided by law.

(3) In any action brought pursuant to this section, the court shall award the prevailing party the costs of the action and a reasonable attorney fee.

5-10-903. Unconscionability. (1) With respect to a rental purchase transaction, if the court as a matter of law finds the transaction, the agreement, or any clause of the agreement to have been unconscionable at the time it was made, the court may refuse to enforce the agreement or it may enforce the remainder of the agreement without the unconscionable clause, or it may so limit the application of any unconscionable clause as to avoid any unconscionable result.

(2) If it is claimed or appears to the court that the transaction, the agreement, or any clause thereof may be unconscionable, the parties shall be afforded a reasonable opportunity to present evidence as to its setting, purpose, and effect to aid the court in making any such determination related to unconscionability.

(3) If, in an action in which unconscionability is claimed, the court finds unconscionability pursuant to this section, the court may award the costs of the action and a reasonable attorney fee to the lessee. If the court does not find unconscionability and does find that the lessee claiming unconscionability brought or maintained an action he knew to be groundless, the court may award the costs of the action and a reasonable attorney fee to the party against whom the claim was made. In determining such attorney fee, the amount of recovery claimed on behalf of the lessee shall not be controlling.

(4) The remedies of this section are in addition to remedies otherwise available for the same conduct authorized under law other than in this article, but double recovery of actual damages may not be had.

(5) For the purpose of this section, a charge or practice expressly permitted by this article is not in itself unconscionable.

5-10-904. Effect of correction. Notwithstanding sections 5-10-801 and 5-10-902, any failure to comply with any provisions of this article resulting from a bona fide or clerical error may be corrected by the lessor within sixty days after discovering an error and prior to the institution of any action under this article, or within sixty days of the receipt of written notice of the error after the date of execution of the rental purchase agreement by the lessee. If so corrected, neither the lessor nor any holder is subject to penalty under this section. A copy of any rental purchase agreement to which such a correction is made shall be promptly sent to the lessee.

5-10-905. Statute of limitations. No action shall be brought by a lessee under this article more than three years after the lessee knew or should have known of the occurrence of the alleged violation. This section does not bar a person from asserting a violation of this article in any action to collect the debt which was brought more than three years from the date of the occurrence of the violation as a matter of defense by recoupment or setoff in such action.

ADVERTISING

5-10-1001. Advertising. (1) An advertisement for a rental purchase agreement shall not state or imply that a specific item is available at specific amounts or terms unless the lessor usually and customarily offers or will offer that item at those amounts or terms.

(2) If any advertisement for a rental purchase agreement refers to or states the amount of any payment or the right to acquire ownership for a specific item, the advertisement must also clearly and conspicuously state the following terms as applicable:

(a) That the transaction is a rental purchase agreement or rent-to-own agreement;

(b) The total number of payments and amount of such payments necessary to acquire ownership; and

(c) That the lessee will not own the property until the total of such payments is paid in full or is paid by prepayment.

(3) Advertising which complies with the "Federal Consumer Credit Protection Act" does not violate this section.

(4) With the exception of the lessor, this section imposes no liability on the owner or personnel of any medium in which an advertisement appears or through which it is disseminated.

5-12-102. Statutory interest. (1) Except as provided in section 13-21-101, C.R.S., when there is no agreement as to the rate thereof, creditors shall receive interest as follows:

(a) When money or property has been wrongfully withheld, interest shall be an amount which fully recognizes the gain or benefit realized by the person withholding such money or property from the date of wrongful withholding to the date of payment or to the date judgment is entered, whichever first occurs; or, at the election of the claimant,

(b) Interest shall be at the rate of eight percent per annum compounded annually for all moneys or the value of all property after they are wrongfully withheld or after they become due to the date of payment or to the date judgment is entered, whichever first occurs.

(2) When there is no agreement as to the rate thereof, creditors shall be allowed to receive interest at the rate of eight percent per annum compounded annually for all moneys after they become due on any bill, bond, promissory note, or other instrument of writing, or money due on mutual settlement of accounts from the date of such settlement and on money due on account from the date when the same became due.

(3) Interest shall be allowed as provided in subsection (1) of this section even if the amount is unliquidated at the time of wrongful withholding or at the time when due.

(4) Except as provided in section 5-12-106, creditors shall be allowed to receive interest on any judgment recovered before any court authorized to enter the same within this state from the date of entering said judgment until satisfaction thereof is made either:

(a) At the rate specified in a contract or instrument in writing which provides for payment of interest at a specified rate until the obligation is paid; except that if the contract or instrument provides for a variable rate, at the rate in effect under the contract or instrument on the date judgment enters; or

(b) In all other cases where no rate is specified, at the rate of eight percent per annum compounded annually.

Annotator's note. Since § 5-12-102 is similar to repealed § 73-1-2, C.R.S. 1963, § 73-1-2, CRS 53, CSA, C. 88, § 2, and laws antecedent to CSA, C. 88, § 2, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Interest is a compensation for the use of money for its detention. City of Denver v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 141 F. 69 (8th Cir. 1905).

Recovery of that compensation may be pursued as prejudgment interest in accordance with the terms of this section, or in circumstances in which statutory interest would not be available, it may be sought as moratory interest which recognizes interest as a part of compensatory damages. Scognamillo v. Olsen, 795 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1990).

In historical perspective. The exaction or taking of interest or compensation for the use of money was regarded as usurious, whether moderate or excessive, both in biblical times and by the early common law prior to the reign of Henry VIII. It seems to have been held by the church that the taking of interest was actually sinful as against the laws of God and morality and by the courts that it was unlawful on the theory of the classical and medieval economists from the time of Aristotle that money was only a medium of exchange and naturally barren and unproductive. By the 16th century the gap between religious theory and commercial practice had been further narrowed, and the new protestant ethics regarded only excessive exactions as usury. In the United States, the courts have always viewed the allowance of interest with greater favor than have the courts in England. The English common law has never been suited to the conditions existing in this country, and the American courts have never doubted the right to interest where it has been expressly contracted for, or where an undertaking to pay interest may be implied from the usages of trade. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959).

In Colorado. Interest having become recognized as lawful and just compensation for the use of money rightfully belonging to another, the first session of the general assembly of the territory of Colorado adopted an interest statute, which, with only slight changes, now appears as § 5-12-102. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959).

Hence, interest is a creature of statute. Hendrie v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 153 Colo. 432, 387 P.2d 266 (1963).

Where no agreement. Interest, when there is no agreement therefor, is a matter of statute. In re Estate of Granberry, 30 Colo. App. 590, 498 P.2d 960 (1972).

The right to interest, absent an independent agreement, is statutory and is limited to those circumstances enumerated in the statute. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128 (Colo. App. 1993); Indian Mountain Metro. Recreation & Park Dist. v. J.P. Campbell & Assocs., 921 P.2d 65 (Colo. App. 1996); Bd. of County Comm'rs of Dolores County v. Shell Western E & P, Inc., 12 P.3d 1219 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where there is no "judgment" entered in a "court" to which subsection (4) could apply, a claim for post-judgment interest pursuant to subsection (4) is properly rejected. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Dolores County v. Shell Western E & P, Inc., 12 P.3d 1219 (Colo. App. 2000).

Interest is the compensation allowed by law, or fixed by the parties, for the use, detention, or forbearance of money or its equivalent. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959).

This section is intended to provide for award of interest from the time plaintiffs were wronged. Combined Com. Corp. v. Pub. Serv. Co., 865 P.2d 893 (Colo. App. 1993); Porter Constr. Servs. v. Ehrhardt, Keefe, Steiner, & Hottman, P.C., 131 P.3d 1115 (Colo. App. 2005).

Purpose of statutory interest is to discourage delaying payment of a claim. Mesa Sand & Gravel v. Landfill, Inc., 776 P.2d 362 (Colo. 1989); Michaelson v. Michaelson, 884 P.2d 695 (Colo. 1994); Stansbury v. Comm'r of Internal Rev., 102 F.3d 1088 (10th Cir. 1996); Scott v. Comm'r of Internal Rev., 236 F.3d 1239 (10th Cir. 2001); Ross v. Old Republic Ins. Co., 134 P.3d 505 (Colo. App. 2006), aff'd on other grounds, 180 P.3d 427 (Colo. 2008).

This section to be strictly construed. Isbill Associates, Inc. v. City & County of Denver, 666 P.2d 1117 (Colo. App. 1983); Mesa Sand & Gravel v. Landfill, Inc., 776 P.2d 362 (Colo. 1989); Michaelson v. Michaelson, 884 P.2d 695 (Colo. 1994).

The appellate court's authority to determine interest is exclusive. While the appellate court may, of course, remand to the trial court for a determination of the proper statutory interest, the trial court, without such an instruction, lacks jurisdiction to enter any amount of interest not stated in the mandate. Pet, Inc. v. Goldberg, 37 Colo. App. 257, 547 P.2d 943 (1975).

Law of the forum governs. Colorado follows a minority rule of conflict of laws in determining what law applies to interest questions, and Colorado holds that it is the law of the forum which governs. Davis Cattle Co. v. Great W. Sugar Co., 393 F. Supp. 1165 (D. Colo. 1975), aff'd, 544 F.2d 436 (10th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1094, 97 S. Ct. 1109, 51 L. Ed. 541 (1977).

The question of entitlement to interest is to be answered under Colorado law, even as to parties who are citizens of other states and whose farms are in other states. Davis Cattle Co. v. Great W. Sugar Co., 393 F. Supp. 1165 (D. Colo. 1975), aff'd, 544 F.2d 436 (10th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1094, 97 S. Ct. 1109, 51 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1977).

The proper method of attacking an appellate court's instructions as to interest is to petition for amendment or recall of the mandate. Such a procedure is available in Colorado. Pet, Inc. v. Goldberg, 37 Colo. App. 257, 547 P.2d 943 (1975).

Relationship of section to C.A.R. 37. While this section states the circumstances wherein interest shall be allowed to a creditor or on a judgment, C.A.R. 37 requires and empowers the appellate court to make the determination of interest to be allowed, if any, and to include instructions concerning the entry of such interest in its mandate when a judgment is modified or reversed with directions for entry of a money judgment. Pet, Inc. v. Goldberg, 37 Colo. App. 257, 547 P.2d 943 (1975).

No conflict with § 38-1-116. There is no conflict between § 38-1-116, which provides for six percent interest in an eminent domain proceeding from the date of possession until the date the commission's award is filed with the court, and this section, pertaining to interest thereafter, since once the amount of the valuation award has been ascertained by the commission, the result is like any other judgment. Denver Urban Renewal Auth. v. Hayutin, 40 Colo. App. 559, 583 P.2d 296 (1978).

Interest questions in a suit on a contract brought in federal court are to be determined by state law, whether jurisdiction is founded on a federal question or diversity of citizenship. Rocky Mt. Tool & Mach. Co. v. Tecon Corp., 371 F.2d 589 (10th Cir. 1966).

This section affects rate of interest held not to be paid on the redemption of land. O'Mahoney v. People ex rel. Stone, 24 Colo. 524, 52 P. 796 (1898).

This section does not apply to the collection of interest on overdue taxes because there must be an agreement expressing mutuality of contract before this section applies, and a contractual relationship clearly is not involved in a claim for overdue taxes. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Temple, 176 Colo. 537, 491 P.2d 1371 (1971).

For the "unreasonable and vexatious delay in payment" clause contained in earlier provision, see Craig v. Chandler, 6 Colo. 543 (1883); Corson v. Neatheny, 9 Colo. 212, 11 P. 82 (1886); Keys v. Morrison, 3 Colo. App. 441, 34 P. 259 (1893); Young v. Kimber, 44 Colo. 448, 98 P. 1132, 28 L.R.A. 626 (1909).

This section allows pre-judgment interest on a judgment against the state because nothing in this section precludes such interest. Plaintiff, a public officer, was, therefore, entitled to pre-judgment interest on the underpaid portion of his accumulated vacation leave. Wilkerson v. State, 830 P.2d 1121 (Colo. App. 1992).

Awarding interest is compensation for actual, pecuniary damage suffered by the victim incidental to the defendant's crime of fraudulently obtaining funds because the victim loses the use of the money involved. Interest is awarded as restitution to compensate the victim for such loss of use, it is not intended to reimburse the victim for interest that otherwise would have been earned on the funds. Valenzuela v. People, 893 P.2d 97 (Colo. 1995).

An insurer is liable for prejudgment interest pursuant to this section for underinsured motorist coverage from the date of the insurer's wrongful refusal or failure to pay, notwithstanding a policy provision that provided that liability and the amount of damages were to be determined by agreement of the parties or by arbitration. Bowen v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 929 P.2d 14 (Colo. App. 1996).

This section governs award of prejudgment interest in non-personal injury cases only. Liability of insurer in personal-injury case is normally governed by § 13-21-101 and case law under that section treating prejudgment interest as an element of compensatory damages, subject to limitations on coverage stated in policy. Award of prejudgment interest under this section is not appropriate unless insurer breached its contract with insured or otherwise wrongfully withheld amounts due. Old Republic Ins. Co. v. Ross, 180 P.3d 427 (Colo. 2008).

Plaintiff is entitled to recover prejudgment interest from date of injury until issuance of initial arbitration award but only to the limits of the uninsured motorist policy. Swan v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 8 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2000).

II. ALLOWANCE OF INTEREST.

A. In General.

The right to interest, independent of an agreement to pay it, is statutory. Weaver v. First Nat'l Bank, 138 Colo. 83, 330 P.2d 142 (1958); York Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Groussman Inv. Co., 166 Colo. 382, 443 P.2d 986 (1968).

The subject of interest is governed by statute, and in no case where interest is not so provided is it recoverable, unless specially contracted for, except in the nature of damages, where a refusal to pay has been wilful, wrongful, fraudulent, or without reasonable cause. Since this section points out in detail and especially enumerates the cases in which interest is allowable, assuming to cover the whole field, it is not recoverable in any case not thus expressly enumerated, or included by fair implication. When the general assembly assumed to declare in what cases interest could be allowed, under the rule that the expression of the one is the exclusion of another, no interest can be allowed in any case not specified. Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

The right to interest, independent of an agreement to pay it, is statutory; it is not given by the common law. However, there has always been a statute providing for interest, enumerating the cases in which it might be allowed and this section is substantially the same as the older statutes. Greeley, S. L. & Pac. Ry. v. Yount, 7 Colo. App. 189, 42 P. 1023 (1895); Bd. of Comm'rs v. Wheeler, 39 Colo. 207, 89 P. 50 (1907); Bankers Trust Co. v. Int'l Trust Co., 108 Colo. 15, 113 P.2d 656 (1941).

In the absence of agreement, interest can be recovered only in the cases mentioned in this section. Keys v. Morrison, 3 Colo. App. 441, 34 P. 259 (1893); Hanauer v. Bartels, 2 Colo. 514 (1875); Greeley, S. L. & Pac. Ry. v. Yount, 7 Colo. App. 189, 42 P. 1023 (1895), distinguishing Machette v. Wanless, 2 Colo. 169 (1873); Omaha & Grant Smelting amp; Ref. Co. v. Tabor, 13 Colo. 41, 21 P. 925(1889)(recovery allowed as damages and not as interest, the legal rate of interest being merely used as a convenient way of arriving at their amount); Morris v. Redak, 124 Colo. 27, 234 P.2d 908 (1951); Mitton v. Granite State Fire Ins. Co., 196 F.2d 988 (10th Cir. 1952); Hunter v. Wilson, 147 Colo. 36, 362 P.2d 553 (1961).

In the absence of any contractual provision, prejudgment interest can only be recovered in the cases enumerated in this section. Denver Ass'n for Retarded Children v. Sch. Dist. No. 1, 188 Colo. 310, 535 P.2d 200 (1975).

This section enumerates the cases in which interest may be awarded. Weaver v. First Nat'l Bank, 138 Colo. 83, 330 P.2d 142 (1958).

This section allows interest on money which is due and owing, regardless of whether the money was wrongfully withheld. In re Tri Sys. Consulting & Design, Inc., 115 Bankr. 279 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1990).

The right to recover interest is purely a legal one, and in no sense an equitable right. Denver, S. P. & P. R. R. v. Conway, 8 Colo. 1, 5 P. 142 (1884); DeRemer v. Parker, 19 Colo. 242, 34 P. 980 (1893); Pettit v. Thalheimer, 3 Colo. App. 355, 33 P. 277 (1893); Patten v. Am. Nat'l Bank, 15 Colo. App. 479, 63 P. 424 (1900).

1979 amendment applicable to judgments entered after effective date. Subsection (1)(a), which became effective July 1, 1979, applies to any judgments entered after that date, even where the withholding of the property in question was prior to the effective date of the amendment. Great W. Sugar Co. v. N. Natural Gas Co., 661 P.2d 684 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd sub nom. KN Energy, Inc. v. Great W. Sugar, Co., 698 P.2d 769 (Colo. 1985), cert. denied, 472 U.S. 1022, 105 S. Ct. 3489, 87 L. Ed. 2d 623 (1985).

The intent of subsection (1)(a) was to correct the situation in which a wrongdoer would stall settlement or judgment in order to reap the benefit of having use of money or property which was producing more profit for him than the statutory interest rate he would eventually have to pay. Any benefit resulting from the wrongful withholding was intended to be enjoyed not by the wrongdoer, but by the injured party. Great W. Sugar Co. v. KN Energy, Inc., 778 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1989).

Section requires an award of prejudgment interest in a rescission action, regardless of whether the issue was raised at trial or evidence was presented on the issue. Kennedy v. Gillam Dev. Corp., 80 P.3d 927 (Colo. App. 2003).

Prejudgment and postjudgment interest should have been awarded in homeowner's successful action against tenants for past-due rent and damage to premises. Butler v. Lembeck, 182 P.3d 1185 (Colo. App. 2007).

A wrongful withholding need not involve actual fraud or be tortious in nature. Section 38-10-117 provides that any conveyance made with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors is fraudulent. Stansbury v. Comm'r of Internal Rev., 102 F.3d 1088 (10th Cir. 1996).

Corporate executive of insolvent company liable as a transferee of assets for unpaid income taxes and the interest that accrued since the taxes became due. Transferee liable under § 38-10-117 (1) because conveyance was made with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, in this case, the internal revenue service. While structuring the sale of the assets of the insolvent company, corporate executive (transferee) obtained multiple opinions on the foreseeable tax consequences. Informed by those opinions and his corporate acumen, executive knowingly chose to take a calculated risk. Scott v. Comm'r of Internal Rev., 236 F.3d 1239 (10th Cir. 2001).

A wrongful withholding only requires the failure to pay or deliver money or property when there is an obligation to do so. Therefore an insurer's failure to pay uninsured motorist benefits need not be tortious or in bad faith to be a wrongful withholding for purposes of this section. Peterman v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 8 P.3d 549 (Colo. App. 2000).

There are judicially created exceptions to the general rule that the allowance of interest is a creature of statute. Davis Cattle Co. v. Great W. Sugar Co., 544 F.2d 436 (10th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1094, 97 S. Ct. 1109, 51 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1977).

A plaintiff is not entitled to prejudgment interest on all compensatory damages flowing from a wrongful withholding of property. Rather, a proper award of prejudgment interest applies only to that part of the compensatory damages awarded for money or property wrongfully withheld. Dillen v. HealthOne, L.L.C., 108, P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2004).

Prejudgment interest under subsection (1) is recoverable in an insurer's equitable contribution action under former § 10-4-707 (3) of the Colorado no-fault insurance act. Safeco Ins. Co. v. Westport Ins. Corp., 214 P.3d 1078 (Colo. App. 2009).

Moratory interest. As a matter of state law, Colorado recognizes moratory interest or the allowance of interest as damages. Moratory interest has been allowed in Colorado for more than 100 years. Davis Cattle Co. v. Great W. Sugar Co., 393 F. Supp. 1165 (D. Colo. 1975), aff'd, 544 F.2d 436 (10th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1094, 97 S. Ct. 1109, 51 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1977).

Under Colorado law statutory interest cannot be awarded on an unliquidated claim but such does not preclude the awarding of moratory interest, i.e., interest by way of damages and not as a creature of statute. Davis Cattle Co. v. Great W. Sugar Co., 544 F.2d 436 (10th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1094, 97 S. Ct. 1109, 511 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1977).

In allowing prejudgment interest, it is recognized that just compensation for the victim is a fundamental principle of damages, and that where money has been wrongfully withheld, it is only fair that the victim receive interest on the money thus withheld. Davis Cattle Co. v. Great W. Sugar Co., 544 F.2d 436 (10th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1094, 97 S. Ct. 1109, 51 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1977); Robb v. Universal Constructors, Inc., 665 F.2d 998 (10th Cir. 1981).

A judgment awarding interest on damages when entered falls under this section, and as to the statutory rate. The rate of statutory interest, as distinguished from the rate of moratory interest, is fixed and mandatory. Davis Cattle Co. v. Great W. Sugar Co., 393 F. Supp. 1165 (D. Colo. 1975), aff'd, 544 F.2d 436 (10th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1094, 975 S. Ct. 1109, 51 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1977).

In the absence of any proof as to the guilty party's gain, the statutory rate of interest for transactions entered into at that time should be awarded as damages. Alfred Brown Co. v. Johnson-Gibbons and Reed, 695 P.2d 746 (Colo. App. 1984).

The court does not err when it awards interest on a wrongfully withheld sum even though the exact amount is unliquidated until the date of judgment. Jasken v. Sheehy Constr. Co., 642 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1982).

Interest award on spouse's elective share of augmented estate and exempt property allowance is one of moratory interest which may run from date court finds elective share and allowance rather than from date of death of spouse. Matter of Estate of Smith, 718 P.2d 1069 (Colo. App. 1986).

For discussion of moratory interest award, see E.B. Jones Constr. Co. v. Denver, 717 P.2d 1009 (Colo. App. 1986).

Buyer entitled to interest where bank failed to deliver to the buyers a warranty deed as required by the contract, and trial court properly found that the bank wrongfully withheld the property. Cooper v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co., 725 P.2d 78 (Colo. App. 1986).

Trial court acted properly in finding that the defendants had wrongfully withheld funds from plaintiffs and in awarding such plaintiffs prejudgment interest. Colo. Performance v. Mariposa Assoc., 754 P.2d 401 (Colo. App. 1987).

A claim for damages for lost market value stemming from stock not being registered together with interest measured by a percentage of that loss would have been one for prejudgment interest subject to the limitations of Colorado law. United Telecomms., Inc. v. Am. Television & Commc'ns Corp., 536 F.2d 1310 (10th Cir. 1976).

The Colorado interest statute does not deal with interest charges which arise from an independent debt owed by the plaintiff to a third party. United Telecomms., Inc. v. Am. Television & Commc'ns Corp., 536 F.2d 1310 (10th Cir. 1976).

Interest which appellant was obligated to pay on money which it was required to borrow as a result of appellee's unwarranted delays and manipulations is not regulated by this section. United Telecomms., Inc. v. Am. Television & Commc'ns Corp., 536 F.2d 1310 (10th Cir. 1976).

Brokerage commission due under oral contract falls within this section and interest is due on the commission from the date that it was due and payable. Hayes v. N. Table Mt. Corp., 43 Colo. App. 467, 608 P.2d 830 (1979).

Broker's commission became due as a matter of law when the broker produced a buyer ready, willing, and able to purchase the property, and interest at the statutory rate began to accrue at that time. Mack v. McKanna, 687 P.2d 1326 (Colo. App. 1984).

Interest from date of filing of complaint. Where all of the transactions involving the secret profit made by the real estate agent in sale of building in violation of agent's fiduciary duty were completed on December 18, 1972, the principal would have been entitled to interest at the legal rate on the judgment from that date. However, since in the complaint the principal asked for interest only from the date of filing the complaint, interest from that period shall be part of the judgment. Lestoque v. M.R. Mansfield Realty, Inc., 36 Colo. App. 32, 536 P.2d 1146 (1975).

A debtor cannot avoid the payment of interest by disputing an account, and when the account or any portion thereof is found due, the creditor is entitled to interest on the amount due. Quad Constr., Inc. v. Wm. A. Smith Contracting Co., 534 F.2d 1391 (10th Cir. 1976).

Award of prejudgment interest appropriate where money was wrongfully withheld pursuant to a statute which conflicted with the constitutional provision of article XXI, section 4. Passarelli v. Schoettler, 742 P.2d 867 (Colo. 1987).

An award of prejudgment interest in a judgment against the state is not prohibited even though the general assembly did not expressly provide for an award nor is governmental immunity a bar to such an award. Passarelli v. Schoettler, 742 P.2d 867 (Colo. 1987).

Prejudgment interest may be awarded in property damage cases, as the legislative history clearly indicates that all cases are to be treated equally regarding the time that interest begins to accrue. Isbill Assocs. v. City & County of Denver, 666 P.2d 1117 (Colo. App. 1983); La Fond v. Basham, 683 P.2d 367 (Colo. App. 1984); Mesa Sand & Gravel v. Landfill, Inc., 776 P.2d 362 (Colo. 1989); Lowell Staats Min. Co. v. Pioneer Uravan, Inc., 878 F.2d 1259 (10th Cir. 1989); Teilhaber Mfg. v. Unarco Materials, 791 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1989).

Prejudgment interest may be awarded in breach of construction contract case even if amount is unliquidated at time of wrongful withholding. Hott v. Tillotson-Lewis Const. Co., 682 P.2d 1220 (Colo. App. 1983); Teilhaber Mfg. v. Unarco Materials, 791 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1989); cert. denied, 803 P.2d 517 (Colo. 1991).

Prejudgment interest may be awarded in intentional interference with contract case, as subsection (1)(b) is to be given a broad liberal construction to effectuate the general assembly's purpose of compensating parties for the loss of money or property to which they are entitled. Westfield Dev. v. Rifle Inv. Assoc., 786 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1990).

Prejudgment interest is permitted on the amount of compensatory damages that an insured would have received under the insurance contract from the time of the insurer's wrongful withholding. Herod v. Colo. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins., 928 P.2d 834 (Colo. App. 1996).

Prejudgment interest is permitted on the amount of wages for "comp time" employee earned while working for employer. Because employee was not paid those wages when he or she left the company, employer's withholding was wrongful. Thus, employee is entitled to an award of prejudgment interest calculated on his or her award from the effective date of resignation to the date of final judgment. Remote Switch Sys. v. Delangis, 126 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2005).

Nothing in the statute requires that a judgment creditor establish tortious conduct by a debtor to support award of prejudgment interest. Benham v. Mfrs. Wholesalers Indem. Exch., 685 P.2d 249 (Colo. App. 1984); Cooper v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co., 725 P.2d 78 (Colo. App. 1986).

Being the more specific statute, the plain terms of § 8-41-203 control over this section and, therefore, insurer is limited pursuant to subrogation agreement for workers' compensation to recover only the amount which it paid to the injured employee and cannot collect any interest on amount. Husson v. Meeker, 812 P.2d 731 (Colo. App. 1991).

This section contains no requirement that town request statutory interest in its pleadings for court to award interest pursuant to

C.R.C.P. 54(c). Town of Breckenridge v. Golforce, Inc., 851 P.2d 214 (Colo. App. 1992).

But, plaintiff not entitled to prejudgment interest in case of award of damages for emotional distress. Purpose of prejudgment interest is to discourage a person responsible for payment of a claim from delaying payment until judgment or settlement. Award of emotional distress damages are not intended to compensate for wrongful delay in obtaining money or property. Allabashi v. Lincoln Nat'l Sales Corp., 824 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1990).

Injuries properly determined as "personal" and not "property" in case where toxic contamination to property caused homeowners inconvenience and loss of peace of mind based on their fear that contaminants could be present in portions of their homes and the perceived stigma attached to homes in the neighborhood. Therefore, the trial court was correct in awarding prejudgment interest on damages at the rate allowed for cases involving "personal injuries". Antolovich v. Brown Group Retail, Inc., 183 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court erred in awarding post-judgment interest to accrue at 8% per annum when promissory note provided for interest to accrue at 13% per annum until paid in full. Dikeou v. Dikeou, 916 P.2d 601 (Colo. App. 1995), rev'd on other grounds, 928 P.2d 1286 (Colo. 1996).

Trial court erred in denying plaintiff an award of prejudgment interest on disputed portion of settlement funds that had been placed in a money market account pending the outcome of the trial. Fasing v. LaFond, 944 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1997).

Creditor defendant entitled to post-judgment interest during its appeal under subsection (4). Post-judgment interest continues to accrue until the judgment is satisfied. Indian Mountain v. J.P. Campbell & Assocs., 921 P.2d 65 (Colo. App. 1996).

The inquiry under this section is whether the money or property was wrongfully withheld from the nonbreaching party, and not whether the nature of the conduct of the breaching party brings him or her within the ambit of the statute. Rodgers v. Colo. Dept. of Human Servs., 39 P.3d 1232 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where one party withholds money from another party in reliance on an administrative order that is subsequently reversed, the party withholding the money was not entitled to the money; therefore, the party that was deprived of the use of the money is entitled to an award of interest on the amount of money that was wrongfully withheld. Rodgers v. Colo. Dept. of Human Servs., 39 P.3d 1232 (Colo. App. 2001).

B. Bonds.

Interest upon the penalty of a bond is allowed, and the penalty in a bond is the amount which the obligors agree to pay, if the whole penalty be needed to satisfy the damages sustained by the obligee by a breach of the bond, and is due as soon as the breach occurs. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. State ex rel. Mallin, 141 Colo. 259, 347 P.2d 507 (1959).

An amount becomes due on a performance bond when the bills for costs are submitted to the surety. A dispute as to the amount due does not remove the claim from this section. Asphalt Paving Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 671 P.2d 1013 (Colo. App. 1983).

The fact that the amount of the judgment, together with interest, exceeds the penalty of a bond does not preclude the collection of principal and interest. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. State ex rel. Mallin, 141 Colo. 259, 347 P.2d 507 (1959).

The fact that a judgment was not satisfied, in due course, and that, as a consequence, the amount of that judgment together with accrued interest now exceeds the penalty of a bond does not preclude the collection of principal and interest. Key Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Travelers Indem. Co., 32 Colo. App. 358, 513 P.2d 737 (1973).

C. Promissory Notes.

Note may provide for payment of interest. Under this section a promissory note which provides that upon failure to pay the principal when due interest shall be payable from date of note is a good contract, and the interest is recoverable. McKay's Estate v. Belknap Sav. Bank, 27 Colo. 50, 59 P. 745 (1899).

Upon a guaranty indorsed on a promissory note, both the principal and the interest specified in the note may be recovered. Martin v. Hazzard Powder Co., 2 Colo. 596 (1875).

Only statutory rate of interest allowed. Where judgment is procured upon a note, only statutory interest as allowed by this section can be recovered, notwithstanding the note provides for higher interest on amounts not paid when due. Hiller v. Matheny, 81 Colo. 459, 256 P. 10 (1927).

In an action to recover the amount paid for notes where the purchase is rescinded for fraud, the basis of recovery is the benefit to the defendant, and where there is an absence of proof as to the interest rate which would produce an amount equal to such benefit the statutory legal rate should be adopted. Bankers Trust Co. v. Int'l Trust Co., 108 Colo. 15, 113 P.2d 656 (1941).

Where the rate of interest is left blank on a promissory note, the legal rate, as provided by this section, is six percent, and the insertion of a higher rate of interest by the holder constitutes a material alteration which renders the note invalid. Farmers State Bank v. Klein, 159 Colo. 165, 410 P.2d 632 (1966).

If the person executing a preprinted form note which provides a blank for interest does not want to be bound to such, then the provision should be stricken or the word "none" should be inserted in the blank; otherwise interest at the statutory rate is due. Fin. Mgmt. Task Force, Inc. v. Altberger, 807 P.2d 1230 (Colo. App. 1990).

D. Other Instruments of Writing.

The "other instrument of writing" as used in this section is one based on contractual relations, an instrument importing mutuality, one which implies an obligation to pay for a consideration rendered. Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

A will is not such an instrument. Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

Interest in a legacy is not allowable. Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

The term "instrument of writing" has a definite legal meaning which excludes a verdict as something essentially different. Hawley v. Barker, 5 Colo. 118 (1879); Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

An instrument of writing implies an agreement or contract which it contains and of which it is the memorial. Hawley v. Barker, 5 Colo. 118 (1879); Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

This definition is in effect a declaration that such "other instrument of writing" must be one having the characteristics of a bond, bill, or promissory note and may not be something essentially different. Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

A policy of insurance is a contract and is within the meaning of "other instrument of writing". Bloom v. Wolfe, 37 Colo. App. 407, 547 P.2d 934 (1976).

Coupons from municipal bonds, being issued by the municipality in its business, rather than its governmental function, are "promissory notes" or "other instruments of writing" within the meaning of this section and bear interest from their maturity as therein provided. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Geer, 108 F. 478 (8th Cir. 1901).

Where leased property is thrown into the hands of a receiver and the landlord directs the tenant to pay no rent to anyone, on which direction he so acts, this does not, under this section, relieve him from liability for interest on payments so withheld. Lamar Cold Storage Co. v. Union Ice & Storage Co., 77 Colo. 556, 238 P. 42 (1925).

E. Judgments.

A judgment creditor who has a claim which falls within the clearly expressed wording of this section is entitled to interest on such claim from the date and at the rate specified in the statute. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959).

This section authorizes interest at the legal rate on the amount of a judgment from and after entry thereof. Denver-Albuquerque Motor Transp., Inc. v. Galligan, 145 Colo. 71, 358 P.2d 28 (1960).

Interest on a judgment is specifically authorized by this section. Security Ins. Co. v. Houser, 191 Colo. 189, 552 P.2d 308 (1976).

Pursuant to this section, interest is recoverable from the date the amount becomes due. Flight Sys. v. Elgood-Mayo Corp., 660 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1982).

Where the insurance contract does not specify a rate of interest, the general statutory rate of eight percent governs the recovery of postjudgment interest. Church v. Am. Standard Ins. Co., 764 P.2d 405 (Colo. App. 1988); Loza v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 971 P.2d 251 (Colo. App. 1998).

Although an underinsured motorist policy is a contract and therefore would fall under this section, which dictates interest to accrue at eight percent, the claim under that policy may be premised upon a tort claim for bodily injury and therefore accrue interest at the higher rate dictated by § 13-21-101. Here, plaintiff's underinsured motorist claim was for damages resulting from the tort of another person, even though it also involved the contract with his insurer; therefore, he was entitled to the higher interest rate of § 13-21-101. Parker v. USAA, 216 P.3d 7 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 200 P.3d 350 (Colo. 2009).

The postjudgment interest rate authorized by this section serves as the interest rate for judgments involving personal injury protection benefits. If the interest rate under § 10-4-708 were to serve as the prejudgment and the postjudgment interest rate, an inconsistency would exist between this section and § 10-4-708, which establishes the prejudgment interest rate in personal injury protection benefit cases. Loza v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 971 P.2d 251 (Colo. App. 1998).

A trial court errs in awarding interest from the date of filing the complaint. Denver-Albuquerque Motor Transp., Inc. v. Galligan, 145 Colo. 71, 358 P.2d 28 (1960).

Allowing interest from date of arbitration award is not error. Columbine Valley Constr. Co. v. Bd. of Dirs., 626 P.2d 686 (Colo. 1981).

Interest accrues from the date of the wrong, not from the date of the judgment. Isbill Assocs., Inc. v. Denver, 666 P.2d 1117 (Colo. App. 1983); Bassett v. Eagle Telecomms., 750 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1987); Colo. Performance Corp. v. Mariposa Assocs., 754 P.2d 401 (Colo. App. 1987).

Interest on property damage award accrues from the time the cause of action accrued, that is, from the date on which the injured party was wronged. Federal Ins. Co. v. Ferrellgas, Inc., 961 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1997).

Interest on damage award in an ADA claim accrues from the date of judgment and not from the date of the jury verdict. Fail v. Cmty. Hosp., 946 P.2d 573 (Colo. App. 1997).

When attorney fees are awarded, not as damages but to shift the burden of litigation, interest on the award runs from the date of the final order quantifying the amount of fees and not from any earlier judgment or order that might have established a party's right to recover damages or fees without specifying an amount. Kennedy v. King Soopers Inc., 148 P.3d 385 (Colo. App. 2006).

Under this section fixing the rate of interest at six percent, a judgment fixing the rate of interest in such case higher is erroneous. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 15 Colo. 320, 25 P. 508 (1890).

After judgment is entered, this section is applicable in regard to collection of interest on judgment. Schoenfeld v. Neher, 453 F.2d 896 (10th Cir. 1972).

Insurer cannot owe postjudgment interest in absence of an enforceable judgment. Old Republic Ins. Co. v. Ross, 180 P.3d 427 (Colo. 2008).

A plaintiff on the entry of a judgment becomes a creditor as contemplated by this section; he becomes a judgment creditor and clearly comes within the statutory purview of those entitled to recover interest. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959).

Where a judgment is entered "nunc pro tunc", plaintiff should have interest on the amount to be found due as of the date it is considered reduced to judgment since, except as to the rights of third persons, a judgment "nunc pro tunc" is retrospective and has the same force and effect, to all intents and purposes, as though it had been entered at the time when the judgment was originally rendered. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959).

Similarly, where the court orders claims to be restored "with legal interest", such claims duly allowed are of like significance, and bear the same interest as entered judgments under this section. Myers v. Colo. Pulp & Paper Co., 95 Colo. 328, 35 P.2d 1020 (1934).

A verdict for the full amount due under a contract of sale is tantamount to a determination that plaintiffs substantially complied with the terms of the contract, and that the sums provided therein became due and payable according to its tenor; this being so, they are entitled to statutory interest after maturity. Baer Bros. Land & Cattle Co. v. Reed, 197 F.2d 569 (10th Cir. 1952).

Where a motion for a new trial is overruled and thereafter a trial court computes interest on the verdict and orders judgment in the amount of the verdict and interest, this concludes the trial court's action relative to the judgment, and it becomes the final judgment. Green v. Jones, 134 Colo. 208, 304 P.2d 901 (1956).

In a suit on a foreign judgment, it is proper to allow interest on the original judgment and make the sum of principal and interest the principal amount of the judgment, which will also draw interest. Bruckman v. Taussig, 7 Colo. 561, 5 P. 152 (1884).

Judgment awarding prejudgment interest is not final until the amount of such interest is reduced to a sum certain. Grand County Custom Homebuilding, LLC v. Bell, 148 P.3d 398 (Colo. App. 2006).

F. Accounts and Money Due on Account.

This section provides that interest shall be allowed upon all moneys after they become due. Peterson v. Shaffer, 143 Colo. 138, 352 P.2d 281 (1960).

Any creditor who can bring himself within the terms of this section is entitled to interest from his debtor. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959); Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. State ex rel. Mallin, 141 Colo. 259, 347 P.2d 507 (1959).

While this section does not say who shall pay interest, it necessarily follows that if a creditor is entitled to receive interest, his debtor must be charged with the payment thereof; if a judgment creditor is entitled to recover interest then the judgment debtor must be the one to pay it, since this section does not expressly or by implication exclude or except any judgment creditor or judgment debtor. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959).

This section is clear and concise with reference to judgement creditors. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959).

This section, because it imposes upon the debtor an additional burden in the way of damages for the withholding of money after it becomes due on account, should be strictly construed. Patten v. Am. Nat'l Bank, 15 Colo. App. 479, 63 P. 424 (1900); Smith-McCord-Townsend Co. v. Camenga, 104 Colo. 7, 87 P.2d 751 (1939); Hunter v. Wilson, 147 Colo. 36, 362 P.2d 553 (1961).

Meaning of word "account". The word "account", when used alone, as in this section, without words of limitation, extension, qualification, or explanation is sometimes equivalent to the word "claim" or "demand" when referring to an indebtedness arising out of contract or some fiduciary relation. Donley v. Bailey, 48 Colo. 373, 110 P. 65 (1910).

"Money due on account" includes fixed commission. As this section does not limit or qualify the meaning of the word "account", the phrase "money due on account", must include the claim of one who by procuring a lease of lands for another earns a fixed sum as a commission, and he is entitled to interest from the time the claim became due, it being liquidated. Donley v. Bailey, 48 Colo. 373, 110 P. 65 (1910); Harvey v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 56 Colo. 570, 139 P. 1098 (1914).

The award of interest on commissions from the dates of the deeds, based on the reasonable determination that the commissions are due at such times, is proper. Manufacturer's Nat'l Bank v. Hartmeister, 411 F.2d 173 (10th Cir. 1969).

Interest may be recovered on a liquidated sum admitted to be due and payable on a day certain. Higgins v. Armstrong, 9 Colo. 38, 10 P. 232 (1886); Harvey v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 56 Colo. 570, 139 P. 1098 (1914).

This section in its present form has been carried over into the law of Colorado from early time, and the Colorado courts have traditionally required the allowance of interest on liquidated claims. N. Drive-In Theatre Corp. v. Park-In Theatres, Inc., 248 F.2d 232 (10th Cir. 1957).

The federal courts have given the statute a like construction. N. Drive-In Theatre Corp. v. Park-In Theatres, Inc., 248 F.2d 232 (10th Cir. 1957).

So where the amount payable under a contract is a liquidated amount, it falls within the definitions contained in the statute. York Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Groussman Inv. Co., 166 Colo. 382, 443 P.2d 986 (1968).

A liability fixed by law is a liquidated liability. T. & M. Transp. Co. v. Shattuck Chem. Co., 158 F.2d 909 (10th Cir. 1947).

For interest recovered by carrier under interstate commerce act, see T. & M. Transp. Co. v. Shattuck Chem. Co., 158 F.2d 909 (10th Cir. 1947).

State entitled to interest on taxes not paid to treasurer by state auditor. Where the state auditor keeps an account of the money received by him for taxes, which is due within 30 days after he receives it — that is, the statute requires him to pay it into the treasury within the 30 days — on each payment of taxes not paid over to the treasurer the state is entitled to interest under this section from the expiration of 30 days after its receipt by the auditor. Am. Bonding Co. v. People, 53 Colo. 512, 127 P. 941 (1912).

As towns and cities in business transactions are liable for interest, in the absence of statute, the same as private corporations or individuals, despite the conclusion reached by this court in Bd. of Comm'rs v. Wheeler, 39 Colo. 207, 89 P. 50 (1907), which was but dicta in that case. City of Golden v. W. Lumber & Pole Co., 60 Colo. 382, 154 P. 95 (1916).

In entering into a contract for services, a city lays aside its attributes of sovereignty and becomes liable just as an individual would be liable, including for interest. City & County of Denver v. Thomas, 176 Colo. 483, 491 P.2d 573 (1971).

A city which refuses or neglects payment of a just demand is liable for interest thereon. City of Golden v. W. Lumber & Pole Co., 60 Colo. 382, 154 P. 95 (1916).

Additionally, interest is allowable on mechanics' lien claims as an incident to the debt against the property. Buerger Inv. Co. v. Salzer Lumber Co., 77 Colo. 401, 237 P. 162 (1925).

Interest is allowed upon a balance due for work performed. Donley v. Bailey, 48 Colo. 373, 110 P. 65 (1910); Idaho Gold Coin Mining & Milling Co. v. Colo. Iron Works Co., 49 Colo. 66, 111 P. 553 (1910); Wells v. Crawford, 23 Colo. App. 103, 127 P. 914 (1912).

An unliquidated claim does not come within the statute as to allowance of interest. Hunter v. Wilson, 147 Colo. 36, 362 P.2d 553 (1961).

Where a claim for damages has never been settled, it is unliquidated, and therefore this section is not applicable. Credit Inv. & Loan Co. v. Guar. Bank & Trust Co., 166 Colo. 471, 444 P.2d 633 (1968).

Where the claim for damages for breach of warranty is unliquidated, such does not fall within the types of debts enumerated by the statute. York Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Groussman Inv. Co., 166 Colo. 382, 443 P.2d 986 (1968).

The mere fact that claims are in dispute does not preclude the recovery of interest thereon. N. Drive-In Theatre Corp. v. Park-In Theatres, Inc., 248 F.2d 232 (10th Cir. 1957).

The mere fact that one disputes the amount due on a bill does not render an account unliquidated; hence, one is therefore entitled to interest from the date he rendered his bill, at which time the account became due and payable. W. Oil Fields, Inc. v. Coit, 29 Colo. App. 567, 487 P.2d 562 (1971).

There is no requirement that the arbitration award be a monetary judgment before interest is awarded. Subsection (3) provides that interest shall be allowed even if the amount is unliquidated at the time of the wrongful withholding. Wilson v. Estate of Lawrence, 910 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1995).

A debtor cannot avoid the payment of interest by disputing the account, and when at the trial the account or any portion of it is established, the creditor is entitled to interest upon the amount found to be due. Florence & Cripple Creek R. R. v. Tennant, 32 Colo. 71, 75 P. 410 (1904); York Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Groussman Inv. Co., 166 Colo. 382, 443 P.2d 986 (1968).

Claiming unliquidated setoff against whole debt. A debtor cannot defeat the running of interest against him for the part of a debt which he admits that he owes, and which would otherwise draw interest, by simply making a claim of an unliquidated setoff against the whole debt. York Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Groussman Inv. Co., 166 Colo. 382, 443 P.2d 986 (1968).

Interest allowed only on balance due. Where a claim under an agreement is certain and liquidated, but is reduced because of the allowance of an unliquidated setoff or counterclaim, interest may be allowed only on the balance due. York Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Groussman Inv. Co., 166 Colo. 382, 443 P.2d 986 (1968).

Setoff should be at time due. The claim of the debtor not bearing interest should be set off against that of the creditor drawing interest as of the date of the time it became due and owing. York Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Groussman Inv. Co., 166 Colo. 382, 443 P.2d 986 (1968).

For the interest on "money due on settlement of an account from the day of the last just entry made on account" under earlier provision, see Bergundthal v. Bailey, 15 Colo. 257, 25 P. 86 (1890).

G. Money Fraudulently Converted.

Interest for tortious taking or detention of money or property. By distinguishing between interest as such and interest as damages the equivalent of interest in the way of damages for the tortious taking and detention of money or property is allowed, even when interest is not recoverable under the statute. Where interest is allowed as damages and there is an absence of proof as to the rate which would produce the amount the statutory legal rate should be adopted. Bankers Trust Co. v. Int'l Trust Co., 108 Colo. 15, 113 P.2d 656 (1941).

Where record does not disclose that amounts charged against a fiduciary were levied because of a fraudulent taking, there is no reversible abuse of discretion by the trial court in refusing interest on such amounts. Latta v. Henry, 28 Colo. App. 220, 472 P.2d 690 (1970).

III. NONALLOWANCE OF INTEREST.

There is no provision for interest upon damages resulting from the wrongful taking of property, and without statutory authority, it is not recoverable. Greeley, S. L. & Pac. Ry. v. Yount, 7 Colo. App. 189, 42 P. 1023 (1895); Banker's Trust Co. v. Int'l Trust Co., 108 Colo. 15, 113 P.2d 656 (1941).

Damages to property arising from the wrong or negligence of a defendant is not one of the enumerated cases. Denver, S. P. & P. R. R. v. Conway, 8 Colo. 1, 5 P. 142, 54 Am. R. 537 (1884).

An action in damage for a breach of warranty is not one of the enumerated cases. Weaver v. First Nat'l Bank, 138 Colo. 83, 330 P.2d 142 (1958).

Also, interest is not recoverable upon an unliquidated demand, for under all the authorities, even where interest is recoverable upon an unliquidated claim, it does not begin to run until the date of the demand, and the beginning of a suit is deemed equivalent to a demand. Denver, S. P. & P. R. R. v. Moynahan, 8 Colo. 56, 5 P. 811 (1884); Dexter v. Collins, 21 Colo. 455, 42 P. 664 (1895); T. & M. Transp. Co. v. Shattuck Chem. Co., 158 F.2d 909 (10th Cir. 1947); Schlottman v. Pressey, 195 F.2d 343 (10th Cir. 1952).

Interest cannot be allowed on unliquidated claims. Yeager Garden Acres, Inc. v. Summit Constr. Co., 32 Colo. App. 242, 513 P.2d 458 (1973); I.M.A., Inc. v. Rocky Mountain Airways, Inc., 713 P.2d 882 (Colo. 1986) (decided under former law).

In Colorado statutory interest cannot be awarded under this section on an unliquidated claim, but this does not end the matter. Statutory interest is one thing, but there is another kind of interest — moratory interest or interest by way of damages. Davis Cattle Co. v. Great W. Sugar Co., 393 F. Supp. 1165 (D. Colo. 1975), aff'd, 544 F.2d 436 (10th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1094, 97 S. Ct. 1109, 51 L. Ed. 2d 541 (1977).

Interest is not allowable upon a balance due for work. Hurlburt v. Dusenbery, 26 Colo. 240, 57 P. 860 (1899).

Nothing contained in this section can be construed to authorize the recovery of interest in an action for damages for fraud and deceit. Clark v. Giacomini, 85 Colo. 530, 277 P. 306 (1929).

Interest is not recoverable on the amount of a verdict, although a substantial period of time (e.g., two years) has elapsed from the date of its rendition up to the time of the entry of judgment thereon. Hawley v. Barker, 5 Colo. 118 (1879).

County acting in governmental purpose not within this section. A county, being essentially an agency of the state for general governmental purposes, is not within the purview of this section regulating the rate and payment of interest upon money due or to become due from it. Roberts v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 94 Colo. 149, 28 P.2d 813 (1934).

It was not the intention of the general assembly to allow interest upon claims against counties by virtue of this section, because § 5-12-104 provides that county orders and warrants and other like evidences or certificates of indebtedness shall bear interest at the rate of six percent. If it was intended that obligations of the county other than those mentioned in § 5-12-104 should draw interest, as provided in this section, the enactment of this section would have been idle, because it provides for the allowance of interest "on any bond, bill, promissory note or other instrument of writing", which expressions are broad enough to include county orders and warrants and other like evidences of municipal indebtedness. The rule being that counties may not have liabilities imposed upon them in the absence of a statute, and the fact that the general assembly provided that county orders, warrants and other like evidences of municipal indebtedness shall bear interest, it must have intended to exclude all obligations other than those mentioned - expressio unius est exclusio alterius. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Wheeler, 39 Colo. 207, 89 P. 50 (1907); City of Golden v. W. Lumber & Pole Co., 60 Colo. 382, 154 P. 95 (1916).

Interest is not recoverable against a municipal corporation on claims arising out of its actions in a governmental capacity. Police Pension & Relief Bd. v. Behnke, 143 Colo. 365, 353 P.2d 370 (1960).

Where the rights and duties of the parties are adjudicated and determined, then where plaintiffs have a money judgment, they are entitled to statutory interest thereon. Police Pension & Relief Bd. v. Behnke, 143 Colo. 365, 353 P.2d 370 (1960).

This section does not authorize the awarding of interest on overdue interest. It may be true that interest, when it has become payable, is "money become due", but a fair construction of this section will allow the language to cover only interest upon the principal, within the legislative intent, especially in view of the provision of § 5-12-103 allowing any rate to be agreed upon. So, this statute does not authorize the awarding of interest on overdue interest. Denver Brick, etc., Co. v. McAllister, 6 Colo. 261 (1882); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Linn, 29 Colo. 446, 68 P. 839 (1902).

Where interest is claimed as damages and principal is accepted without interest right to interest is extinguished. Where interest is claimed as damages by virtue of the nonpayment of a debt when due, and for that reason is allowed by law, it is then considered not an integral part of a debt, but merely as an incident to the debt, and in such cases when the principal is paid and accepted without interest, the right to interest is extinguished. Bassick Gold Mine Co. v. Beardsley, 49 Colo. 275, 112 P. 770 (1911).

A protest for the nonpayment of the interest does not change this rule. Bassick Gold Mine Co. v. Beardsley, 49 Colo. 275, 112 P. 770 (1911).

Similarly, a receipt "in payment of above account" is a complete settlement, barring fraud or mistake, and precludes a subsequent claim of interest on the grounds that the amount was not paid promptly at its maturity. Bassick Gold Mine Co. v. Beardsley, 49 Colo. 275, 112 P. 770 (1911).

Section not applicable to judgment determining rights to funds paid into court. This statute, which allows judgment creditors to receive interest, does not apply to a judgment determining the right to funds paid into court, especially in an interpleader action, where the judgment is against the fund, not against the other parties. Ritter v. Wysowatcky, 32 Colo. App. 410, 514 P.2d 333 (1973).

Prejudgment interest cannot apply to punitive damage awards. Coale v. Dow Chem. Co., 701 P.2d 885 (Colo. App. 1985).

If there is a specific agreement for interest, but the right to interest has been waived, this section is not applicable. Ebrahimi v. E.F. Hutton & Co., Inc., 794 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1989).

Where demand for payment under a performance bond was not made before suit was filed, interest on the judgment should be awarded to plaintiff only from the date the complaint was filed. Riva Ridge Apts. v. Robert G. Fisher Co., 745 P.2d 1034 (Colo. App. 1987).

Subsection (1) affords plaintiff no basis for recovery when the plaintiff's claim for interest arises from a personal injury and not as a creditor or a party to a contract. Subsection (1) generally pertains to post-judgment interest that applies to debt, contract, and property damage cases. Schnacker v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 843 P.2d 102 (Colo. App. 1992).

Future wages and benefits are not "due" within meaning of this section. Therefore, prejudgment interest should not have been awarded on the portion of a judgment representing lost future wages and benefits. Shannon v. Colo. Sch. of Mines, 847 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1992); Dillen v. HealthOne, L.L.C., 108 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2004).

Prejudgment interest may not be awarded for future damages. Life Care Centers v. E. Hampden Assoc., 903 P.2d 1180 (Colo. App. 1995).

Prejudgment interest, under a theory of wrongful withholding, is not available on an award for attorney fees to compensate plaintiffs for the loss of use of their money. Roget v. Grand Pontiac, Inc., 5 P.3d 341 (Colo. App. 1999).

Consequential damages resulting from a wrongful withholding are not subject to prejudgment interest. Only the amounts actually withheld may draw interest under this section. S. Park Aggregates, Inc. v. Nw. Nat. Ins. Co., 847 P.2d 218 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section is inapplicable when another party absconded with the plaintiff's money. Defendant was not the party wrongfully withholding the money and did not realize a gain or benefit by retaining it. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128 (Colo. App. 1993).

Prejudgment interest may not be awarded by trial court upon confirmation of arbitration award where such interest was not requested during the arbitration. Duncan v. Nat'l Home Ins. Co., 36 P.3d 191 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where an award of attorneys fees was properly characterized as analogous to costs rather than damages, the court abused its discretion by awarding moratory interest on the fees. Farmers Reservoir & Irrigation Co. v. City of Golden, 113 P.3d 119 (Colo. 2005).

An award of postjudgment interest is not proper when the award of wages to employee is used to set off the greater amount that employee owes employer for the special master's fee. Remote Switch Sys. v. Delangis, 126 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2005).

In the absence of any Colorado authority applying subsection (1) to an insurer's recoupment claim, and in light of the parties' plausible conflicting arguments about the statute's applicability, federal court of appeals was unable to conclude that insurers met their burden of establishing that Colorado law requires an award of prejudgment interest under the circumstances. Valley Forge Ins. Co. v. Health Care Mgmt. Partners, Ltd., 616 F.3d 1086 (10th Cir. 2010).

IV. NOTICE OR DEMAND.

Some kind of notice must be given debtor before creditor can recover interest. The only reasonable construction of this section is that even though a debtor may be unable to pay, and a demand therefor be excusable to that extent, still there must be some notice to him of some kind, either by the institution of a suit, or otherwise, of the creditor's intention to terminate the relation of debtor and creditor by declaring the maturity of a debt, or some act of the creditor evidencing such desire and intention, before he can be allowed to recover interest. Patten v. Am. Nat'l Bank, 15 Colo. App. 479, 63 P. 424 (1900).

The relation between a bank and its depositor is that of debtor and creditor, the debt becoming due and payable on demand, and even though a bank may be unable to pay, and a demand therefore be excusable to that extent, still there must be some notice by the depositor of his intention of terminating the relation of debtor and creditor by declaring the maturity of the debt before he can recover interest on his deposit under this section. Patten v. Am. Nat'l Bank, 15 Colo. App. 479, 63 P. 424 (1900).

Hence, no interest on bank account until demand is made. In cases of general deposits in a bank, unless there be some agreement or usage to the contrary, the undertaking of the bank is only to repay upon demand. Such an account, therefore, does not become due under this section until demand is made for it, and the bank is not in default, or liable to respond in damages, until such demand and refusal. Hence, under this general rule, a plaintiff is not entitled to receive interest on his deposit, unless the circumstances were such as to legally excuse him from making a demand prior to the time when he did make it. Patten v. Am. Nat'l Bank, 15 Colo. App. 479, 63 P. 424 (1900).

The fact that a bank is temporarily suspended and its assets are temporarily in the hands of a receiver appointed by the government does not excuse a depositor from making demand so as to render the account due and cause it to draw interest without demand. Patten v. Am. Nat'l Bank, 15 Colo. App. 479, 63 P. 424 (1900).

Interest, whether as damages or under this section, must be given from the date of the demand of payment for labor performed and materials furnished. In an action at law on a contract for work done and materials furnished, this section, respecting the allowance of interest, is mandatory. It leaves no discretion in the court to take into consideration, as in equity cases, the laches of the demandant in bringing the suit. City of Denver v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 141 F. 69 (8th Cir. 1905).

Absent any agreement by the parties on interest, interest becomes due after payment at the statutory rate on the unpaid balance of the principal from the date that demand for payment is made. Knisley v. Parsons, 172 Colo. 533, 474 P.2d 599 (1970).

Where money is to be paid if third party does not, it is unnecessary to make a demand. Where a contract provides that the parties of the first part will pay the party of the second part a certain sum of money if the sum is not paid by a third party within a specified time, and such third party fails to do so, then it is not necessary to either make a demand upon such third party for payment or to notify the parties of the first part of such failure in order to mature the obligation so as to draw interest in accordance with this section, as the money becomes due upon the failure to pay at the expiration of the specified time and the allowance of interest from the date of the commencement of the suit does not constitute prejudicial error. Doyle v. Nesting, 37 Colo. 522, 88 P. 862 (1907), distinguishing Dexter v. Collins, 21 Colo. 455, 42 P. 664 (1895).

In the context of determining when payment of debt is wrongfully withheld, either formal demand or circumstances demonstrating a reasonable expectation of payment renders nonpayment wrongful. A letter from an accounting firm satisfied the need for a formal demand for payment, under the theory of wrongful withholding. The parties had retained the firm to examine their mutual accounts and determine their respective obligations. The firm determined the amount of each party's debt and communicated the amounts in a letter to each party. The letter established a present expectation of payment of which both parties were aware. Thus the letter satisfied the need for a formal demand for payment. Karg v. Mitchek, 983 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1998).

V. COMPUTATION.

Interest should start to run from the date of the entry of a judgment. Weaver v. First Nat'l Bank, 138 Colo. 83, 330 P.2d 142 (1958).

At six percent. Under this section, upon execution or satisfaction of judgments, interest should be collected at six percent per annum from the date of each judgment. Davies v. Craig, 70 Colo. 473, 203 P. 267 (1921).

Interest should begin accruing on the date the defendant began wrongfully withholding the joint venture funds. The defendant had a reasonable time in which to wind up the joint venture. The trial court found that he willfully failed to do so, and accordingly, pursuant to the statute, interest should have been awarded from date the willful delay began. Wilson v. Estate of Lawrence, 910 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1995).

One who is damaged by a breach of duty may recover prejudgment interest from the date of the breach, since it is the breach itself that makes the conduct wrongful. Porter Constr. Servs. v. Ehrhardt, Keefe, Steiner, and Hottman, P.C., 131 P.3d 1115 (Colo. App. 2005).

Thus, a judgment against a local government bears interest from the date of its entry. Stone v. Currigan, 138 Colo. 442, 334 P.2d 740 (1959).

Interest allowed from date of filing complaint. This section concerning interest on damage claims is mandatory to the end that a trial judge shall compute and enter interest on any verdict or judgment calculated from the date of the filing of the complaint. Green v. Jones, 134 Colo. 208, 304 P.2d 901 (1956); Denver-Albuquerque Motor Transp., Inc. v. Galligan, 145 Colo. 71, 358 P.2d 28 (1960).

A trustee in bankruptcy who sues for the value of stock issued by an insolvent corporation is entitled to interest from the date of commencing his action. Feiring v. Gano, 114 Colo. 567, 168 P.2d 901 (1946).

Interest computed from date of performance on plaintiff's part. Where there was a balance due plaintiffs under a written contract which had on plaintiff's part been fully performed prior to a certain date, this date is the date from which interest should be computed, if allowed, and the amount being due on a written instrument, plaintiffs are entitled to interest under this section, unless there had been a tender made by defendant. And a deposit of the amount due in court "payable to the plaintiff on demand" is not a tender. Harvey v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 56 Colo. 570, 139 P. 1098 (1914).

Money not turned over by treasurer to successor draws interest from date latter assumed office. Money in the hands of a county treasurer belonging to a county and not turned over to his successor at the time the latter assumed the duties of the office would draw interest under this section at the legal rate from that date, and the sureties on his official bond are liable to the county for such money with interest. Gartley v. People ex rel. Pueblo County, 28 Colo. 227, 64 P. 208 (1901).

Agent who converts principal's money is liable for interest from date of transaction. An agent, who being employed to lend the money of his principal converts it to his own use is liable either in assumpsit or in an action ex delicto for the interest upon the money under this section, from the date of the transaction. Boyle v. Poor, 62 Colo. 337, 163 P. 967 (1916).

Interest allowed on account when due. Where in an action containing three counts, the first upon a stated account, the second upon an open book account, and the third for money had and received, plaintiff is entitled to interest on the first count from the date the account was stated, and on the second count from the date the account became due and payable, but disallowed interest on the third. Mine & Smelter Supply Co. v. Parke & Lacy Co., 107 F. 881 (8th Cir. 1901).

Under this section, a party furnishing supplies to a corporation pursuant to a written contract providing that the amount furnished in each calendar month shall be paid for on a day certain in the succeeding month is to be allowed interest on each monthly amount from the day it matures until payment made. Florence Oil & Ref. Co. v. McRae, 40 Colo. 303, 90 P. 507 (1907); Bassick Gold Mine Co. v. Beardsley, 49 Colo. 275, 112 P. 770 (1911).

Similarly, interest from due date of rent is allowed. In an action for money due for rent by virtue of a written lease, the claim sued on is clearly included in this section, and the plaintiff is entitled to interest from the due date of the installments of rent to the date of judgment. Wells v. Crawford, 23 Colo. App. 103, 127 P. 914 (1912); Lamar Cold Storage Co. v. Union Ice & Storage Co., 77 Colo. 556, 238 P. 42 (1925); Macaluso v. Easely, 81 Colo. 50, 253 P. 397 (1927).

The fact that the court does not at the time of the entry of judgment compute the amount of the interest accrued to that date is not material; the computation can be made at any time. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. State ex rel. Mallin, 141 Colo. 259, 347 P.2d 507 (1959).

When no authority for interest from date of executor's sale. Where an executor contends that the trial court erred in awarding interest on the amount received from the property from the date of sale, rather than only from the date of judgment, then, where there has been no showing and no finding on the part of the trial court that the money received was held without the owner's consent, there is no authority for the award of interest from the date of sale. In re Estate of Granberry, 30 Colo. App. 590, 498 P.2d 960 (1972).

Where a partnership is dissolved by one partner selling to his co-partners his interest at a fixed cash sum, an unpaid balance of the purchase price under this section will draw interest at the legal rate from the date of the transaction. Cobb v. Benedict, 27 Colo. 342, 62 P. 222 (1900).

In an action for an accounting where a joint venturer seeks to recover his share of the profits, he is entitled to the legal rate of interest from the date of demand to the date of filing of the master's report. Pepper v. Hyman, 117 Colo. 365, 189 P.2d 155 (1947).

The offset of an unliquidated claim against a liquidated claim before the computation of interest is permitted, at least in situations in which the two claims arise out of the same general transaction. York Plumbing & Heating Co. v. Groussman Inv. Co., 166 Colo. 382, 443 P.2d 986 (1968).

Where the claims do not arise out of the same general transaction, the offset of an unliquidated claim against a liquidated claim before computation of interest is not permitted. Karg v. Mitchek, 983 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1998).

Under the terms of an agreement with a bank, the amount which an armored motor service was obligated to pay the bank as a result of a robbery from their truck became due the day the bank's money disappeared from the truck. Accordingly, the bank was entitled to interest on that obligation, arising under the instrument of writing, from and after that date. Jefferson County Bank v. Armored Motors Serv., 148 Colo. 343, 366 P.2d 134 (1961).

Where a note is made payable "with interest", without specifying the rate, or the time from which the interest is to be computed, the general rule is that the note carries interest from the date of its execution at the legal rate fixed by law. Salazar v. Taylor, 18 Colo. 538, 33 P. 369 (1893).

Where the stated rate on a note is unintelligible, this rule likewise applies, and the legal rate fixed by this section would govern. Salazar v. Taylor, 18 Colo. 538, 33 P. 369 (1893).

Compound interest may not be recovered. Denver Brick & Mfg. Co. v. McAllister, 6 Colo. 261 (1882).

This rule does not apply to unpaid coupons of municipal bonds. The rule that compound interest may not be recovered does not apply to unpaid coupons belonging to or cut from municipal bonds; interest may be recovered on overdue coupons on county bonds. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Linn, 29 Colo. 446, 68 P. 839 (1902).

Such coupons draw interest after maturity. City of Cripple Creek v. Adams, 36 Colo. 320, 85 P. 184 (1906).

Mode of determining property value for services and consumption. Where the property is domestic animals, valuable for service only, the value of the use of the animal is the measure of compensation, and where the article is intended for consumption, interest upon the value of it would seem to be the true compensation. Thus, if the owner of goods should ask to obtain the like quantity, he must purchase in the market at current rates, and he would be deprived of the use of the money thus invested, the best estimate of a loss that can be made is interest upon the amount of money which he would for that purpose be compelled to pay out. Arkansas Valley Land & Cattle Co. v. Mann, 130 U.S. 69, 9 S. Ct. 458, 32 L. Ed. 854 (1899).

Interest upon the cost of a silver mill might be taken by a jury as its fair rental value, in the absence of other evidence concerning that value. New York & Colo. Mining Syndicate & Co. v. Fraser, 130 U.S. 611, 9 S. Ct. 665, 23 L. Ed. 1031 (1889).

Interest on damages for injuries to property or torts commences on date of judgment. The Colorado statute dealing with interest on damages provides that in personal injury cases interest commences as of the date of the filing of the complaint. No mention is made of property injuries or torts. Inasmuch as these are unliquidated, the general rule is that the interest commences to run as of the date of judgment. Westric Battery Co. v. Standard Elec. Co., 482 F.2d 1307 (10th Cir. 1973).

Interest allowed from date defective product was installed, since product was defective at the time of installation. Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 281 F. Supp. 2d 1252 (D. Colo. 2003), aff'd, 431 F.3d 1268 (10th Cir. 2005).

Interest awarded on breach of contract judgment from time money due. The court concluded there was a binding contract between the parties; thus the judgment was based upon breach of contract rather than quantum meruit and interest was properly awarded from the time the money was due. Warde v. Davis, 494 F.2d 655 (10th Cir. 1974); Danburg v. Realties, Inc., 677 P.2d 439 (Colo. App. 1984).

Interest from date of filing of counterclaim. Subsections (1)(b) and (3) provide that interest shall be from the time moneys were wrongfully withheld or became due and where there is no evidence of any wrongful withholding or demand or expectation of payment by claimant prior to the filing of the counterclaim, trial court was correct in awarding prejudgment interest from such date. W.H. Woolley & Co. v. Bear Creek Manors, 735 P.2d 910 (Colo. App. 1986).

Plaintiff is entitled to interest from the time his action accrues. Action for rescission arose when plaintiff amended his complaint and first requested rescission. Prior to that demand, there was no wrongful withholding of the money paid for the house. Wall v. Foster Petroleum Corp., 791 P.2d 1148 (Colo. App. 1989).

No exception for mandamus action. Under this section, the trial court is required to assess interest at the rate of eight percent on any judgment rendered to run from the date of the judgment, and no exception is made for a mandamus action. Denver Ass'n for Retarded Children v. Sch. Dist. No. 1, 188 Colo. 310, 535 P.2d 200 (1975).

Where judgment in favor of plaintiff was affirmed on appeal but case was remanded for a new trial on the issue of damages, and trial court on remand determined damages and entered judgment thereupon, plaintiff was entitled to interest on that amount only from the date the later judgment was entered. Yeager Garden Acres, Inc. v. Summit Const. Co., 32 Colo. App. 242, 513 P.2d 458 (1973).

Prejudgment interest awarded from date of judgment quieting title to disputed property. Prejudgment interest on royalties from oil and gas extraction from disputed property awarded only from the date plaintiff won judgment quieting title in the property and not from earlier date on which plaintiff asserted an ownership claim to the property. Royalty payments could not be considered to be wrongfully withheld until plaintiff's ownership of the property was no longer in dispute. Beaver Creek Ranch v. Gordman Leverich Ltd., 226 P.3d 1155 (Colo. App. 2009).

Insurer paid interest from date judgment entered to date liability was paid. An insurer was obligated to pay all interest accruing on a judgment from the date of its entry to the date on which it paid the amount of its liability under the policy. Houser v. Eckhardt, 35 Colo. App. 155, 532 P.2d 54 (1974), aff'd, 191 Colo. 189, 552 P.2d 308 (1976).

To award a buyer the additional cost of cover as well as the entire benefit realized by the seller would be duplicative in the calculation of moratory interest in the case of a seller's wrongful withholding of property by breaching a sales contract. Great W. Sugar Co. v. KN Energy, Inc., 778 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1989).

Section requires that prejudgment interest be awarded where money is wrongfully withheld. Because rescission is an equitable remedy, the court has discretion is determining the appropriate relief for the parties and such an award of prejudgment interest must be incorporated in the court's assessment of the equities. Wall v. Foster Petroleum Corp., 791 P.2d 1148 (Colo. App. 1989).

Fact that amount due is disputed or unclear does not render a claim unliquidated for purposes of awarding interest under subsection (4). Montgomery Ward & Co. v. State, Dept. of Rev., 675 P.2d 318 (Colo. App. 1983).

Interest awarded on judgment against natural gas pipeline company for refusal to honor contract to sell natural gas to buyer at a reduced, industrial rate may properly be calculated using "gas husbanding model", the equation being seller's return on rate base, plus seller's excess profits, minus seller's operating profit credit. Great W. Sugar Co. v. KN Energy, Inc., 778 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1989).

To the extent that an award made under the statute provides double compensation for the same wrong, it cannot stand. The wording and legislative history of subsection (1)(a) and the commitment to fairness underlying the doctrine of moratory interest leads to the conclusion that the statute may not be used to impose double or other punitive damages. Great W. Sugar Co. v. KN Energy, Inc., 778 P.2d 272 (Colo. App. 1989).

Interest from the time the action accrues is proper in a case where demand for payment is not an element of the plaintiff's case. Deacon v. Am. Plant Food Corp., 782 P.2d 861 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Stone's Farm Supply, Inc. v. Deacon, 805 P.2d 1109 (Colo. 1991).

Wife is entitled to statutory interest from date of closing on her share of proceeds from home sale ordered as part of property division in a marital dissolution action. Such interest is proper to enforce the judgment. In re Schutte, 721 P.2d 160 (Colo. App. 1986); In re Connell, 831 P.2d 913 (Colo. App. 1992).

Without proof of defendant's gain, the statutory rate of interest applies. Ballow v. PHICO Ins. Co., 878 P.2d 672 (Colo. 1994).

Standard applied in Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Farm Credit Bank of Wichita, 226 F.3d 1138 (10th Cir. 2000).

When jury's award does not distinguish between past and future wages, it still may be possible to apportion award based on a number of available formulas. Shannon v. Colo. Sch. of Mines, 847 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1992).

Date when a claim accrues for statute of limitations purposes is independent from the date of the wrongful withholding for the purpose of awarding interest. Eads v. Dearing, 874 P.2d 474 (Colo. App. 1993; Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 281 F. Supp. 2d 1252 (D. Colo. 2003), aff'd, 431 F.3d 1268 (10th Cir. 2005).

Where trial court found that wrongful withholding occurred in 1980, even though plaintiff did not discover the wrongful withholding until 1989, court correctly awarded interest from 1980. Eads v. Dearing, 874 P.2d 474 (Colo. App. 1993).

District court erred in awarding prejudgment interest from the time of the initial breach of express warranty since there were consequential damages that had not yet been incurred. Court should calculate prejudgment interest on each portion of the damages from the time each element of consequential damages was incurred. Pegasus Helicopters, Inc. v. United Technologies Corp., 35 F.3d 507 (10th Cir. 1994).

Prejudgment interest awarded from date of breach of fiduciary duty, not date royalties would have been received. Vento v. Colo. Nat'l Bank-Pueblo, 907 P.2d 642 (Colo. App. 1995).

Prejudgement interest awarded from date embezzlement occurred, not the date employees discovered the financial problems caused by the embezzlement or date of discovery of negligence. Porter Constr. Servs. v. Ehrhardt, Keefe, Steiner, and Hottman, P.C., 131 P.3d 1115 (Colo. App. 2005).

Prejudgment interest awarded from the date the money is wrongfully withheld or becomes due. In determining when payment is wrongfully withheld, formal demand or circumstances demonstrating a reasonable expectation of payment render the nonpayment wrongful. Paratransit Risk Retention Group Ins. Co. v. Kamins, 160 P.3d 307 (Colo. App. 2007).

Under subsection (1)(b), wrongful withholding of replacement cost damages occurs when plaintiff actually undertakes replacement expenditures. Prejudgment interest therefore begins to accrue on that date and not on the earlier date when the wrong subsequently remedied by the replacement expenditures actually occurred. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Holmes, 193 P.3d 821 (Colo. 2008); Ferrellgas, Inc. v. Yeiser, 247 P.3d 1022 (Colo. 2011).

Interest payable for fraudulently obtained food stamps accrues from the time the state reimburses the federal government for the fraudulently obtained food stamps. Interest should accrue only from the time of the actual injury and the state suffers actual loss only when it reimburses the federal government. Valenzuela v. People, 893 P.2d 97 (Colo. 1995).

In breach of contract cases, action accrues when breach and damages occur, and prejudgment interest accrues from the time of the breach, not from the entry of judgment. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Adams County v. City & County of Denver, 40 P.3d 25 (Colo. App. 2001).

5-12-103. Greater rate may be stipulated. (1) The parties to any bond, bill, promissory note, or other instrument of writing may stipulate therein for the payment of a greater or higher rate of interest than eight percent per annum, but not exceeding forty-five percent per annum, and any such stipulation may be enforced in any court of competent jurisdiction in the state, except as otherwise provided in articles 1 to 6 of this title. The rate of interest shall be deemed to be excessive of the limit under this section only if it could have been determined at the time of the stipulation by mathematical computation that such rate would exceed an annual rate of forty-five percent when the rate of interest was calculated on the unpaid balances of the debt on the assumption that the debt is to be paid according to its terms and will not be paid before the end of the agreed term.

(2) The term "interest" as used in this section means the sum of all charges payable directly or indirectly by a debtor and imposed directly or indirectly by a lender as an incident to or as a condition of the extension of credit to the debtor, whether paid or payable by the debtor, the lender, or any other person on behalf of the debtor to the lender or to a third party.

(3) The public policy of this state does not limit or prohibit contracting, agreeing, or stipulating in advance for the payment of interest on interest or compound interest.

(4) No law or public policy of this state limiting interest on interest, the adding of deferred interest to principal, or the compounding of interest shall apply to any promissory note secured by any mortgage or deed of trust or to one secured by a mortgage or deed of trust where periodic disbursement of part of the loan proceeds is made by a lender over a period of time as established by the mortgage or deed of trust, or over an expressed period of time, or ending with the death of the debtor, including, but not limited to, promissory notes secured by mortgages or deeds of trust having provisions for adding deferred interest to principal or otherwise providing for the charging of interest on interest.

(5) This section shall not apply to a commercial credit plan as defined in section 5-12-107 (8) and extensions of credit made pursuant thereto, unless the bond, bill, promissory note, instrument, or other written agreement evidencing the plan expressly states that it is subject to this section.

COLORADO COMMENT

This section was amended to correspond to the usury limitations of Section 18-15-104 of the Colorado Criminal Code. This section now provides for a ceiling on interest of forty-five percent. (This same ceiling was added to Section 5-3-605.)

Annotator's note. Since § 5-12-103 is similar to repealed § 73-1-3, C.R.S. 1963, § 73-1-3, CRS 53, CSA, C. 88, § 3, and laws antecedent to CSA, C. 88, § 3, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

There is no question regarding the authority of the general assembly to make the provision in this section that a rate of interest is a matter of contract which parties may evidence in writing. Wigton v. Elliott, 49 Colo. 115, 111 P. 713 (1910).

This section does not operate to preclude the general assembly from subsequently restricting interest rates by legislation. Waddell v. Traylor, 99 Colo. 576, 64 P.2d 1273 (1937).

Parties are at liberty under this section to stipulate for such rate of interest as they may see fit. McKay's Estate v. Belknap Sav. Bank, 27 Colo. 50, 59 P. 745 (1899).

National banks in Colorado have equal rights with others to collect interest upon loans at any agreed rate. Rockwell v. Farmers' Nat'l Bank, 4 Colo. App. 562, 36 P. 905 (1894).

National banks may make the rate dependent upon the happening of a contingency, if they so elect. McKay's Estate v. Belknap Sav. Bank, 27 Colo. 50, 59 P. 745 (1899).

Contingent amounts of interest cannot be considered when determining whether a contractual rate of interest is usurious. Beeler v. H & R Block of Colo., Inc., 487 P.2d 569 (1971); Uniwest Mortgage Co. v. Dadecor Condominiums, Inc., 877 F.2d 431 (5th Cir. 1989).

Nonpayment of principal or interest when due. It is competent for the parties to agree upon an increased rate contingent upon nonpayment of either principal or interest when due. McKay's Estate v. Belknap Sav. Bank, 27 Colo. 50, 59 P. 745 (1899); In Re Wood Family Interests, Ltd., 135 Bankr. 407 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1989).

Usurious interest rate enforceable at maximum allowable rate. If a note has a higher interest rate than is allowed by this section, it will be invalid to the extent that the interest rate is usurious, but it will still be enforced at the maximum allowable rate. Becker v. Marketing & Research Consultants, Inc., 526 F. Supp. 166 (D. Colo. 1981); Brown v. Fenner, 757 P.2d 184 (Colo. App. 1988); Concord Realty v. Cont'l Funding, 776 P.2d 1114 (Colo. 1989).

Parties to contract are free to set rate of interest by mutual agreement. Martinez v. Cont'l Entrs., 730 P.2d 308 (Colo. 1986).

The parties to a note unquestionably have the right to stipulate that a larger rate should be paid upon the failure to pay a smaller one when due; such stipulation may be enforced in any court of competent jurisdiction. McKay's Estate v. Belknap Sav. Bank, 27 Colo. 50, 59 P. 745 (1899); In Re Wood Family Interests, Ltd., 135 Bankr. 407 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1989).

Stipulation in a promissory note of an increased rate of interest after maturity is not a penalty. Godsmark v. Bennett's Estate, 52 Colo. 198, 120 P. 151 (1912).

Rather, a stipulation for interest after maturity of a note is regarded as damages for breach of contract. Browne v. Steck, 2 Colo. 70 (1873).

The parties may stipulate that a larger rate be paid so long as the rate bears a reasonable relation to the current rate of interest. Browne v. Steck, 2 Colo. 70 (1873).

The rate of interest agreed upon in writing must be allowed according to the terms of an agreement until the entry of judgment. McKay's Estate v. Belknap Sav. Bank, 27 Colo. 50, 59 P. 745 (1899).

When, at the place of contract, the rate of interest differs from that of the place of payment, the parties may stipulate for either rate, and the contract will govern, the parties having the right of election as to the law of which place their contract is to be governed. McKay's Estate v. Belknap Sav. Bank, 27 Colo. 50, 59 P. 745 (1899).

Where no evidence is introduced of the current rate of interest, the party's stipulation may be accepted. Browne v. Steck, 2 Colo. 70 (1873).

If rate specified greatly exceeds the real value of money it will be disallowed as a penalty. Under this section the parties may determine the value of the use of money before it falls due, and their estimate of its value, after it falls due, is the true measure of damages, until it is shown to be incorrect. Since the law seeks to indemnify the plaintiff for the loss he has suffered by the breach of contract, the rate fixed by the parties affords a just rule of indemnity. If, however, the rate of interest specified in the contract greatly exceeds the real value of the money, it is a penalty for the nonpayment of the principal sum, rather than a just recompense for detaining it, and will not be allowed. Browne v. Steck, 2 Colo. 70 (1873).

Such a provision is waived by the acceptance of interest at the original rate after maturity. Godsmark v. Bennett's Estate, 52 Colo. 198, 120 P. 151 (1912).

Furthermore, when interest becomes due it represents an indebtedness which the interested parties may then make the subject of a new contract by stipulating in writing when and how it shall be paid and what rate of interest it shall bear until paid, inasmuch as after interest becomes due, it may, by agreement, be turned into principal and bear interest. Hochmark v. Richler, 16 Colo. 263, 26 P. 818 (1891); Wigton v. Elliott, 49 Colo. 115, 111 P. 713 (1910), distinguishing Denver Brick & Mfg. Co. v. McAllister, 6 Colo. 261 (1882).

Such an arrangement is not compounding interest. Wigton v. Elliott, 49 Colo. 115, 111 P.713 (1910).

Compound interest contracted for in advance is, in general, not recoverable. Hochmark v. Richler, 16 Colo. 263, 26 P. 818 (1891).

Such a contract is per se unlawful. Hochmark v. Richler, 16 Colo. 263, 26 P. 818 (1891).

The fact that compound interest is provided for does not, however, render the entire contract usurious and void; rather upon grounds of public policy, simply decline to enforce payment of the interest upon interest. Hochmark v. Richler, 16 Colo. 263, 26 P. 818 (1891).

A promise for such made after interest has accrued is legal. A promise to pay compound interest made after instead of before the interest to be compounded has accrued is legal and enforceable. Hochmark v. Richler, 16 Colo. 263, 26 P. 818 (1891).

Though compound interest is allowable only when there is a definite agreement for such. Tarabino Real Estate Co. v. Tarabino, 109 Colo. 425, 126 P.2d 859 (1942).

Moreover, "instrument of writing" must express mutuality of contract. This section clearly implies that the "instrument of writing" referred to must be one expressing mutuality of contract. Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

A will is not within section. A will does not rest on contract relations, and is therefore not an instrument into which a stipulation between the parties for interest, as contemplated by this section, could be injected. Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

Hence, no interest is allowed on legacies. Since there is nothing in this section, either express or implied, providing for interest on legacies, none is allowable. Cobb v. Stratton's Estate, 56 Colo. 278, 138 P. 35 (1914).

Late charges provided for in connection with a nonconsumer credit arrangement were reasonable as a matter of law and enforceable where charges constituted a "default interest" charge for debtor's failure to pay off the note according to its terms and the rate per annum was less than 45%. Dikeou v. Dikeou, 928 P.2d 1286 (Colo. 1996).

5-12-104. Warrants to bear six percent. County orders and warrants, town and city and school orders and warrants, and other like evidences or certificates of municipal indebtedness, shall bear interest at the rate of six percent per annum from the date of the presentation thereof for payment at the treasury where the same may be payable, until there is money in the treasury for the payment thereof, except when otherwise specially provided by law. Every county treasurer, town treasurer, and city treasurer to whom any such county, town, city, or school order or warrant is presented for payment, and who shall not have on hand the funds to pay the same, shall endorse thereon the rate of interest said order or warrant will draw, and the date of such presentation, and subscribe such endorsement with his official signature; however, all such orders and warrants may be made to bear a lower rate of interest than above specified, by special agreement between such counties, towns, and cities issuing the same, and the person to whom such orders or warrants are issued.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 5-12-104 is similar to repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 88, § 4, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The evident intent of this section is first, to place a uniform rate of interest upon a specific class of obligations, and second, to make it impossible for county, town, city, or school district officials to agree, as otherwise under § 5-12-103 they might do, to pay a higher rate of interest upon such securities than that fixed by statute. That it was the intention of the general assembly to preclude the recovery of interest, except by express agreement, on all other county, city, town, or school district indebtedness is clear. City of Golden v. W. Lumber & Pole Co., 60 Colo. 382, 154 P. 95 (1916).

This section in no manner limits, qualifies, or changes the effect and purpose of § 5-12-102, except as to a particular class of securities; by that section creditors are entitled to interest on claims therein mentioned at the rate of six percent per annum from all debtors. The conclusion reached in Bd. of Comm'rs v. Wheeler, 39 Colo. 207, 89 P. 50 (1907), which appears to be contra, therefore, has no bearing upon the question of the liability of towns and cities for interest. Any other holding would have the effect to exempt cities and towns from the payment of interest on judgments against them. Section 5-12-104 plainly applies to cities and towns, and gives a creditor the right to recover interest upon claims growing out of business transactions with them, whenever, under like circumstances, he might lawfully do so from a private corporation or individual. City of Golden v. W. Lumber & Pole Co., 60 Colo. 382, 154 P. 95 (1916).

Thus, towns and cities in business transactions are liable for interest the same as private corporations or individuals. City of Golden v. Western Lumber & Pole Co., 60 Colo. 382, 154 P. 95 (1916), distinguishing Bd. of Comm'rs v. Wheeler, 39 Colo. 207, 89 P. 50 (1907) (applied to a county as an involuntary organization).

So counties are liable for interest on interest coupons the same as individuals. Since the evident purpose of this section is to place counties practically upon the same plane as individuals with respect to the payment of interest upon their written evidences of indebtedness, with a limitation as to rate, counties are liable for interest on interest coupons the same as individuals. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Linn, 29 Colo. 446, 68 P. 839 (1902).

Municipal corporation not liable for interest for services rendered. Under this section municipal corporations cannot in any manner be made liable for or legally pay interest upon an account for services rendered. City of Colo. Springs v. Coray, 25 Colo. App. 460, 139 P. 1031 (1913).

5-12-105. Interest upon foreclosure. In all cases where real estate shall be sold under execution or by virtue of the foreclosure of any mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien, the indebtedness and costs for which any certificate of purchase may issue shall bear interest at the rate specified in the original instrument.

5-12-106. Rate of interest on judgments which are appealed. (1) Except as provided in section 13-21-101, C.R.S., where there is no written agreement as to the rate of interest, creditors shall receive interest as follows:

(a) If a judgment for money in a civil case is appealed by a judgment debtor and the judgment is affirmed, interest, as set out in subsections (2) and (3) of this section, shall be payable from the date of entry of judgment in the trial court until satisfaction of the judgment and shall include compounding of interest annually.

(b) If a judgment for money in a civil case is appealed by a judgment debtor and the judgment is modified or reversed with a direction that a judgment for money be entered in the trial court, interest, as set out in subsections (2) and (3) of this section, shall be payable from the date a judgment was first entered in the trial court until the judgment is satisfied and shall include compounding of interest annually. This interest shall be payable on the amount of the final judgment.

(2) (a) The rate of interest shall be certified on each January 1 by the secretary of state to be two percentage points above the discount rate, which discount rate shall be the rate of interest a commercial bank pays to the federal reserve bank of Kansas City using a government bond or other eligible paper as security, and shall be rounded to the nearest full percent. Such annual rate of interest shall be so established as of December 31, 1982, to become effective January 1, 1983. Thereafter, as of December 31 of each year, the annual rate of interest shall be established in the same manner, to become effective on January 1 of the following year.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection (2), the rate of interest shall be no lower than the percentage authorized in section 5-12-102 (4) (b).

(3) The rate at which interest shall accrue during each year shall be the rate which the secretary of state has certified as the annual interest rate under subsection (2) of this section.

The right to interest, absent an agreement to pay it, is purely statutory, and is limited to those circumstances set forth in the statute. Indian Mountain Metro. Recreation & Park Dist. v. J.P. Campbell & Assoc., 921 P.2d 65 (Colo. App. 1996); Bd. of County Comm'rs of Dolores County v. Shell W. E & P, Inc., 12 P.3d 1219 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where there is no "judgment" entered in a "trial court" to which subsection (1) could apply, a claim for post-judgment interest pursuant to subsection (1) is properly rejected. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Dolores County v. Shell W. E & P, Inc., 12 P.3d 1219 (Colo. App. 2000).

Court cannot divide a single unsatisfied judgment into two or more parts for the purpose of computing interest. Bassett v. Eagle Telecomms., 750 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1987).

Interest is payable upon that portion of the judgment that is ultimately affirmed by the appellate court. Bassett v. Eagle Telecomms., 750 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1987); In re Gutfreund, 148 P.3d 136 (Colo. 2006).

A judgment confirming an arbitration award is enforceable in the same manner as any other judgment. Therefore, the district court did not err in ordering post-judgment interest on the unpaid portion of the judgment. Barrett v. Inv. Mgmt. Consultants, 190 P.3d 800 (Colo. App. 2008).

An appealing judgment debtor must pay post-judgment interest when the appeal is affirmed and the funds are inaccessible to the creditor; further, there is no requirement that interest must be specifically requested. This section makes no exception for attorney fees; post-judgment interest on attorney fees is required when the judgment is affirmed on appeal. Furthermore, it is of no import whether the judgment award for attorney fees is made directly to the attorney or to the party. In re Gutfreund, 148 P.3d 136 (Colo. 2006).

While the statute does not define "satisfaction", a party satisfies a debt when the creditor has been paid and the debtor is no longer obligated to pay that portion of the amount due. Thus, if debtor deposits the funds in a court registry, the judgment is not satisfied until the funds are accessible to the creditor, and only at that point does the obligation to pay interest terminate. In re Gutfreund, 148 P.3d 136 (Colo. 2006).

Appeal of judgment debtor is considered a single unsuccessful appeal for purposes of this section where judgment debtor insurer prevailed on appeal at the court of appeals but trial court's judgment was subsequently reinstated by the supreme court on appeal by the insured. Accordingly, insurer was required to pay post-judgment interest from the date of the original judgment in the trial court. Peterman v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 8 P.3d 549 (Colo. App. 2000).

Because the trial court's failure to include an award of post-judgment interest was due to an oversight, it could amend the judgment at any time to add the award. Jennings v. Ibarra, 921 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1996).

An order entered by the public utilities commission is equivalent to a judgment by a trial court, and the interest on the award accrues from the date of entry of the commission order not the judgment of the district court. Lake Durango Water Co. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 67 P.3d 12 (Colo. 2003).

This section does not apply to a situation covered by the prompt payment statute. To the extent there is a conflict, the more specific prompt payment statute prevails over this section. New Design Constr. Co. v. Hamon Contractors, Inc., 215 P.3d 1163 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applied in Weston v. Mincomp Corp., 698 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1985).

5-12-107. Commercial credit plans - definitions. (1) Any creditor may offer and extend credit to the debtor under a commercial credit plan. Without limitation, credit may be extended under a commercial credit plan by the creditor's acquisition of obligations including, without limitation, obligations arising out of the honoring by a seller or another person of a credit device made available to the debtor under a commercial credit plan. A creditor may take such security in connection with a commercial credit plan as may be acceptable to the creditor and may, if the agreement governing the commercial credit plan allows, establish separate accounts for different types of purchases or loans, or both, and impose different terms for credit extended with respect to each account.

(2) (a) A creditor may charge and collect periodic interest under a commercial credit plan on the outstanding unpaid indebtedness at a periodic percentage rate or rates not exceeding forty-five percent per annum. If the applicable periodic percentage rate under the agreement governing the plan is other than daily, periodic interest may be calculated on an amount not in excess of the average outstanding unpaid indebtedness for the applicable billing period. If the applicable periodic percentage rate under the agreement governing the plan is daily, periodic interest may be calculated for each day in the billing period on an amount not in excess of either:

(I) The outstanding unpaid indebtedness on that day; or

(II) The average outstanding unpaid indebtedness for the applicable billing period. If the applicable periodic percentage rate under the agreement governing the plan is monthly, a billing period shall be deemed to be a month or monthly if the last day of each billing period is on the same day of each month or does not vary by more than four days therefrom.

(b) The rate limitation established by this subsection (2) for periodic interest shall not apply to the additional interest charges authorized by subsection (3) of this section regardless of whether such additional interest charges are imposed in addition to or in lieu of periodic interest.

(3) (a) In addition to or in lieu of interest at a periodic rate or rates, a creditor may, if the agreement governing the commercial credit plan so provides, either initially or pursuant to a change in the terms of the agreement made in the manner prescribed by subsection (5) of this section, charge and collect, in such manner, form, percentages, or amounts as the agreement governing the plan may provide, one or more of the following fees or charges:

(I) A fee for participation in the commercial credit plan, whether assessed on an annual or other periodic basis;

(II) A transaction charge for each separate purchase or loan under the plan;

(III) An automated teller machine charge or similar electronic or interchange fee or charge;

(IV) A minimum charge for each scheduled billing period under the commercial credit plan during any portion of which there is an outstanding unpaid indebtedness;

(V) A late payment charge for each required payment not made on or before its scheduled due date;

(VI) Fees for services rendered or for reimbursement of expenses incurred by the creditor or other persons in connection with the commercial credit plan, or other fees incidental to the application, opening, administration, maintenance, or termination of a commercial credit plan;

(VII) Returned payment charges;

(VIII) Documentary evidence charges including without limitation charges for furnishing copies of sales slips, invoices, monthly statements, or other documents; and

(IX) Any similar fees or charges provided for in the agreement governing the commercial credit plan, whether initially or pursuant to a change in the terms of the agreement made in the manner prescribed by subsection (5) of this section; except that in no event shall this authorization to charge and collect any similar fees or charges be construed to authorize the imposition of periodic interest on the outstanding unpaid indebtedness in addition to the periodic interest authorized by subsection (2) of this section.

(b) Notwithstanding the fact that they are not subject to the rate limitation established by subsection (2) of this section for periodic interest, all of the fees and charges permitted by this subsection (3) are interest.

(4) The agreement governing a commercial credit plan may provide for the payment by the debtor of reasonable attorney's fees of the creditor if the account of the debtor is referred for collection to an attorney not a salaried employee of the creditor. The agreement also may provide for the payment by the debtor of all court and other collection costs actually incurred by the debtor.

(5) (a) Upon written notice furnished at least fifteen days prior to the effective date of the change, a creditor may change the terms of the agreement governing the commercial credit plan including, without limitation, periodic interest and additional interest charges so long as the debtor does not, prior to the effective date of the change set forth in the notice, furnish written notice to the creditor that the debtor does not agree to abide by the change. The change may be made effective with respect to existing balances if so provided in the written notice.

(b) Upon receipt by the creditor of a timely written notice stating that the debtor does not agree to abide by the change, the debtor shall have the remainder of the time under the existing terms in which to pay all sums owed to the creditor as of the effective date of the change set forth in the notice. If there is an authorized charge to the account on or after the effective date of the change set forth in the notice, the debtor shall be deemed to have accepted the new terms even if the debtor previously submitted to the creditor a timely written notice stating that the debtor does not agree to abide by the change.

(6) All terms, conditions, and other provisions of and relating to a commercial credit plan as contained in this section or in the agreement governing such plan, other than those fees and charges that are interest under this section, shall be and hereby are deemed to be material to the determination of interest applicable to a commercial credit plan under Colorado law, under the most favored lender doctrine, and under the "National Bank Act", 12 U.S.C. sec. 85 or section 521, 522, or 523 of the "Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980", 12 U.S.C. secs. 1463 (g), 1785 (g), and 1831d.

(7) A commercial credit plan established by a creditor and the extensions of credit made pursuant thereto shall be governed by Colorado law. Unless the agreement governing the commercial credit plan expressly states that it is subject to another law of this state, a commercial credit plan shall be governed exclusively by this section and shall not be subject to any other law of this state that otherwise would apply to the commercial credit plan including, but not limited to, laws limiting the amount or duration of credit or the rate or amount of interest or other charges that may be charged, taken, collected, received, or reserved.

(8) As used in this section:

(a) "Average outstanding unpaid indebtedness" means the amount determined by dividing the total of the amounts of the outstanding unpaid indebtedness for each day in the applicable billing period by the number of days in the billing period.

(b) "Commercial credit plan" or "plan" means a plan contemplating the extension of credit pursuant to an account governed by an agreement between a creditor and a debtor, whether or not providing for a security interest, pursuant to which:

(I) A creditor permits the debtor and, if allowed by a creditor, persons acting on behalf of or with authorization from the debtor, from time to time to make purchases on credit or obtain loans, or both, whether or not by use of a credit device;

(II) The purchases on credit are made or the loans are obtained primarily for business, commercial, investment, or agricultural purposes;

(III) The indebtedness of the debtor arising from such purchases or loans, or both, and other charges provided for in this section are debited to the account; and

(IV) (A) The debtor undertakes an obligation to pay the outstanding unpaid indebtedness at one time; or

(B) The debtor has the privilege of paying the outstanding unpaid indebtedness in one or more installments.

(c) "Credit" means the right granted by a creditor to the debtor to defer payment of debt or to incur debt and defer its payment.

(d) "Credit device" means any card, check, identification code, account number, or other means of identification contemplated by the agreement governing the plan.

(e) "Creditor" means any seller or any lender located or maintaining a place of business in this state that enters into a commercial credit plan agreement with a debtor wherever located, including, without limitation, sellers of goods or services, small loan companies, licensed lenders, industrial banks, commercial banks and trust companies, savings and loan associations, and savings banks. The term "creditor" includes any transferee, whether such transferee acquires its interest by assignment or otherwise.

(f) "Debtor" means any natural person or individual or any corporation, partnership, cooperative, association, government or governmental subdivision or agency, trust, estate, or other entity.

(g) "Interest" includes both periodic interest authorized by subsection (2) of this section and additional interest charges authorized by subsection (3) of this section.

(h) "Loans" means cash advances or loans to be paid to or for the account of the debtor.

(i) "Outstanding unpaid indebtedness" means on any day an amount not in excess of the total amount of purchases, loans, and other debits charged to the debtor's account under the plan that is outstanding and unpaid at the end of the day, after adding the aggregate amount of any new purchases, loans, and other debits charged to the account as of that day, including, without limitation, the amount of any periodic interest, additional interest charges, and other charges permitted by this section that have accrued, or been charged, to the account as of that day, and deducting the aggregate amount of any payments and other credits applied to that indebtedness as of that day.

(j) "Purchases" means payment obligations for property of whatever nature, real or personal, tangible or intangible, and payment obligations for services including, without limitation, insurance, licenses, taxes, official fees, fines, private or governmental obligations, or any other thing of value.

The general assembly acted well within the police power of the state when it enacted the Colorado Consumer Protection Act. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

It is in the public interest to invoke the state's police power to prevent the use of methods that have a tendency or capacity to attract customers through deceptive trade practices, and the Colorado Consumer Protection Act, an out-growth of this conclusion, as such cannot be overturned. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

Hence, a challenging party has a heavy burden to overcome with respect to this act's alleged unconstitutionality, especially in light of its particular subject matter. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

A court has an equally certain duty to construe the act in such a way that it is not void for vagueness whenever a reasonable and practical construction can be given to its language. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

Broad legislative purpose of this act is to provide prompt, economical, and readily available remedies against consumer fraud. W. Food Plan, Inc. v. District Court, 198 Colo. 251, 598 P.2d 1038 (1979).

"Public impact" necessary to invoke protections of act. In a case involving life insurance, where challenged conduct of insurer was private in nature, policyholder was a sophisticated businessman with the aid of legal counsel, and there was insufficient evidence of impact on other policyholders, the treble damages provisions of the Colorado Consumer Protection Act were held not to apply. Coors v. Sec. Life of Denver Ins. Co., 112 P.3d 59 (Colo. 2005).

A private cause of action by an insured against an insurer under this act is not preempted by the Colorado unfair competition - deceptive practices act §§ 10-3-1101 to 10-3-1114. Showpiece Homes Corp. v. Assurance Co. of Am., 38 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2001).

This act is remedial legislation and amendment of remedies therein does not affect preexisting rights or obligations. Therefore, amended version of act containing enhanced civil enforcement provisions could be applied to conduct which occurred prior to amendments. Robinson v. Lynmar Racquet Club, Inc., 851 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

6-1-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Advertisement" includes the attempt by publication, dissemination, solicitation, or circulation, visual, oral, or written, to induce directly or indirectly any person to enter into any obligation or to acquire any title or interest in any property.

(2) "Article" means a product as distinguished from a trademark, label, or distinctive dress in packaging.

(2.5) "Business day" means any calendar day except Sunday, New Year's day, the third Monday in January observed as the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Washington-Lincoln day, Memorial day, Independence day, Labor day, Columbus day, Veterans' day, Thanksgiving, and Christmas.

(2.7) "Buyers' club" means any person engaged in advertising or selling memberships that provide an exclusive right to members to purchase goods, food, services, or property at purported discount prices.

(3) "Certification mark" means a mark used in connection with the goods or services of a person other than the certifier to indicate geographic origin, material, mode of manufacture, quality, accuracy, or other characteristics of the goods or services or to indicate that the work or labor on the goods or services was performed by members of a union or other organization.

(4) "Collective mark" means a mark used by members of a cooperative, association, or other collective group or organization to identify goods or services and distinguish them from those of others, or to indicate membership in the collective group or organization.

(4.1) "Dance studio" means any person engaged in the advertisement or sale of dance studio services.

(4.2) "Dance studio services" means instruction, training, or assistance in dancing; the use of dance studio facilities; membership in any group, club, or association formed by a dance studio; and participation in dance competitions, dance showcases, trips, tours, parties, and other organized events and related travel arrangements.

(4.3) "Discount health plan" means a program evidenced by a membership agreement, contract, card, certificate, device, or mechanism, which offers health care services, as defined in section 10-16-102 (22), C.R.S., or related products including, but not limited to, prescription drugs and medical equipment, at purported discounted rates from health care providers advertised as participating in the program. A "discount health plan" does not include a program in which a participating provider has agreed, as a condition of his or her participation in the program, to negotiate the prices to be charged for his or her services directly with consumers in the program and the provider is not required to offer discounted prices for his or her services as part of the program.

(4.4) "Elderly person" means a person sixty years of age or older.

(4.5) "Food" means any raw, cooked, or processed edible substance, beverage, or ingredient used or intended for use or for sale in whole or part for human consumption.

(4.6) "Health club" means an establishment which provides health club services or facilities which purport to improve or maintain the user's physical condition or appearance through exercise. The term may include, but shall not be limited to, a spa, exercise club, exercise gym, health studio, or playing courts. The term shall not apply to any of the following:

(a) Any establishment operated by a nonprofit organization or public or private school, college, or university;

(b) Any establishment operated by the federal government, the state of Colorado, or any of the state's political subdivisions;

(c) Any establishment which does not provide health club services or facilities as its primary purpose or business; or

(d) Health care facilities licensed or certified by the department of public health and environment pursuant to its authority under section 25-1.5-103, C.R.S.

(4.7) "Health club facilities" means equipment, physical structures, and other tangible property utilized by a health club to conduct its business. The term may include, but shall not be limited to, saunas, whirlpool baths, gymnasiums, running tracks, playing courts, swimming pools, shower areas, and exercise equipment.

(4.8) "Health club services" means services, privileges, or rights offered for sale or provided by a health club.

(4.9) "Manufactured home" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 42-1-102 (106) (b), C.R.S.

(5) "Mark" means a word, name, symbol, device, or any combination thereof in any form or arrangement.

(5.5) "Motor vehicle" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 12-6-102 (12), C.R.S.

(6) "Person" means an individual, corporation, business trust, estate, trust, partnership, unincorporated association, or two or more thereof having a joint or common interest, or any other legal or commercial entity.

(7) "Promoting a pyramid promotional scheme" means inducing one or more other persons to become participants, or attempting to so induce, or assisting another in promoting a pyramid promotional scheme by means of references or otherwise.

(8) "Property" means any real or personal property, or both real and personal property, intangible property, or services.

(9) "Pyramid promotional scheme" means any program utilizing a pyramid or chain process by which a participant in the program gives a valuable consideration in excess of fifty dollars for the opportunity or right to receive compensation or other things of value in return for inducing other persons to become participants for the purpose of gaining new participants in the program. Ordinary sales of goods or services to persons who are not purchasing in order to participate in such a scheme are not within this definition.

(10) "Sale" means any sale, offer for sale, or attempt to sell any real or personal property for any consideration.

(11) "Service mark" means a mark used by a person to identify services and to distinguish them from the services of others.

(11.2) Repealed.

(11.5) "Time share" means a time share estate, as defined in section 38-33-110 (5), C.R.S., a time share use, as defined in section 12-61-401 (4), C.R.S., or any campground or recreational membership which does not constitute the transfer of an interest in real property.

(12) "Trademark" means a mark used by a person to identify goods and to distinguish them from the goods of others.

(13) "Trade name" means a word, name, symbol, device, or any combination thereof in any form or arrangement used by a person to identify his business, vocation, or occupation, and to distinguish it from the business, vocation, or occupation of others.

(13.5) "Unavoidable delay" means inclement weather and other events outside the control of the buyer or seller.

(14) "Used motor vehicle" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 42-6-201 (8), C.R.S.

The Colorado general assembly omitted the definition of "advertise", recognizing that definitions in statutes should be limited to the fewest number of words and phrases possible, and that there is no need for a redefinition of terms. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

So meaning of "advertise" determined by reference to "advertisement". Statutes must be construed as a whole, and the several parts of a statute reflect light upon each other, so in this section the meaning of "advertise" can and must be determined by reference to the definition of "advertisement". People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

For the word "advertise" is but the verbal form of the noun "advertisement", so what the statutory definition of the noun encompasses must by common sense apply to the verbal form of the noun when used in the same statute. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

Advertisement or sale of real property covered. Read together, the definitions in subsections (1), (8) and (10) indicate an intent by the general assembly to extend the coverage of the Consumer Protection Act to transactions involving the advertisement or sale of real property. People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Alpert Corp., 660 P.2d 1295 (Colo. App. 1982).

Similarly, although the Colorado Consumer Protection Act does not specifically define "disparagement" anywhere, the word has such a common meaning that to define it would be an exercise in redundancy, since legal literature contains many instances of the use of the word "disparagement" when dealing with forbidden trade practices. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

If a claim by a corporation is within the zone of interests of the Colorado Consumer Protection Act, a corporation is a person entitled to bring a claim under the Act. Fiberglass Component Prod. v. Reichhold Chems., Inc., 983 F. Supp. 948 (D. Colo. 1997).

The definition of "person" is broad enough to encompass insurance companies. Thus, by its own terms, the Colorado Consumer Protection Act applies to the acts or practices of insurance companies. Showpiece Homes Corp. v. Assurance Co. of Am., 38 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2001).

"Pyramid promotional scheme". A pyramid sales scheme is no less a security because of the sale of distributorships where what, in essence, was being offered was an opportunity to contribute money and to share in the profits of an enterprise managed and owned by Master Industries. Sauer v. Hays, 36 Colo. App. 190, 539 P.2d 1343 (1975).

Although pyramid promotional schemes as defined in subsection (9) are not specifically included within the securities act, that statutory prohibition is indicative of the attitude of the general assembly to schemes of that nature. Sauer v. Hays, 36 Colo. App. 190, 539 P.2d 1343 (1975).

Promoters of pyramid promotional plans must make full, complete, and fair disclosure, through the registration statement, of the perils involved before their prospects invest their money. Sauer v. Hays, 36 Colo. App. 190, 539 P.2d 1343 (1975).

A pyramid promotional scheme involved an "investment contract", a "common enterprise" whereby the "fortunes of the investors" were "inextricably tied" and dependent upon the efforts and success of the corporation in obtaining and recruiting new prospects for its seminars and in consummating sales, and constituted the sale of securities in violation of Colorado's securities act. Sauer v. Hays, 36 Colo. App. 190, 539 P.2d 1343 (1975).

6-1-103. Attorney general and district attorneys concurrently responsible for enforcement. The attorney general and the district attorneys of the several judicial districts of this state are concurrently responsible for the enforcement of this article. Until the Colorado supreme court adopts a venue provision relating to this article, actions instituted pursuant to this article may be brought in the county where an alleged deceptive trade practice occurred or where any portion of a transaction involving an alleged deceptive trade practice occurred, or in the county where the principal place of business of any defendant is located, or in the county in which any defendant resides.

6-1-105. Deceptive trade practices. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person:

(a) Knowingly passes off goods, services, or property as those of another;

(b) Knowingly makes a false representation as to the source, sponsorship, approval, or certification of goods, services, or property;

(c) Knowingly makes a false representation as to affiliation, connection, or association with or certification by another;

(d) Uses deceptive representations or designations of geographic origin in connection with goods or services;

(e) Knowingly makes a false representation as to the characteristics, ingredients, uses, benefits, alterations, or quantities of goods, food, services, or property or a false representation as to the sponsorship, approval, status, affiliation, or connection of a person therewith;

(f) Represents that goods are original or new if he knows or should know that they are deteriorated, altered, reconditioned, reclaimed, used, or secondhand;

(g) Represents that goods, food, services, or property are of a particular standard, quality, or grade, or that goods are of a particular style or model, if he knows or should know that they are of another;

(h) Disparages the goods, services, property, or business of another by false or misleading representation of fact;

(i) Advertises goods, services, or property with intent not to sell them as advertised;

(j) Advertises goods or services with intent not to supply reasonably expectable public demand, unless the advertisement discloses a limitation of quantity;

(k) Advertises under the guise of obtaining sales personnel when in fact the purpose is to first sell a product or service to the sales personnel applicant;

(l) Makes false or misleading statements of fact concerning the price of goods, services, or property or the reasons for, existence of, or amounts of price reductions;

(m) Fails to deliver to the customer at the time of an installment sale of goods or services a written order, contract, or receipt setting forth the name and address of the seller, the name and address of the organization which he represents, and all of the terms and conditions of the sale, including a description of the goods or services, stated in readable, clear, and unambiguous language;

(n) Employs "bait and switch" advertising, which is advertising accompanied by an effort to sell goods, services, or property other than those advertised or on terms other than those advertised and which is also accompanied by one or more of the following practices:

(I) Refusal to show the goods or property advertised or to offer the services advertised;

(II) Disparagement in any respect of the advertised goods, property, or services or the terms of sale;

(III) Requiring tie-in sales or other undisclosed conditions to be met prior to selling the advertised goods, property, or services;

(IV) Refusal to take orders for the goods, property, or services advertised for delivery within a reasonable time;

(V) Showing or demonstrating defective goods, property, or services which are unusable or impractical for the purposes set forth in the advertisement;

(VI) Accepting a deposit for the goods, property, or services and subsequently switching the purchase order to higher-priced goods, property, or services; or

(VII) Failure to make deliveries of the goods, property, or services within a reasonable time or to make a refund therefor;

(o) Knowingly fails to identify flood-damaged or water-damaged goods as to such damages;

(p) Solicits door-to-door as a seller, unless the seller, within thirty seconds after beginning the conversation, identifies himself or herself, whom he or she represents, and the purpose of the call;

(p.3) to (p.7) Repealed.

(q) Contrives, prepares, sets up, operates, publicizes by means of advertisements, or promotes any pyramid promotional scheme;

(r) Advertises or otherwise represents that goods or services are guaranteed without clearly and conspicuously disclosing the nature and extent of the guarantee, any material conditions or limitations in the guarantee which are imposed by the guarantor, the manner in which the guarantor will perform, and the identity of such guarantor. Any representation that goods or services are "guaranteed for life" or have a "lifetime guarantee" shall contain, in addition to the other requirements of this paragraph (r), a conspicuous disclosure of the meaning of "life" or "lifetime" as used in such representation (whether that of the purchaser, the goods or services, or otherwise). Guarantees shall not be used which under normal conditions could not be practically fulfilled or which are for such a period of time or are otherwise of such a nature as to have the capacity and tendency of misleading purchasers or prospective purchasers into believing that the goods or services so guaranteed have a greater degree of serviceability, durability, or performance capability in actual use than is true in fact. The provisions of this paragraph (r) apply not only to guarantees but also to warranties, to disclaimer of warranties, to purported guarantees and warranties, and to any promise or representation in the nature of a guarantee or warranty; however, such provisions do not apply to any reference to a guarantee in a slogan or advertisement so long as there is no guarantee or warranty of specific merchandise or other property.

(s) and (t) Repealed.

(u) Fails to disclose material information concerning goods, services, or property which information was known at the time of an advertisement or sale if such failure to disclose such information was intended to induce the consumer to enter into a transaction;

(v) Disburses funds in connection with a real estate transaction in violation of section 38-35-125 (2), C.R.S.;

(w) Repealed.

(x) Violates the provisions of sections 6-1-203 to 6-1-205 or of part 7 of this article;

(y) Fails, in connection with any solicitation, oral or written, to clearly and prominently disclose immediately adjacent to or after the description of any item or prize to be received by any person the actual retail value of each item or prize to be awarded. For the purposes of this paragraph (y), the actual retail value is the price at which substantial sales of the item were made in the person's trade area or in the trade area in which the item or prize is to be received within the last ninety days or, if no substantial sales were made, the actual cost of the item or prize to the person on whose behalf any contest or promotion is conducted; except that, whenever the actual cost of the item to the provider is less than fifteen dollars per item, a disclosure that "actual cost to the provider is less than fifteen dollars" may be made in lieu of disclosure of actual cost. The provisions of this paragraph (y) shall not apply to a promotion which is soliciting the sale of a newspaper, magazine, or periodical of general circulation, or to a promotion soliciting the sale of books, records, audio tapes, compact discs, or videos when the promoter allows the purchaser to review the merchandise without obligation for at least seven days and provides a full refund within thirty days after the receipt of the returned merchandise or when a membership club operation is in conformity with rules and regulations of the federal trade commission contained in 16 CFR 425.

(z) Refuses or fails to obtain all governmental licenses or permits required to perform the services or to sell the goods, food, services, or property as agreed to or contracted for with a consumer;

(aa) Fails, in connection with the issuing, making, providing, selling, or offering to sell of a motor vehicle service contract, to comply with the provisions of article 11 of title 42, C.R.S.;

(bb) Repealed.

(cc) Engages in any commercial telephone solicitation which constitutes an unlawful telemarketing practice as defined in section 6-1-304;

(dd) Repealed.

(ee) Intentionally violates any provision of article 10 of title 5, C.R.S.;

(ee.5) to (ff) Repealed.

(gg) Fails to disclose or misrepresents to another person, a secured creditor, or an assignee by whom such person is retained to repossess personal property whether such person is bonded in accordance with section 4-9-629, C.R.S., or fails to file such bond with the attorney general;

(hh) Violates any provision of article 16 of this title;

(ii) Repealed.

(jj) Represents to any person that such person has won or is eligible to win any award, prize, or thing of value as the result of a contest, promotion, sweepstakes, or drawing, or that such person will receive or is eligible to receive free goods, services, or property, unless, at the time of the representation, the person has the present ability to supply such award, prize, or thing of value;

(kk) Violates any provision of article 6 of this title;

(ll) Knowingly makes a false representation as to the results of a radon test or the need for radon mitigation;

(mm) Violates section 35-27-113 (3) (e), (3) (f), or (3) (i), C.R.S.;

(nn) Repealed.

(oo) Fails to comply with the provisions of section 35-80-108 (1) (a), (1) (b), or (2) (f), C.R.S.;

(pp) Violates article 9 of title 42, C.R.S.;

(qq) Repealed.

(rr) Violates the provisions of part 8 of this article;

(ss) Violates any provision of part 33 of article 32 of title 24, C.R.S., that applies to the installation of manufactured homes;

(tt) Violates any provision of part 9 of this article;

(uu) Violates section 38-40-105, C.R.S.;

(vv) Violates section 12-55-110.3, C.R.S.;

(ww) Violates any provision of section 6-1-702;

(xx) Violates any provision of part 11 of this article;

(yy) Violates any provision of part 3 of article 5.5 of title 12, C.R.S.;

(zz) Violates any provision of section 6-1-717;

(aaa) Violates any provision of section 12-61-904.5, C.R.S.;

(bbb) Violates any provision of section 12-61-911, C.R.S.;

(ccc) Violates the provisions of section 6-1-722.

(2) Evidence that a person has engaged in a deceptive trade practice shall be prima facie evidence of intent to injure competitors and to destroy or substantially lessen competition.
(3) The deceptive trade practices listed in this section are in addition to and do not limit the types of unfair trade practices actionable at common law or under other statutes of this state.

To prove a private cause of action under the Colorado Consumer Protection Act (CCPA), a plaintiff must show that: (1) The defendant engaged in an unfair or deceptive trade practice; (2) the challenged practice occurred in the course of defendant's business, vocation, or occupation; (3) it significantly impacts the public as actual or potential consumers of the defendant's goods, services, or property; (4) the plaintiff suffered injury in fact to a legally protected interest; and (5) the challenged practice caused the plaintiff's injury. Rhino Linings USA, Inc. v. Rocky Mountain Rhino Lining, Inc., 62 P.3d 142 (Colo. 2003); Nobody in Particular Presents, Inc. v. Clear Channel Commc'ns, Inc., 311 F. Supp. 2d (D. Colo. 2004).

Whether a private cause of action significantly impacts the public as actual or potential consumers of the defendant's goods, services, or property is a question of fact to be resolved by the trier of fact, and not an issue of law. One Creative Place, LLC v. Jet Ctr. Partners, LLC, 259 P.3d 1287 (Colo. App. 2011).

A deceptive trade practice claim concerning a utility's alleged misrepresentations about the heating content of natural gas is within the public utilities commission's exclusive jurisdiction because the commission explicitly considers the heating content of natural gas when setting rates, and the plaintiff's failure to exhaust its administrative remedies mandates dismissal of the claim. City of Aspen v. Kinder Morgan, Inc., 143 P.3d 1076 (Colo. App. 2006).

The list of deceptive trade practices in this section is not exhaustive and, because deceptive or unfair practices in the business of insurance could clearly injure the public, they are within the purview of the CCPA. Showpiece Homes Corp. v. Assurance Co. of Am., 38 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2001).

"Person", as used in this section, includes business corporations. Heller v. Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund, 809 P.2d 1016 (Colo. App. 1990).

The inclusion of the term "vocation" indicates that professionals may be held accountable under the CCPA. Crowe v. Tull, 126 P.3d 196 (Colo. 2006).

"Knowingly", as used in the CCPA, requires actual knowledge, not constructive knowledge. While some CCPA provisions enumerate violations where the person committing the deceptive trade practice "knows or should know" of the misrepresentation, other provisions require only that the person commits the trade practice "knowingly"; in the latter case, the legislature intended that actual knowledge is required to find a CCPA violation. People ex rel. Suthers v. Mandatory Poster, 260 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2009).

"Passing off", as used in this section, is sufficiently plain in its meaning and does not require a special jury instruction. Heller v. Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund, 809 P.2d 1016 (Colo. App. 1990).

For purposes of showing that a defendant knowingly makes a "false representation", the representation must either induce a party to act, refrain from acting, or have the capacity or tendency to attract customers. Rhino Linings USA, Inc. v. Rocky Mountain Rhino Lining, Inc., 62 P.3d 142 (Colo. 2003).

A plaintiff must establish not only that the defendant engaged in a deceptive trade practice but also that the defendant's challenged practice significantly impacts the public as actual or potential consumers of the defendant's goods, services, or property. To make this determination, relevant considerations include the number of consumers directly affected by the challenged practice, the relative sophistication and bargaining power of the consumers affected by the challenged practice, and evidence that the challenged practice has previously impacted other consumers or has the significant potential to do so in the future. Rhino Linings USA, Inc. v. Rocky Mountain Rhino Lining, Inc., 62 P.3d 142 (Colo. 2003).

Test applied in Colo. Coffee Bean v. Peaberry Coffee, 251 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2010).

Whether a private cause of action significantly impacts the public as actual or potential consumers of the defendant's goods, services, or property is a question of fact to be resolved by the trier of fact, and not an issue of law. One Creative Place, LLC v. Jet Ctr. Partners, LLC, 259 P.3d 1287 (Colo. App. 2011).

Disclosure may eliminate an otherwise deceptive trade practice. Where a company that published posters with incorrect information about Colorado labor and employment laws included a disclosure that the documents were not generated by the government, the trial court did not err in finding that the posters, as a whole, were not deceptive. People ex rel. Suthers v. Mandatory Poster, 260 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2009).

A promise of territorial exclusivity in a dealership agreement did not constitute a false representation absent a finding of fact that the company did not intend to honor its promise at the time the contract was executed. Rhino Linings USA, Inc. v. Rocky Mountain Rhino Lining, Inc., 62 P.3d 142 (Colo. 2003).

False representation as to the use or benefits of services, such as recommending an automotive fuel injector flush as a routine preventive maintenance service, violates this section.

Jones v. Stevinson's Golden Ford, 36 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where a business first advertises a product at a very attractive price in order to invite inquiry, then disparages or "knocks" the product when members of the public make inquiry, and finally offers another item for sale which is more expensive than the first but which seems like a "bargain" in comparison to the disparaged product that was originally advertised, such practice constitutes deceptive use of advertising as a lure to sell other nonadvertised products or services which is exactly the kind of trade practice which the CCPA prohibits. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

Such "bait and switch" advertising and selling techniques have long been recognized in the legal literature and have long been subject to equitable sanctions. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

Likewise, the concept of a "tie-in sale" is not new to the law, as its practice has long been prohibited by the anti-trust laws. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

The fact that a "tie-in sale", like "disparagement", and "bait and switch" tactics is not a new or unfamiliar term to most business enterprises leads to the conclusion that its use in the CCPA does establish a standard against which one's business and trade activities can be tested, with a definite background of experience and precedent to illuminate the meaning of the words employed in the statute. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

General assembly intended the deceptive trade practice of bait and switch advertising to include the element of intent to deceive. Gen. Steel Domestic Sales, LLC v. Hogan & Hartson, LLP, 230 P.3d 1275 (Colo. App. 2010).

Advertisement or sale of real property covered. The general assembly has included sales and advertisements respecting real property in its broad but undefined use of the term "services" in subsections (1)(e), (g), (i), and (l), which makes false or misleading statements in the advertisement or sale of real property subject to the provisions of the CCPA. People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Alpert Corp., 660 P.2d 1295 (Colo. App. 1982).

The CCPA does not, as a matter of law, make actionable a statement that would otherwise be mere puffery. Park Rise Homeowners Ass'n, Inc. v. Res. Const. Co., 155 P.3d 427 (Colo. App. 2006); Alpine Bank v. Hubbell, 555 F.3d 1097 (10th Cir. 2009).

The sale of insurance can be classified as a sale of goods, services, or property and is thus subject to the provisions of the CCPA. Showpiece Homes Corp. v. Assurance Co. of Am., 38 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2001).

The implantation of an embryo is not a sale of a good or product; rather it constitutes the provision of a medical service pursuant to § 13-22-104. Am. Econ. Ins. Co. v. Schoolcraft, 551 F. Supp. 2d 1235 (D. Colo. 2007).

A violation of § 10-3-1104 does not constitute a per se violation of this section. This section creates a private right of action whereas § 10-3-1104 does not. Coors v. Sec. Life of Denver Ins. Co., 91 P.3d 393 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd by operation of law, 112 P.3d 59 (Colo. 2005).

The CCPA is applicable to an insurer's post-sale unfair or bad faith conduct. Showpiece Homes Corp. v. Assurance Co. of Am., 38 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2001).

Attorneys may be found liable for CCPA violations. The proper test for CCPA liability is whether or not an attorney's conduct constitutes a deceptive trade practice with the requisite intent and meets the elements of public impact and causation. The CCPA applies to protect the vulnerable consumer of legal services and the consumer public as a whole in the situation in which the purveyor of those services knowingly misrepresents the quality and likely benefit of those services. Crowe v. Tull, 126 P.3d 196 (Colo. 2006).

Setting the price of an item so high that the market analysis shows that very few items will be sold at that price, offering the item for sale at that price for a very short period of time, and showing the price as reduced and the item discounted in comparative price advertisements is a deceptive and misleading practice pursuant to the CCPA. State ex rel. Woodard v. May Dept. Stores Co., 849 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1992).

Rescission and refunds under subsection (1)(t)(I) and (1)(t)(IV) were not available where buyer had previously cancelled contract, since at that point there was no contract to rescind and, after two years' use of club's facilities and services by buyer, parties could not be restored to their precontract status. Robinson v. Lynmar Racquet Club, Inc., 851 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

Right of action based on failure to give notice of right to rescind under subsection (1)(t)(II) did not accrue until buyer learned of right to rescind by other means. Therefore, applicable limitation period did not begin to run and action was not time-barred. Robinson v. Lynmar Racquet Club, Inc., 851 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

A breach of contract claim, without additional conduct, cannot constitute an actionable claim under this article. Unlike a breach of contract claim, which arises when one contracting party breaks a promise, a claim under this article arises when a party knowingly makes a misrepresentation or makes a false representation that has the capacity to deceive. A promise cannot constitute a misrepresentation unless the promisor did not intend to honor it at the time it was made. Rhino Linings USA, Inc. v. Rocky Mountain Rhino Lining, Inc., 62 P.3d 142 (Colo. 2003).

A forum selection clause is consistent with public policy under the Colorado Consumer Protection Act. Edge Telecom, Inc. v. Sterling Bank, 143 P.3d 1155 (Colo. App. 2006).

This article is inapplicable to excavating contracts. Herman v. Steamboat Springs Super 8 Motel, Inc., 634 P.2d 1005 (Colo. App. 1981).

Article inapplicable where the lease of a computer system was nothing other than a commercial transaction or where the alleged fraudulent misrepresentations had no effect on consumers generally. U.S. Welding, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp., 615 F. Supp. 554 (D. Colo. 1985).

Subsection (1)(z) does not provide notice of any requirement to obtain a license to sell collision damage waivers. Notice is only given that it is a violation of the act to fail to obtain "all governmental licenses or permits required". Consequently, because no statute or appellate decision has defined "insurance" to include collision damage waivers, and the Colorado supreme court has declared that the issue of whether a collision damage waiver is insurance has not been resolved, the trial court correctly held that plaintiff could not recover on his claim that defendants violated the licensing requirement. Mangone v. U-Haul Int'l, Inc., 7 P.3d 189 (Colo. App. 1999).

Although plaintiff cannot recover damages under his subsection (1)(z) claim, the trial court erred in excluding that portion of the purchase price relating to collision damage waivers from plaintiff's non-insurance claims pursuant to subsections (1)(e) and (1)(u). Mangone v. U-Haul Int'l, Inc., 7 P.3d 189 (Colo. App. 1999).

Subsection (1)(z) does not apply to real estate purchases. It applies to the performance of services and the sale of property. Shotkoski v. Denver Inv. Group Inc., 134 P.3d 513 (Colo. App. 2006).

Allegation of claim under this section need not be specifically pleaded. Heller v. Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund, 809 P.2d 1016 (Colo. App. 1990).

Certificate of review required by § 13-20-602 is not a prerequisite to a lawsuit against licensed real estate brokers based on paragraphs (1)(e) and (1)(g) where plaintiffs who had purchased a home alleged that licensed real estate brokers failed to disclose hidden damage to the home's foundation walls of which they had actual knowledge. Expert testimony would not be necessary to prove plaintiffs' claims of actual knowledge of the damage. However, plaintiffs' claim that brokers should have known about damage required a certificate of review and was properly dismissed because expert testimony would be necessary to establish the proper standard of care. Baumgarten v. Coppage, 15 P.3d 304 (Colo. App. 2000).

Subsection (3) does not allow recovery on two separate theories based on the same facts. Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund v. Heller, 826 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1992); Crowe v. Tull, 126 P.3d 196 (Colo. 2006).

Trial court did not err in refusing to direct a verdict for defendants where evidence revealed that, by representing to their customers that an easement existed across plaintiffs' property, defendants caused damage to the road and caused two prospective pasture leases to be lost, and where it was undisputed that the actions and representations of defendants caused fences to be torn down, locks to be cut, and gates to be left open. Walter v. Hall, 940 P.2d 991 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd, 969 P.2d 224 (Colo. 1998).

Colorado state courts have jurisdiction over private actions under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), 47 U.S.C. § 227, under the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution, and the TCPA does not limit this jurisdiction, even assuming congress could do so. When congress created a private right of action that could be prosecuted in state courts, it was acknowledging that the states could apply their own rules of procedure to such an action, but it did not intend to require that any state adopt a further law or rule of court to allow the prosecution of such actions in its courts. The supremacy clause requires the exercise of such jurisdiction as the state court possesses. Consumer Crusade, Inc. v. Affordable Health Care Solutions, Inc., 121 P.3d 350 (Colo. App. 2005).

"If otherwise permitted" phrase under TCPA provisions creating a private right of action is merely an acknowledgment by congress that states have the right to structure their own court systems and that state courts are not obligated to change their procedural rules to accommodate TCPA claims. Under this view, no state can refuse to entertain a private TCPA action, but a state is not compelled to adopt a special procedural rule for such actions. Consumer Crusade, Inc. v. Affordable Health Care Solutions, Inc., 121 P.3d 350 (Colo. App. 2005).

The CCPA is not preempted by the federal Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) given the breadth of the CCPA and its regulation of far wider deceptive trade practices than those covered by RESPA. Perkins v. Johnson, 551 F. Supp. 2d 1246 (D. Colo. 2008).

Deceptive trade practice claims concerning the provisions of an apartment lease are subject to the lease's arbitration provision. Ingold v. AIMCO/Bluffs, L.L.C. Apartments, 159 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2007).

The public nature of the workers' compensation program is not sufficient to constitute per se public impact under the CCPA. Brodeur v. Am. Home Assurance Co., 169 P.3d 139 (Colo. 2007).

Company that made itself look better than it was by using language in its reports written and copyrighted by another company did not engage in a deceptive trade practice that significantly impacted the public. R.W. Beck, Inc. v. E3 Consulting, LLC, 577 F.3d 1133 (10th Cir. 2009).

Applied in Am. Television & Commc'ns Corp. v. Manning, 651 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1982); Nobody in Particular Presents, Inc. v. Clear Channel Commc'ns, Inc., 311 F. Supp. 2d (D. Colo. 2004); Campfield v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 532 F.3d 1111 (10th Cir. 2008).

6-1-106. Exclusions. (1) This article does not apply to:

(a) Conduct in compliance with the orders or rules of, or a statute administered by, a federal, state, or local governmental agency;

(b) Publishers, including outdoor advertising media, advertising agencies, broadcasters, or printers engaged in the dissemination of information or reproduction of printed or pictorial matter who publish, broadcast, or reproduce material without knowledge of its deceptive character; or

(c) Actions or appeals pending on or before July 1, 1969.

(2) This article shall not be interpreted to apply to the use by a person of any service mark, trademark, certification mark, collective mark, trade name, or other trade identification which was used and not abandoned prior to July 1, 1969, if the use was in good faith and is otherwise lawful except for the provisions of this article.

ANNOTATION

This section does not exempt the insurance industry from the provisions of the Colorado Consumer Protection Act (CCPA). Showpiece Homes Corp. v. Assurance Co. of Am., 38 P.3d 47 (Colo. 2001).

This section does not exempt attorney conduct that constitutes deceptive or unfair trade practices from the provisions of the CCPA. Crowe v. Tull, 126 P.3d 196 (Colo. 2006).

The CCPA is not preempted by the federal Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) given the breadth of the CCPA and its regulation of far wider deceptive trade practices than those covered by RESPA. Perkins v. Johnson, 551 F. Supp. 2d 1246 (D. Colo. 2008).

6-1-107. Powers of attorney general and district attorneys. (1) When the attorney general or a district attorney has cause to believe that any person has engaged in or is engaging in any deceptive trade practice listed in section 6-1-105 or part 7 of this article, the attorney general or district attorney may:

(a) Request such person to file a statement or report in writing under oath or otherwise, on forms prescribed by him, as to all facts and circumstances concerning the sale or advertisement of property by such person and any other data and information he deems necessary;

(b) Examine under oath any person in connection with the sale or advertisement of any property;

(c) Examine any property or sample thereof, record, book, document, account, or paper he deems necessary;

(d) Make true copies, at the expense of the attorney general or district attorney, of any record, book, document, account, or paper examined pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (1), which copies may be offered into evidence in lieu of the originals thereof in actions brought pursuant to sections 6-1-109 and 6-1-110; and

(e) Pursuant to any order of any district court, impound any sample of property which is material to such deceptive trade practice and retain the same in his possession until completion of all proceedings undertaken under this article. An order shall not be issued pursuant to this paragraph (e) without full opportunity given to the accused to be heard and unless the attorney general or district attorney has proven by clear and convincing evidence that the business activities of the person to whom an order is directed will not be impaired thereby.

(2) Nothing in subsection (1) of this section shall be construed to allow a district attorney to enforce the provisions of this article beyond the territorial limits of his judicial district, unless the alleged deceptive trade practice or any portion of a transaction involving an alleged deceptive trade practice occurred in said district attorney's judicial district, or unless the principal place of business of any defendant is located in said district attorney's district, or unless any defendant resides in said district attorney's judicial district.

6-1-108. Subpoenas - hearings - rules. (1) The attorney general or a district attorney, in addition to other powers conferred upon him by this article, may issue subpoenas to require the attendance of witnesses or the production of documents, administer oaths, conduct hearings in aid of any investigation or inquiry, and prescribe such forms and promulgate such rules as may be necessary to administer the provisions of this article.

(2) Service of any notice or subpoena may be made in the manner prescribed by law or the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

ANNOTATION

This section is not unconstitutionally defective in authorizing the attorney general to issue a subpoena. People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Am. Banco Corp., 194 Colo. 32, 570 P.2d 825 (1977).

The purpose of this section empowering the attorney general to make investigations and issue subpoenas is to enable him to determine whether an action for injunctive relief should be brought. People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Am. Banco Corp., 194 Colo. 32, 570 P.2d 825 (1977).

Refusal to submit to unreasonable subpoena. The person from whom information is sought may refuse to submit to the demands of the subpoena if it is unreasonable. People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Am. Banco Corp., 194 Colo. 32, 570 P.2d 825 (1977).

Issuance of administrative subpoena under this section by district attorney for dominant purpose of gathering evidence for a pending criminal prosecution is an abuse of process and evidence so obtained should be suppressed from use in the pending criminal prosecution. People v. Fleming, 804 P.2d 231 (Colo. App. 1990).

Absent a waiver of immunity, an Indian tribe is immune from any action — criminal, civil, or injunctive — the attorney general may bring in a court to enforce the Colorado Consumer Protection Act. State ex rel. Suthers v. Cash Ad. & Pref., 205 P.3d 389 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Cash Advance & Pref. Cash Loans v. State, 242 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2010).

Tribal sovereign immunity does not prevent the enforcement of the attorney general's subpoenas for information relevant to the determination by the trial court of whether sovereign immunity applies to a business affiliated with the tribe. State ex rel. Suthers v. Cash Ad. & Pref., 205 P.3d 389 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Cash Advance & Pref. Cash Loans v. State, 242 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2010).

6-1-109. Remedies. (1) If any person fails to cooperate with any investigation pursuant to section 6-1-107 or fails to obey any subpoena pursuant to section 6-1-108, the attorney general or a district attorney may apply to the appropriate district court for an appropriate order to effect the purposes of this article. The application shall state that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the order applied for is necessary to terminate or prevent a deceptive trade practice as defined in this article. If the court is satisfied that reasonable grounds exist, the court in its order may:

(a) Grant injunctive relief restraining the sale or advertisement of any property by such person;

(b) Require the attendance of or the production of documents by such person, or both;

(c) Grant such other or further relief as may be necessary to obtain compliance by such person.

The burden of seeking court review under article 1 of title 6 and of satisfying the court that reasonable grounds exist to believe the subpoena is necessary to terminate or prevent a deceptive trade practice is upon the attorney general (now attorney general or district attorney). 6-1-110. Restraining orders - injunctions - assurances of discontinuance. (1) Whenever the attorney general or a district attorney has cause to believe that a person has engaged in or is engaging in any deceptive trade practice listed in section 6-1-105 or part 7 of this article, the attorney general or district attorney may apply for and obtain, in an action in the appropriate district court of this state, a temporary restraining order or injunction, or both, pursuant to the Colorado rules of civil procedure, prohibiting such person from continuing such practices, or engaging therein, or doing any act in furtherance thereof. The court may make such orders or judgments as may be necessary to prevent the use or employment by such person of any such deceptive trade practice or which may be necessary to completely compensate or restore to the original position of any person injured by means of any such practice or to prevent any unjust enrichment by any person through the use or employment of any deceptive trade practice.

(2) Where the attorney general or a district attorney has authority to institute a civil action or other proceeding pursuant to the provisions of this article, the attorney general or district attorney may accept, in lieu thereof or as a part thereof, an assurance of discontinuance of any deceptive trade practice listed in section 6-1-105 or part 7 of this article. Such assurance may include a stipulation for the voluntary payment by the alleged violator of the costs of investigation and any action or proceeding by the attorney general or a district attorney and any amount necessary to restore to any person any money or property that may have been acquired by such alleged violator by means of any such deceptive trade practice. Any such assurance of discontinuance accepted by the attorney general or a district attorney and any such stipulation filed with the court as a part of any such action or proceeding shall be a matter of public record unless the attorney general or the district attorney determines, at his or her discretion, that it will be confidential to the parties to the action or proceeding and to the court and its employees. Upon the filing of a civil action by the attorney general or a district attorney alleging that a confidential assurance of discontinuance or stipulation accepted pursuant to this subsection (2) has been violated, said assurance of discontinuance or stipulation shall thereupon be deemed a public record and open to inspection by any person. Proof by a preponderance of the evidence of a violation of any such assurance or stipulation shall constitute prima facie evidence of a deceptive trade practice for the purposes of any civil action or proceeding brought thereafter by the attorney general or a district attorney, whether a new action or a subsequent motion or petition in any pending action or proceeding.

(3) When the attorney general or a district attorney shows by a preponderance of evidence that a mortgage broker, mortgage originator, mortgage lender, mortgage loan applicant, real estate broker, real estate agent, real estate appraiser, or closing agent, other than a person who provides closing or settlement services subject to regulation by the division of insurance, has continued to participate in the origination of mortgage loans in violation of section 38-40-105, C.R.S., after having been previously enjoined from practices in violation of such section, the attorney general or district attorney may, in addition to any other remedies, apply for and obtain, in the court that has previously issued an injunction, a further injunction against continuing to participate in the business of originating mortgage loans for up to five years.

(4) In addition to any other remedy available under this section, when the attorney general or district attorney has cause to believe that a person has engaged in or is engaging in a deceptive trade practice described in section 6-1-720, the attorney general or district attorney may apply for and obtain, in an action in the appropriate district court of this state, an order forfeiting any tickets obtained, or the proceeds from the resale of any such tickets, in violation of section 6-1-720.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Trade Secret Litigation: Injunctions and Other Equitable Remedies", see 48 U. Colo. L. Rev. 189 (1977).

Where a violation occurs, this section permits the attorney general to apply for either a temporary restraining order or injunction or to seek a voluntary "assurance of discontinuance" from a party alleged to have engaged in deceptive trade practices. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

The attorney general should be granted the opportunity to choose, depending upon the circumstances of the case, between initiating an injunctive proceeding in court or accepting an assurance of discontinuance directly from the alleged violator. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

Where the attorney general has authority to institute a civil action, he may accept an assurance of discontinuance of the deceptive trade practice in lieu thereof, giving him the option, whenever he has cause to believe that a person has engaged in a deceptive trade practice, of either filing an action in court against the alleged violator or accepting his assurance that he will discontinue the illegal practice. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

When the attorney general seeks an injunction he is not demanding that the defendant be punished with a penal sanction, but rather that the defendant be restrained from acting unlawfully in the future, so it is unnecessary that this section provide absolutely precise warning before its equitable sanctions are applied. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

Moreover, the failure to set forth criteria to assist the attorney general in choosing between the two methods of enforcement set out in this section is not a denial of equal protection in violation of the Colorado Constitution, for, while a legislative body may not delegate the power to make or define a law, it may delegate the power, authority, and discretion as to the execution and enforcement of the law. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

So long as the attorney general does not unreasonably abuse his discretion, his right to decide between accepting an assurance of discontinuance or initiating a court action will not be overturned on equal protection grounds. People ex rel. Dunbar v. Gym of Am., Inc., 177 Colo. 97, 493 P.2d 660 (1972).

Remedies not limited. Subsection (1) does not restrict the attorney general's choice of remedies to an election between injunctive relief and the assurances of discontinuance provided for in subsection (2). W. Food Plan, Inc. v. District Court, 198 Colo. 213, 598 P.2d 1038 (1979).

Attorney general may seek restitution separate from injunction for violations of this act. W. Food Plan, Inc. v. District Court, 198 Colo. 213, 598 P.2d 1038 (1979).

Section vests in trial court power to suppress proceedings brought under this act, and to keep the suppression in force until such time as the conditions set forth in the consent decree may be violated by the defendant. People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Delaware Corp., 626 P.2d 1144 (Colo. App. 1980).

Applied in People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Am. Banco Corp., 194 Colo. 32, 570 P.2d 825 (1977).

6-1-111. Information and evidence confidential and inadmissible - when. (1) Any testimony obtained by the attorney general or a district attorney pursuant to compulsory process under this article or any information derived directly or indirectly from such testimony shall not be admissible in evidence in any criminal prosecution against the person so compelled to testify. The provisions of this subsection (1) shall not be construed to prevent any law enforcement officer from independently producing or obtaining the same or similar facts, information, or evidence for use in any criminal prosecution.

(2) Subject to the provisions of section 6-1-110 (2), the records of investigations or intelligence information of the attorney general or a district attorney obtained under this article may be deemed public records available for inspection by the general public at the discretion of the attorney general or the district attorney. This subsection (2) shall not be construed to prevent the attorney general or a district attorney from issuing public statements describing or warning of any course of conduct or any conspiracy which constitutes a deceptive trade practice, whether on a local, statewide, regional, or nationwide basis.

ANNOTATION

Grant of immunity contained in subsection (1) cannot withstand constitutional scrutiny. People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Sari, 196 Colo. 235, 585 P.2d 591 (1978) (decided prior to 1981 amendment).

Immunity allows state to compel testimony. A grant of immunity as extensive as a witness' constitutional privilege against self-incrimination allows a state to compel testimony which might otherwise be unobtainable. People ex rel. Smith v. Jordan, 689 P.2d 1172 (Colo. App. 1984).

6-1-112. Civil penalties. (1) The attorney general or a district attorney may bring a civil action on behalf of the state to seek the imposition of civil penalties as follows:

(a) Any person who violates or causes another to violate any provision of this article shall forfeit and pay to the general fund of this state a civil penalty of not more than two thousand dollars for each such violation. For purposes of this paragraph (a), a violation of any provision shall constitute a separate violation with respect to each consumer or transaction involved; except that the maximum civil penalty shall not exceed five hundred thousand dollars for any related series of violations.

(b) Any person who violates or causes another to violate any court order or injunction issued pursuant to this article shall forfeit and pay to the general fund of this state a civil penalty of not more than ten thousand dollars for each such violation. For the purposes of this section, the court issuing the order or injunction shall retain jurisdiction, and the cause shall be continued. Upon violation, the attorney general or a district attorney may petition the court for the recovery of the civil penalty. Such civil penalty shall be in addition to any other penalty or remedy available for the enforcement of the provisions of this article and any court order or injunction.

(c) Any person who violates or causes another to violate any provision of this article, where such violation was committed against an elderly person, shall forfeit and pay to the general fund of the state a civil penalty of not more than ten thousand dollars for each such violation. For purposes of this paragraph (c), a violation of any provision of this article shall constitute a separate violation with respect to each elderly person involved.

(d) Any person who violates or causes another to violate the provisions of sections 6-1-105 (1) (e) and 6-1-723 by distributing, dispensing, or selling any product that is labeled as a "bath salt" or any other trademark if the product contains any amount of any cathinones, as defined in section 18-18-102 (3.5), C.R.S., shall forfeit and pay to the general fund of the state a civil penalty of not less than ten thousand dollars and not more than five hundred thousand dollars for each such violation; except that the person shall forfeit and pay to the general fund of the state a civil penalty of not less than twenty-five thousand dollars and not more than five hundred thousand dollars for each such violation if the person distributes, dispenses, or sells the product to a minor under the age of eighteen and the person is at least eighteen years of age and at least two years older than the minor.

ANNOTATION

The general assembly expressly stated its intent that penalties imposed under subsection (1) are civil in nature. Moreover, the fact that the legislature provided that civil enforcement proceedings are to be governed by the Colorado rules of civil procedure reinforces the legislature's intent to create a civil penalty. Duncan v. Norton, 974 F. Supp. 1328 (D. Colo. 1997).

Subsection (1) aids the Colorado Consumer Protection Act's overall remedial purpose of protecting the state's consumers against deceptive trade practices and is therefore properly characterized as serving primarily a remedial, and also a punitive, purpose. Duncan v. Norton, 974 F. Supp. 1328 (D. Colo. 1997).

Federal court declined to find that any amount of penalty imposed in the civil enforcement proceeding under subsection (1) would be so far criminal in nature as to preclude the attorney general from seeking penalties by use of plaintiff's prior compelled testimony. Duncan v. Norton, 974 F. Supp. 1328 (D. Colo. 1997).

Civil penalties based on the dissemination of misleading information rather than on the receipt of the information or on a consumer acting on the information effectuate the purpose of the statute. May Dept. Stores v. State, 863 P.2d 967 (Colo. 1993).

Statute is intended to punish wrongdoer not compensate injured party. May Dept. Stores v. State, 863 P.2d 967 (Colo. 1993).

"Each consumer or transaction" contemplates two separate violations, one involving a consumer and one involving a transaction. A consumer relying or acting upon an advertisement is a separate and distinct violation from the act of advertising. Consumer involvement almost necessarily involves injury while a transaction does not have to cause actual injury to the consumer to be a violation. May Dept. Stores v. State, 863 P.2d 967 (Colo. 1993).

This section does not require an actual injury or loss to a customer before a civil penalty may be awarded. State v. May Dept. Stores Co., 849 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1992).

In determining the amount of a civil penalty award, the court should apply the following concepts: (a) The good or bad faith of the defendant; (b) the injury to the public; (c) the defendant's ability to pay; and (d) the desire to eliminate the benefits derived by violations of the Colorado Consumer Protection Act. State v. May Dept. Stores Co., 849 P.2d 802 (Colo. App. 1992).

Civil penalties awarded under subsection (1) are nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7). The amounts awarded are penalties within the meaning of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7). In re Jensen, 395 B.R. 472 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2008).

6-1-113. Damages. (1) The provisions of this article shall be available in a civil action for any claim against any person who has engaged in or caused another to engage in any deceptive trade practice listed in this article. An action under this section shall be available to any person who:

(a) Is an actual or potential consumer of the defendant's goods, services, or property and is injured as a result of such deceptive trade practice, or is a residential subscriber, as defined in section 6-1-903 (9), who receives unlawful telephone solicitation, as defined in section 6-1-903 (10); or

(b) Is any successor in interest to an actual consumer who purchased the defendant's goods, services, or property; or

(c) In the course of the person's business or occupation, is injured as a result of such deceptive trade practice.

(2) Except in a class action or a case brought for a violation of section 6-1-709, any person who, in a private civil action, is found to have engaged in or caused another to engage in any deceptive trade practice listed in this article shall be liable in an amount equal to the sum of:

(a) The greater of:

(I) The amount of actual damages sustained; or

(II) Five hundred dollars; or

(III) Three times the amount of actual damages sustained, if it is established by clear and convincing evidence that such person engaged in bad faith conduct; plus

(b) In the case of any successful action to enforce said liability, the costs of the action together with reasonable attorney fees as determined by the court.

(2.3) As used in subsection (2) of this section, "bad faith conduct" means fraudulent, willful, knowing, or intentional conduct that causes injury.

(2.5) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (2) of this section, in the case of any violation of section 6-1-709, in addition to interest, costs of the action, and reasonable attorney fees as determined by the court, the prevailing party shall be entitled only to damages in an amount sufficient to refund moneys actually paid for a manufactured home not delivered in accordance with the provisions of section 6-1-709.

(2.7) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (2) of this section, in the case of any violation of section 6-1-105 (1) (ss), the court may award reasonable costs of the action and attorney fees and interest, and in addition, the prevailing party shall be entitled only to damages in an amount sufficient to refund moneys actually paid for the installation of a manufactured home not installed in accordance with the provisions of part 33 of article 32 of title 24, C.R.S., that apply to the installation of manufactured homes.

(3) Any person who brings an action under this article that is found by the court to be groundless and in bad faith or for the purpose of harassment shall be liable to the defendant for the costs of the action together with reasonable attorney fees as determined by the court.

(4) Costs and attorney fees shall be awarded to the attorney general or a district attorney in all actions where the attorney general or the district attorney successfully enforces this article.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Recreational Waivers in Colorado: Playing at Your Own Risk", see 32 Colo. Law. 77 (August 2003).

The treble damages provision of this section does not violate the due process or equal protection guarantees of the state and federal constitutions. Vista Resorts, Inc. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 117 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2004).

For purposes of a private right of action, "any person" means a person who establishes that: (1) The defendant engaged in an unfair or deceptive trade practice; (2) the challenged practice occurred in the course of the defendant's business, vocation, or occupation; (3) it significantly impacts the public as actual or potential customers of the defendant's goods, services, or property; (4) the plaintiff suffered injury in fact to a legally protected interest; and (5) the challenged practice caused the plaintiff's injury. Hall v. Walter, 969 P.2d 224 (Colo. 1998); Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 192 F. Supp.2d 1175 (D. Colo. 2002); Anson v. Trujillo, 56 P.3d 114 (Colo. App. 2002).

Factors applied in Full Draw Prods. v. Easton Sports, Inc., 85 F. Supp.2d 1001 (D. Colo. 2000).

The plain language of this section provides that any person may bring an action under the Colorado Consumer Protection Act (CCPA). Therefore, third-party non-consumers have standing to bring actions under the CCPA. Walter v. Hall, 940 P.2d 991 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd, 969 P.2d 224 (Colo. 1998).

Plaintiff is not authorized to bring an action under the CCPA because, under the plain language of subsection (1), plaintiff was not an assignee whose assignors were actual consumers who purchased defendant's goods, services, or property, nor was plaintiff an actual or potential consumer of defendant's goods, services, or property injured as a result of the facsimile transmissions. By specifying in subsection (1) the circumstances under which a successor in interest may bring a CCPA claim, the general assembly necessarily excluded successors in interest from bringing claims under other circumstances. U.S. Fax Law Ctr. v. Myron Corp., 159 P.3d 745 (Colo. App. 2006).

Individual liability of corporate officers and agents proper under this article. This section allows civil actions against "any person" who has engaged in a deceptive trade practice. Hoang v. Arbess, 80 P.3d 863 (Colo. App. 2003).

Vicarious liability claim against mortgage brokerage firm that employed licensed securities broker who violated the CCPA survives motion to dismiss. Dolin v. Contemporary Fin. Solutions, Inc., 622 F. Supp. 2d 1077 (D. Colo. 2009).

Although the term "any person" is broad, the CCPA will not remedy private injuries. Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 192 F. Supp.2d 1175 (D. Colo. 2002).

Three factors must be considered in assessing the public impact of an allegedly deceptive trade practice: The number of consumers directly affected by the challenged practice; the relative sophistication and bargaining power of the consumers affected by the challenged practice; and evidence that the challenged practice previously impacted other consumers or has significant potential to do so in the future. Loughridge v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 192 F. Supp.2d 1175 (D. Colo. 2002); Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Variable Annuity Life Ins. Co., 373 F.3d 1100 (10th Cir. 2004).

The CCPA requires actual injury before an individual may maintain a private cause of action. Hall v. Walter, 969 P.2d 224 (Colo. 1998); Purple Onion Foods, Inc. v. Blue Moose of Boulder, Inc., 45 F. Supp.2d 1255 (D. Colo. 1999).

Under Colorado law, a claim for liquidated damages under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act, 47 U.S.C. § 227, is a claim for a penalty that cannot be assigned. Kruse v. McKenna, 178 P.3d 1198 (Colo.), cert. denied, 555 U.S. 821, 129 S. Ct. 112, 172 L. Ed. 2d 35 (2008).

If a claim by a corporation is within the zone of interests of the CCPA, a corporation is a person entitled to bring a claim under the act. Fiberglass Component Prod. v. Reichhold Chems., Inc., 983 F. Supp. 948 (D. Colo. 1997).

Business losses that result when deceptive trade practices dissuade potential attendees from attending a trade show constitute an injury to an interest protected by the CCPA. Full Draw Prods. v. Easton Sports, Inc., 85 F. Supp.2d 1001 (D. Colo. 2000).

Challenged conduct must significantly impact the public as actual or potential consumers of the product. Martinez v. Lewis, 969 P.2d 213 (Colo. 1998); NetQuote, Inc. v. Byrd, 504 F. Supp. 2d 1126 (D. Colo. 2007).

Alleged misrepresentations concerning independent medical examiner's qualifications were made solely to sophisticated insurance company, not the public. Therefore, claim under CCPA brought by insured properly dismissed. Martinez v. Lewis, 969 P.2d 213 (Colo. 1998).

Allegations did not meet the public impact element required by this section because they did not plausibly suggest that defendant's conduct significantly impacted the public as actual or potential consumers. NetQuote, Inc. v. Byrd, 504 F. Supp. 2d 1126 (D. Colo. 2007).

The CCPA applies when the last event creating possible liability occurred in Colorado. Where allegedly disparaging statements were disseminated and individual allegedly suffered actual injury in Colorado, the CCPA applies. Purple Onion Foods, Inc. v. Blue Moose of Boulder, Inc., 45 F. Supp.2d 1255 (D. Colo. 1999).

Claimant not within group of persons the statute was intended to protect because the physician's conduct in performing claimant's independent medical examination occurred in the context of the contract between the physician and the insurer and not between the physician and the claimant. Claimant never asserted that the physician made false representations to her or that she relied on such misrepresentations. Martinez v. Lewis, 942 P.2d 1219 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd, 969 P.2d 213 (Colo. 1998).

Award of attorney fees under this section appropriate inasmuch as defendant's fraudulent misrepresentation was a deceptive trade practice under § 6-1-103. Dodds v. Frontier Chevrolet Sales & Serv., Inc., 676 P.2d 1237 (Colo. App. 1983).

Attorney fees recoverable in action under No-Call List Act. A successful claimant under § 6-1-904 is entitled to attorney fees in accordance with this section. Holcomb v. Steven D. Smith, Inc., 170 P.3d 815 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court's award of attorney fees to defendant appropriate. To prove a private cause of action for a deceptive trade practice under the CCPA, a plaintiff must show that: (1) The defendant engaged in an unfair or deceptive trade practice; (2) the challenged practice occurred in the course of defendant's business; (3) it significantly impacted the public as actual or potential consumers of the defendant's goods, services, or property; (4) the plaintiff suffered injury in fact to a legally protected interest; and (5) the challenged practice caused the plaintiff's injury. Plaintiff's deceptive trade practices claim, therefore, was frivolous and groundless under subsection (3) when plaintiff failed to allege that defendant's conduct significantly impacted the public as an actual or potential consumer or submit factual material that would support such a finding. Wheeler v. T.L. Roofing, Inc., 74 P.3d 499 (Colo. App. 2003).

Award of attorney fees inappropriate under this section where plaintiff lacks standing to bring a cause of action pursuant to the CCPA. Anson v. Trujillo, 56 P.3d 114 (Colo. App. 2002).

Offer of settlement as to "all claims" unambiguously includes attorney fees and costs if the only claim for attorney fees and costs appears in the complaint. The offer of settlement need not explicitly reference attorney fees and costs. Bumbal v. Smith, 165 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2007).

Treble damages provided by this section and punitive damages awarded under § 13-21-102 serve the same purposes of punishment and deterrence. Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund v. Heller, 826 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1992).

Plaintiff was not entitled to recover both treble damages under this section and punitive damages under § 13-21-102, since damages under both sections serve same purposes. Lexton-Ancira Real Estate Fund v. Heller, 826 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1992).

If this section does not apply, punitive damages may still be available under other provisions of law. Section 13-21-102 allows for punitive damages, and even treble punitive damages, under some circumstances. Coors v. Sec. Life of Denver Ins. Co., 112 P.3d 59 (Colo. 2005).

Rule against double recovery does not preclude plaintiff from pursuing claims to recover both enhanced damages under this section and exemplary damages. Accordingly, plaintiffs' complaint should not have been dismissed on summary judgment. Although plaintiffs may not recover from defendant any actual damages for which they have already received payment and may not relitigate the amount of those damages, they must be permitted to attempt to establish their entitlement to treble damages under this section or exemplary damages under § 13-21-102. Quist v. Specialties Supply Co., Inc., 12 P.3d 863 (Colo. App. 2000).

Retroactive application of enhanced civil remedies in this section is permissible. Treble-damages provision of this section could be applied where health club had violated substantive provisions of act prior to amendment of this section, since amendment did not impose new duties on health clubs in relation to their customers. Robinson v. Lynmar Racquet Club, Inc., 851 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

Attorney fees incurred in unsuccessful attempt to obtain class certification were properly disallowed, since subsection (2) clearly prohibits an award of attorney fees in a class action. Robinson v. Lynmar Racquet Club, Inc., 851 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court may limit award of attorney fees to that which is "reasonable". Robinson v. Lynmar Racquet Club, Inc., 851 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

A trial court is not required to advise a jury that a finding of deceptive trade practices will result in an award of treble damages under this section. Heritage Vill. Owners Ass'n v. Golden Heritage Investors, Ltd., 89 P.3d 513 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section not in conflict with § 13-17-201. This section allows attorney fees when claims are groundless and in bad faith or for the purpose of harassment, while § 13-17-201 applies to a motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b). The provisions can stand side by side because they mandate awards in different circumstances. US Fax Law Ctr., Inc. v. Henry Schein, Inc., 205 P.3d 512 (Colo. App. 2009).

6-1-114. Criminal penalties. Upon a first conviction any person who promotes a pyramid promotional scheme in this state or who violates any provision of part 3 of article 5.5 of title 12, C.R.S., or section 6-1-717 is guilty of a class 1 misdemeanor, as defined in section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S., and, upon a second or subsequent conviction of part 3 of article 5.5 of title 12, C.R.S., is guilty of a class 6 felony, as defined in section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S.

6-1-115. Limitations. All actions brought under this article must be commenced within three years after the date on which the false, misleading, or deceptive act or practice occurred or the date on which the last in a series of such acts or practices occurred or within three years after the consumer discovered or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have discovered the occurrence of the false, misleading, or deceptive act or practice. The period of limitation provided in this section may be extended for a period of one year if the plaintiff proves that failure to timely commence the action was caused by the defendant engaging in conduct calculated to induce the plaintiff to refrain from or postpone the commencement of the action.

AUTO RENTAL CONTRACTS - COLLISION DAMAGE WAIVERS

6-1-201. Definitions. As used in this part 2, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Collision damage waiver" means any contract or contractual provision, whether separate from or a part of a motor vehicle rental agreement, whereby the lessor agrees, for a charge, to waive any and all claims against the lessee for any damages to the rental motor vehicle during the term of the rental agreement.

(2) "Lessee" means any person or organization obtaining the use of a rental motor vehicle from a lessor under the terms of a rental agreement.

(3) "Lessor" means any person or organization in the business of providing rental motor vehicles to the public.

(4) "Private passenger type automobile or vehicle" means a motor vehicle of the private passenger or station wagon type, including passenger vans and minivans that are primarily for the transport of persons.

(5) "Rental agreement" means a written agreement setting forth the terms and conditions governing the use of a rental motor vehicle by a lessee for a period of less than one hundred eighty days.

(6) "Rental motor vehicle" means a private passenger type automobile or vehicle which, upon execution of a rental agreement, is made available to a lessee for its use.

Source: L. 89: Entire part added, p. 361, § 1, effective January 1, 1990.

6-1-202. Prohibited act. No lessor engaged in renting motor vehicles may sell to any lessee renting a motor vehicle in this state a collision damage waiver as part of the rental contract unless the lessor first gives the lessee written disclosure, as provided in section 6-1-203, of the terms and provisions of such waiver.

Source: L. 89: Entire part added, p. 361, § 1, effective January 1, 1990.

6-1-203. Collision damage waiver form - requirements - failure to comply. (1) Any collision damage waiver form shall conform to the following requirements:

(a) It shall be understandable and written in simple and readable plain language;

(b) The terms of such collision damage waiver, including, but not limited to, any conditions or exclusions applicable to the collision damage waiver, shall be prominently displayed;

(c) All restrictions, conditions, or provisions in, or endorsed on, the collision damage waiver shall be printed in type at least as large as brevier or ten-point type;

(d) The collision damage waiver shall include a statement of the total charge for the anticipated rental period or the anticipated total daily charge; and

(e) The agreement containing the collision damage waiver shall display the following notice on the face of the agreement, set apart and in bold-faced type, and in type at least as large as ten-point type:

> NOTICE: THIS CONTRACT OFFERS, FOR AN ADDITIONAL CHARGE, A COLLISION DAMAGE WAIVER TO COVER YOUR RESPONSIBILITY FOR DAMAGE TO THE VEHICLE. YOU ARE ADVISED NOT TO SIGN THIS WAIVER IF YOU HAVE RENTAL VEHICLE COLLISION COVERAGE PROVIDED BY CERTAIN GOLD OR PLATINUM CREDIT CARDS OR COLLISION INSURANCE ON YOUR OWN VEHICLE. BEFORE DECIDING WHETHER TO PURCHASE THE COLLISION DAMAGE WAIVER, YOU MAY WISH TO DETERMINE WHETHER YOUR OWN VEHICLE INSURANCE AFFORDS YOU COVERAGE FOR DAMAGE TO THE RENTAL VEHICLE AND THE AMOUNT OF THE DEDUCTIBLE UNDER YOUR OWN INSURANCE COVERAGE. THE PURCHASE OF THIS COLLISION DAMAGE WAIVER IS NOT MANDATORY AND MAY BE WAIVED.

(2) The failure by a lessor to comply with any provision of this section is a deceptive trade practice under the provisions of this article.

Source: L. 89: Entire part added, p. 362, § 1, effective January 1, 1990.

6-1-204. Prohibited exclusion. (1) No collision damage waiver subject to this part 2 shall contain an exclusion from the waiver for damages caused by the ordinary negligence of the lessee. Any such exclusion in violation of this section will be void and is a deceptive trade practice under this article. This section shall not be deemed to prohibit an exclusion from the waiver for damages caused by the lessee by:

(a) Willful and wanton conduct or misconduct;

(b) Intoxication by alcohol or use of controlled substances as defined in section 42-4-1301, C.R.S.;

(c) Participation in a speed contest;

(d) Carrying persons or property for hire, or pushing or towing anything;

(e) Use of the vehicle while committing a misdemeanor or felony or other criminal act;

(f) Use of the vehicle by an unauthorized driver, which includes any person not specifically authorized by the rental agreement;

(g) Supplying information which is false concerning the rental transaction with intent to defraud the lessor;

(h) Use of the vehicle outside the continental United States, unless specifically authorized by the rental agreement; and

(i) Any instance whereby, during the rental of such rental motor vehicle, the speedometer or odometer is tampered with or disconnected.

6-1-205. Information to be disclosed in advertisements for rental agreements for rental motor vehicles. In any advertisement to the public for a rental agreement for a rental motor vehicle that includes a rental rate, the lessor shall prominently disclose on the face of any such advertisement the daily charge of any collision damage waiver offered, a statement informing a prospective lessee that he or she should review his or her own automobile insurance coverage to determine if such coverage applies to the use of a rental motor vehicle, and a statement that a prospective lessee may also wish to determine whether his or her credit card or travel and entertainment card provides collision damage coverage for use of a rental motor vehicle or other such privilege of membership.

PREVENTION OF TELEMARKETING FRAUD

6-1-301. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that the use of telephones for commercial solicitation is rapidly increasing; that this form of communication offers unique benefits, but entails special risks and poses the potential for abuse; that the general assembly finds that the widespread practice of fraudulent and deceptive commercial telephone solicitation has caused substantial financial losses to thousands of consumers, and, particularly, elderly, homebound, and otherwise vulnerable consumers, and is a matter vitally affecting the public interest; and, therefore, that the general welfare of the public and the protection of the integrity of the telemarketing industry requires statutory regulation of the commercial use of telephones.

6-1-302. Definitions. As used in this part 3, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Commercial telephone seller" or "seller" means a person who, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, on the person's own behalf or on behalf of another person, causes or attempts to cause a commercial telephone solicitation to be made; except that "commercial telephone seller" or "seller" does not include the following:

(a) A person offering or selling a security as defined in section 11-51-201 (17), C.R.S., if:

(I) The security is either registered with the securities commissioner under section 11-51-303 or 11-51-304, C.R.S., exempt from registration under section 11-51-307, C.R.S., or the transaction in the security is exempt under section 11-51-308, C.R.S.; and

(II) The person is licensed by the securities commissioner as a broker-dealer as defined in section 11-51-201 (2), C.R.S., unless expressly excluded from such definition, or as a sales representative as defined in section 11-51-201 (14), C.R.S., unless expressly excluded from such definition, or such person is exempted from licensing under section 11-51-402, C.R.S.;

(b) (I) A person soliciting the sale of any newspaper, magazine, or other periodical of general circulation if such sales constitute a majority of such person's business and business revenues; or

(II) A person soliciting the sale of any book, record, audio tape, compact disc, or video if the person allows the purchaser to review the merchandise without obligation for at least seven days and provides a full refund for the return of undamaged merchandise within thirty days or if the person solicits such sale on behalf of a membership club operating in conformity with 16 CFR 425;

(c) A person making telephone calls to a residential customer for the sole purpose of polling or soliciting the expression of ideas, opinions, or votes, or a person soliciting solely for a political or religious cause or purpose;

(d) A paid solicitor or charitable organization that is required to and has complied with the registration, notice, and filing requirements of sections 6-16-104.6 and 6-16-104, respectively, or a person who is excluded from such notice and reporting requirements by section 6-16-103 (7);

(e) A supervised financial organization, as defined in section 5-1-301 (45), C.R.S., and its employees, when acting within the scope of their employment;

(f) A supervised lender, as defined in section 5-1-301 (46), C.R.S., and its employees, when acting within the scope of their employment;

(g) A person selling insurance, as defined in section 10-1-102 (12), C.R.S., in compliance with the requirements of title 10, C.R.S.;

(h) A person soliciting without the intent to complete and who does not in fact complete the sales transaction during the telephone solicitation or another telephone solicitation and who only completes the sales transaction at a later face-to-face meeting between the solicitor and the prospective purchaser, excluding a face-to-face meeting, the sole purpose of which is to collect the payment or deliver any item purchased, or a person soliciting a purchaser with whom the person has had a previous face-to-face meeting in the course of such person's business;

(i) Any governmental entity or employee thereof, acting in the employee's official capacity;

(j) A person soliciting telephone service, or licensed or franchised cable television service, which is billed and paid on a daily, weekly, or monthly basis and which can be canceled at any time without further obligation to the purchaser;

(k) A person or an affiliate of a person whose business is regulated by the public utilities commission;

(l) A person or an affiliate of a person whose business is regulated by the real estate commission;

(m) A person whose conduct is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal commodity futures trading commission as granted under the federal "Commodity Exchange Act", as amended;

(n) A seller of food for immediate consumption when the sale to one purchaser does not exceed three hundred dollars;

(o) A person who initially contacts the purchaser with a retail sales catalog requesting a telephone call response, when the person allows the purchaser to review the merchandise without obligation for at least seven days and provides a full refund for the return of undamaged merchandise within thirty days after receipt of the returned merchandise;

(p) An issuer or a subsidiary of an issuer that has a class of securities which is subject to section 12 of the federal "Securities Exchange Act of 1934", 15 U.S.C. sec. 78l, and which is either registered or exempt from registration under paragraph (A), (B), (C), (E), (F), (G), or (H) of subsection (g) (2) of that section;

(q) A person who has been operating for at least three years a retail business establishment in Colorado under the same name as that used in connection with the solicitation of sales by telephone if, on a continuing basis, the majority of the seller's business involves the purchaser receiving the seller's goods and services at the seller's business location;

(r) A person who has conducted business for at least three years under the same name and in the same state and offers potential purchasers satisfaction guaranteed by the sending of the product or providing the service and the purchaser has an unqualified right to review and return or cancel for at least thirty days;

(s) Any telephone marketing service company which provides telemarketing sales services under written contract to sellers and has been operating continuously for at least five years under the same business name and seventy-five percent or more of its services are performed on behalf of sellers exempt from this section. Nothing in this paragraph (s) shall be construed to exempt any seller that contracts with a telephone marketing service company for telemarketing sales services from the requirements set forth in section 6-1-303 or from the prohibitions set forth in section 6-1-304.

(t) A person soliciting business solely from business purchasers who have previously purchased identical or similar goods or services from the business enterprise on whose behalf the person is calling.

(2) "Commercial telephone solicitation" means:

(a) Unsolicited telephone calls to a person initiated by a commercial telephone seller or salesperson, or an automated dialing machine with or without a recorded message device, for the purpose of inducing the person to purchase or invest in goods, services, or property or offering an extension of credit; or

(b) Any other communication by a commercial telephone seller in which:

(I) A gift, award, or prize is offered and a telephone call response from the intended purchaser is invited; or

(II) A loan, credit card, or other extension of credit is offered to a purchaser who has not previously purchased from the person initiating the communication, and a telephone call response from the intended purchaser is invited; or

(III) A sale is to be completed or an agreement to purchase is to be entered into during the course of the telephone call response; or

(c) Any other communication by a commercial telephone seller which includes representations about the price, quality, or availability of goods, services, or property and which invites a response by telephone, including pay-per-call service calls, or which is followed by a telephone call to the intended purchaser by a salesperson.

(3) "Pay-per-call" means the use of a telephone number with a 900 prefix or any other prefix under which liability for the service or product provided attaches to the telephone bill of the individual calling such number.

(4) "Principal" means an owner, an officer of a corporation, a general partner of a partnership, the sole proprietor of a sole proprietorship, a trustee of a trust, or any other individual with similar supervisory functions with respect to any person.

(5) "Purchaser" means a person who receives or responds to a commercial telephone solicitation.

(6) "Salesperson" means any person employed or authorized by a commercial telephone seller to cause or attempt to cause a commercial telephone solicitation to be made.

(7) "Telephone sales transaction" means any payment of money by a purchaser in exchange for the promise of goods, services, property, or an extension of credit by a commercial telephone seller and includes all communications which precede such payment of money.

6-1-303. Registration of commercial telephone sellers. (1) No commercial telephone seller shall conduct business in this state without having registered with the attorney general at least ten days prior to the conduct of such business. Individual employees of the commercial telephone seller are not required to register. A commercial telephone seller conducts business in this state if the telephone solicitations of prospective purchasers are made from locations in this state or solicitation is made of prospective purchasers located in this state.

(2) A registration shall be effective for one year after the date of filing with the attorney general. Each application for registration or renewal thereof shall be accompanied by a filing fee, determined and collected by the attorney general, but such filing fee shall not exceed two hundred fifty dollars for an application for registration or one hundred dollars for an application for renewal.

(3) Whenever, prior to expiration of a commercial telephone seller's annual registration, there is a material change in the information required by subsection (5) of this section, the seller shall, within ten days, file an addendum updating the information with the attorney general.

(4) Each application for registration shall be in writing and shall contain such information regarding the conduct of the commercial telephone seller's business and the personnel conducting the business as is required by law. The application shall be submitted on a form provided by the attorney general and shall be verified by a declaration signed by each principal of the commercial telephone seller under penalty of perjury. The declaration shall specify the date and location of signing. The information submitted pursuant to this section shall be available for public inspection.

(5) Each application for registration or renewal pursuant to this section shall contain the following information:

(a) The name or names of the commercial telephone seller, including all names under which the commercial telephone seller is doing or intends to do business, if different from the name of the seller, and the name of any parent or affiliated organization;

(b) The seller's business form and the date and place of organization;

(c) The complete street addresses of all locations from which the commercial telephone seller is or will be conducting business, including a designation of the seller's principal business location;

(d) A listing of all telephone numbers, including pay-per-call numbers, to be used by the commercial telephone seller;

(e) The name, residential address, and position held by each principal of the commercial telephone seller and the names, residential addresses, and positions of those persons who have management responsibilities in connection with the commercial telephone seller's business activities;

(f) A description of the goods, services, property, or extension of credit the commercial telephone seller is offering for sale and a copy of all sales scripts the commercial telephone seller requires salespersons to use when soliciting prospective purchasers, or, if no sales script is required to be used, a description of the sales presentation;

(g) All rules, regulations, terms, restrictions, and conditions to receiving any prize, bonus, award, gift, or premium, if applicable, including a description of each prize, bonus, award, gift, or premium, and the actual or approximate odds of a purchaser's receiving such prize, bonus, award, gift, or premium;

(h) A copy or representative sample of all written materials the seller sends to any purchaser;

(i) Such additional information regarding the conduct of the commercial telephone seller's business and the personnel conducting the business as may reasonably be required by the attorney general.

6-1-304. Unlawful telemarketing practices. (1) A commercial telephone seller engages in an unlawful telemarketing practice when, in the course of any commercial telephone solicitation, the seller:

(a) Conducts business as a commercial telephone seller without having registered with the attorney general, as required by section 6-1-303;

(b) Fails to allow the purchaser in any telephone sales transaction to cancel any purchase or agreement to purchase goods, services, or property at any time before the expiration of three business days after the purchaser's receipt of such goods, services, or property by delivering or mailing to the commercial telephone seller written notice of cancellation. Notice of cancellation, if sent by mail, is deemed to be given as of the date the mailed notice was postmarked.

(c) Fails to refund all payments made by any purchaser in any telephone sales transaction within thirty days after the commercial telephone seller receives notice of cancellation from the purchaser; except that:

(I) If the purchaser has received goods or property from the commercial telephone seller, other than an item represented as free, the commercial telephone seller shall refund all payments made by the purchaser within thirty days after the commercial telephone seller's receipt of the returned goods or property;

(II) If the purchaser has received services, including those received during the course of a pay-per-call service call, which services cannot, by their nature, be returned, the commercial telephone seller is not required to refund payments to the purchaser;

(d) Fails to disclose to the purchaser during a telephone solicitation that the purchaser has the cancellation rights set forth in paragraph (b) of this subsection (1);

(e) Misrepresents to any person that the person has won a contest, sweepstakes, or drawing, or that the person will receive free goods, services, or property;

(f) Represents that the seller's goods, services, or property are "free" if the commercial telephone seller charges or collects a fee from the purchaser in exchange for providing or delivering such goods, services, or property;

(g) Makes any reference to the commercial telephone seller's compliance with this article to any purchaser without also disclosing that compliance with this article does not constitute approval by any governmental agency of the seller's marketing, advertisements, promotions, goods, or services;

(h) Engages in any deceptive trade practice defined in section 6-1-105 or part 7 of this article.

(2) Paragraphs (b) and (d) of subsection (1) of this section do not apply to a transaction in which the consumer obtains a full refund for the return of undamaged or unused goods or a cancellation of services by giving notice to the seller within seven days after receipt by the consumer and the seller processes the refund or cancellation within thirty days after receipt of the returned merchandise or the consumer's request for refund for services not performed or a pro rata refund for any services not yet performed for the consumer. The availability and terms of the return and refund privilege shall be disclosed to the consumer orally by telephone and in writing with any advertising or promotional material or with the delivery of the product or service. If a seller offers consumers an unconditional guarantee, a clear disclosure of such guarantee by using the words "satisfaction guaranteed", "free inspection", or "no-risk guarantee" satisfy the disclosure requirements of this subsection (2).

(3) The unlawful telemarketing practices listed in this section are in addition to and do not limit the types of unfair trade practices actionable at common law or under other civil and criminal statutes of this state.

(4) (a) On or after September 1, 2005, a person commits an unlawful telemarketing practice if the person knowingly:

(I) Lists a cellular telephone number in a directory for a commercial purpose unless the person whose number has been listed has given affirmative consent, through written, oral, or electronic means, to such listing; or

(II) Uses a scanning device or other electronic means to identify a cellular telephone number and to make a commercial telephone solicitation to a cellular telephone.

(b) This subsection (4) shall not apply to a commercial telephone solicitation that is in relation to a preexisting commercial relationship between the person and the person who owns the cellular telephone.

6-1-305. Penalties. (1) In addition to the remedies available under sections 6-1-110, 6-1-112, and 6-1-113:

(a) Any person who, after receiving written notice of noncompliance from the attorney general or a district attorney, conducts business as a commercial telephone seller without having registered with the attorney general as required by section 6-1-303 commits a class 1 misdemeanor and shall be punished as provided in section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S.;

(b) Any commercial telephone seller who knowingly engages in any unlawful telemarketing practice as defined in section 6-1-304 (1) (b) to (1) (h) commits a class 1 misdemeanor and shall be punished as provided in section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S.;

(c) A person who engages in any unlawful telemarketing practice as defined in section 6-1-304 (4) shall be liable in a private civil action to the owner of the cellular telephone for consequential damages, court costs, attorney fees, and a penalty in the amount of at least three hundred dollars and not more than five hundred dollars for a first offense and at least five hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars for a second or subsequent offense.

WARRANTIES FOR ASSISTIVE TECHNOLOGY ACT

6-1-401. Legislative intent. (1) It is the intent of the general assembly to encourage and promote independent living and self-sufficiency for persons with disabilities and to reduce their need to rely on publicly funded supports. Of an estimated forty-nine million Americans with disabilities, approximately seventy percent of them are unemployed or underemployed. Having safe, reliable assistive technology represents a most essential need given the many barriers to independent living and self-sufficiency people with disabilities face.

(2) The goal of meeting this essential need can be furthered by assuring that assistive technology provided to persons with disabilities is of quality and is covered by adequate warranties to maintain their assistive technology in proper working condition, to assure availability of appropriate loaner replacement assistive technology while their own is being repaired, and to encourage manufacturers and dealers to cooperatively pool assistive technology resources for loaner purposes to assure availability without an undue burden.

(3) The general assembly finds and declares it is in the state's best interest to adopt this part 4.

6-1-402. Definitions. As used in this part 4, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Collateral costs" means expenses incurred by a consumer in connection with the repair of a nonconformity in a wheelchair, including the cost of an alternative wheelchair, if a loaner, as that term is defined in subsection (8) of this section, was not offered to the consumer, or other assistive device or service for mobility assistance. "Collateral costs" shall not include the cost of hiring a personal assistant.

(2) "Consumer" means:

(a) A purchaser of a wheelchair, if the wheelchair was purchased from a wheelchair dealer or manufacturer for purposes other than resale;

(b) A person to whom a wheelchair is transferred for purposes other than resale, if such transfer occurs before the expiration of the express warranty applicable to such wheelchair;

(c) A person who may enforce the express warranty applicable to a wheelchair; or

(d) A person who leases a wheelchair from a wheelchair lessor under a written lease.

(3) "Dealer" means a person or entity that is in the business of selling wheelchairs or any agents of that person or entity. "Dealer" includes an alternative warranty service provider.

(4) (a) "Early termination cost" means any expense or obligation that a wheelchair lessor incurs as a result of:

(I) Terminating a written lease before the termination date set forth in the lease; and

(II) Returning the wheelchair to the manufacturer.

(b) "Early termination cost" includes any prepayment penalty under a finance arrangement.

(5) "Early termination savings" means any expense or obligation that a wheelchair lessor avoids as a result of performing the acts described in paragraph (a) of subsection (4) of this section. "Early termination savings" includes any interest charge that the wheelchair lessor would have paid to finance the wheelchair or, if the wheelchair lessor did not finance the wheelchair, the difference between the total amount the lessee was obligated to pay over the period of the lease term remaining after the early termination date and the present value of that amount on the early termination date.

(6) "Express warranty" means an express warranty as set forth in sections 4-2-313 and 4-2.5-210, C.R.S. An express warranty shall cover every part of a new wheelchair except the tires and batteries.

(7) "Lessor" means a person or entity that leases a wheelchair to a consumer or that holds the lessor's rights under a written lease or any agents of that person or entity.

(8) "Loaner" means a wheelchair that is provided to the consumer for use free of charge that is not required to have the functional capabilities equal to or greater than those of the original wheelchair but that meets the following conditions:

(a) It is in good working order;

(b) It performs at a minimum the most essential functions of the original wheelchair in light of the disabilities of the user;

(c) It is usable by the consumer given the consumer's impairments; and

(d) Any difference between the loaner and the original wheelchair does not create a threat to safety.

(9) "Manufacturer" means a person or entity that manufactures or assembles wheelchairs and any agents of that person or entity, including an importer, a distributor, an authorized servicer, a factory branch, a distributor branch, and warrantors of the manufacturer's wheelchairs. "Manufacturer" does not include a dealer.

(10) "Modular assembly" means a device added to the wheelchair base to accommodate the special needs of the consumer, such as seating systems, tilt or recline systems, and specially adapted control modules.

(11) "Nonconformity" means a defect that substantially impairs the use, reliability, value, or safety of a wheelchair and that is covered by an express warranty applicable to such wheelchair or a component of such wheelchair. "Nonconformity" does not include a defect that is the result of abuse, neglect, or the unauthorized modification or alteration of a wheelchair by a consumer.

(12) "Reasonable attempt to repair" means that one of the following has occurred within the term of an express warranty applicable to a new wheelchair or within one year after first delivery of a wheelchair to a consumer, whichever occurs earlier:

(a) The same nonconformity is subject to repair at least three times by the manufacturer, lessor, or any of the manufacturer's authorized dealers; or

(b) Because of a nonconformity, the wheelchair cannot be used by the consumer for an aggregate of at least thirty days or ten consecutive business days.

(13) "Replacement wheelchair" means a wheelchair of comparable quality, size, and function.

(14) "Selling dealer" means the entity that originally sold the wheelchair to the consumer and was involved in the design, assembly, fitting, and education of the consumer on the use and maintenance of the wheelchair.

(15) "Specialty control module" means the technologically advanced electronic device of limited availability that contains the signal and output circuitry for a power wheelchair designed and assembled for use by a specific individual with severe limitations who is unable to use a standard control module.

(16) "Standard wheelchair" means a wheelchair that has seat width and depth dimensions of sixteen to eighteen inches.

(17) "Wheelchair" means any wheelchair, scooter, or modular assembly, including a demonstrator, that is motor driven or manually operated that a consumer purchases or accepts transfer of in this state for the purposes of mobility assistance.

6-1-403. Express warranty required - authorized servicers. (1) (a) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, a consumer who purchases or leases a new wheelchair either directly or indirectly through a dealer or lessor shall receive an express warranty for such wheelchair. The manufacturer shall issue this express warranty that shall extend for not less than one year after first delivery to the consumer.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, a selling dealer shall provide an express warranty for any modifications made by the dealer that shall also extend for not less than six months after first delivery to the consumer.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, the warranty for the specialty control module shall be limited to the warranty provided by the manufacturer of such specialty control module or ninety days, whichever is longer.

(3) If a manufacturer or dealer fails to furnish the express warranty required by this section, the wheelchair shall be covered by a warranty the same as if an express warranty had been provided by the manufacturer or dealer pursuant to this section.

(4) Any entity that sells or leases wheelchairs in this state, including any entity that sells or leases through mail order or catalogue sales, shall designate an authorized servicer for such chairs that is located in this state in reasonable proximity to the consumer.

(5) (a) In the event that the selling dealer from whom the consumer purchased the wheelchair goes out of business or ceases to be an authorized dealer or service center for the manufacturer, or if the dealer or consumer moves or relocates to a location that makes it unreasonable for the consumer to seek warranty service from the selling dealer, or if the consumer is dissatisfied with the selling dealer, the consumer shall be responsible for contacting the manufacturer or another authorized dealer which will be responsible for facilitating the warranty service required with an authorized dealer, to be mutually agreed upon by the consumer and the manufacturer, which entity shall be referred to as the alternative warranty service provider.

(b) In the event that an alternative warranty service provider is designated pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (5), the consumer may only seek warranty service from such alternative warranty service provider.

(c) To the extent reasonable and possible, the manufacturer shall take into account the independent mobility resources of the consumer when determining the alternative warranty service provider pursuant to the provisions of this subsection (5).

6-1-404. Remedies. (1) If a new wheelchair does not conform to the applicable express warranty and the consumer reports the nonconformity to the manufacturer, the lessor, the selling dealer, or the alternative warranty service provider, and makes the wheelchair available for repair within the warranty period, the nonconformity shall be repaired at no charge to the consumer. Any repairs performed pursuant to the provisions of this section shall be warranted for a period not less than the original warranty period. When the wheelchair is not safely moveable and there is no reasonable way for the consumer to deliver the wheelchair to the manufacturer or dealer, the manufacturer or dealer shall be responsible for the return of the wheelchair, or the wheelchair may be repaired on site at the option of the dealer.

(2) If the manufacturer authorizes the dealer or lessor to make the repair, the dealer or lessor shall make the repair and then be reimbursed by the manufacturer for the dealer's or lessor's cost for parts, labor, and repair if the nonconformity is a manufacturer's defect. A manufacturer shall respond to the dealer's or lessor's request for authorization to make a repair by the end of the business day that immediately follows the day such a request is made.

(3) When a wheelchair covered by an express warranty is tendered by a consumer to the manufacturer, selling dealer, alternative warranty service provider, or lessor for the repair of a defect, malfunction, or nonconformity to which the warranty is applicable, the consumer shall receive a loaner if the out-of-service period exceeds one day and shall keep the loaner until the requirements of section 6-1-405 or 6-1-406 are fulfilled. If the required loaner is not a standard wheelchair, the manufacturer or dealer shall make a good faith effort to make available alternative equipment that is usable by the consumer. The cost of the loaner shall be borne by the entity responsible for the defect requiring the repair or replacement of the wheelchair as provided in this section. The consumer shall have the duty to care for the loaner properly and to protect against any damage to the chair.

(4) If a nonconformity is not repaired after a reasonable attempt to repair, the manufacturer or dealer who originally supplied or modified the wheelchair, as required by this section, shall:

(a) If the wheelchair was purchased, take the following action at the direction of the consumer:

(I) Accept a return of the wheelchair, provide a replacement wheelchair of equal or greater value, and refund any collateral costs to the consumer, a holder of a perfected security interest in the wheelchair, or a third-party purchaser; or

(II) Accept a return of the wheelchair and refund to the consumer, holder of a perfected security interest in the wheelchair, or third-party purchaser not more than the full purchase price plus any finance charge, sales tax, shipping costs, and collateral costs paid;

(b) If the wheelchair was leased, take all of the following actions at the direction of the consumer:

(I) Accept a return of the wheelchair;

(II) (A) Refund to the lessor and any holder of a perfected security interest in the wheelchair the current value of the written lease.

(B) For purposes of this subparagraph (II), "current value of the written lease" means the sum of the total amount for which the consumer is obligated during the term of the lease remaining after the early termination date, the dealer's early termination costs, and the value of the wheelchair on the lease expiration date, if the lease sets forth that value, less the lessor's early termination savings.

(III) Refund to the consumer or third-party purchaser the amount paid under the lease plus any collateral costs.

(5) (a) In the event that a dispute arises as to liability under this part 4 between or among a manufacturer, dealer, lessor, or consumer, and the consumer is covered by any third-party insurer, such third-party insurer shall not be relieved of any obligation to provide benefits covered under its plan or applicable law.

(b) In the event that a wheelchair is found to be defective, the third-party payor described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (5) shall have all rights of recovery, including the right to costs, that the consumer would have had under this part 4.

6-1-405. Remedies for consumers - conditions. (1) To receive a refund or a replacement wheelchair, the consumer of a purchased wheelchair shall first offer to transfer the wheelchair with the nonconformity to the manufacturer, selling dealer, or alternative warranty service provider.

(2) Within thirty business days after receipt of the offer described in subsection (1) of this section, the manufacturer or dealer shall provide the consumer with a refund or a replacement wheelchair.

(3) When a manufacturer or dealer provides a consumer with a refund or a replacement wheelchair, such consumer shall return the wheelchair with the nonconformity, if such wheelchair is safely operable, to the manufacturer or dealer with any endorsements necessary to transfer possession to the manufacturer or dealer. When the wheelchair is not safely movable and there is no reasonable way for the consumer to deliver the wheelchair to the manufacturer or dealer, the manufacturer or dealer shall be responsible for the return of the wheelchair.

6-1-406. Remedies for consumers of leased wheelchairs - conditions. (1) To receive a refund due on a leased wheelchair, a consumer shall first offer to return the wheelchair with the nonconformity to the lessor.

(2) Within thirty business days after receipt of the offer described in subsection (1) of this section, the lessor shall provide the consumer with a refund.

(3) When a lessor provides a consumer with a refund, such consumer shall return the wheelchair with the nonconformity to such lessor.

(4) A lessor shall offer to transfer to a manufacturer or dealer the possession of a wheelchair returned pursuant to subsection (3) of this section. Within thirty business days after receiving such offer, the manufacturer or dealer shall remit the refund amount to the lessor. When the manufacturer or dealer makes such refund, the lessor shall provide the manufacturer or dealer with the endorsements necessary to transfer possession to the manufacturer or dealer.

6-1-407. Resale of a returned wheelchair - disclosure required. A wheelchair returned pursuant to this part 4 by a consumer in this state, or by a consumer in another state under a similar law of that state, shall not be sold or leased again in this state unless full disclosure is made to the prospective consumer of the reasons for the return.

6-1-408. Other remedies - waiver of rights void. (1) This part 4 shall not limit the rights or remedies available to a consumer under any other law of this state.

(2) If a consumer waives the rights granted to consumers pursuant to this part 4, such waiver shall be void as against public policy.

(3) Notwithstanding the remedies that are available to a consumer pursuant to this part 4, a consumer may pursue any other remedy, including an action to recover for damages caused by a violation of this part 4. If a manufacturer or dealer is found to have violated this part 4, a consumer shall be awarded the amount of actual damages caused by the violation and reasonable attorney fees. The consumer may be awarded collateral costs and punitive damages.

6-1-411. Defect notification. (1) A manufacturer shall be responsible for providing written notification to an owner, user, purchaser, dealer, lessor, or consumer of any known or discovered inherent defect in a wheelchair that affects the safety, usability, or reliability of that wheelchair. The manufacturer shall send such notification by first class mail to the last known address of the owner, user, purchaser, dealer, lessor, or consumer within fourteen days after learning of such a defect.

(2) A manufacturer shall be responsible for the costs of providing the notification required in subsection (1) of this section and for all costs associated with correcting any defect described in subsection (1) of this section.

(3) The provisions of this section shall apply without time limitations.

6-1-412. Disclosures. (1) Prior to the sale of any wheelchair, the seller shall disclose whether the wheelchair is new or used and whether any warranty applies to such wheelchair.

(2) Upon delivery of a new or used wheelchair, the seller shall advise the buyer of any warranty rights under this part 4 and the wheelchair's maintenance schedule and operating instructions and shall provide the buyer with a copy of the owner's manual.

(3) The disclosure required pursuant to subsection (1) of this section and the advisement required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section shall be in writing and shall, in the case of buyer who is a person adjudicated not mentally competent, be provided to the guardian, parent, legal custodian, or primary caregiver of such person.

PART 5

WARRANTIES FOR FACILITATIVE TECHNOLOGY ACT

6-1-501. Definitions. As used in this part 5, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Collateral costs" means expenses incurred by a consumer in connection with the repair of a nonconformity in a facilitative device, including the cost of an alternative facilitative device or other facilitative device or service.

(2) "Consumer" means:

(a) A purchaser of a facilitative device, if the facilitative device was purchased from a dealer or manufacturer for purposes other than resale;

(b) A person to whom a facilitative device is transferred for purposes other than resale, if such transfer occurs before the expiration of the express warranty applicable to such facilitative device;

(c) A person who may enforce the express warranty applicable to a facilitative device; or

(d) A person who leases a facilitative device from a lessor under a written lease.

(3) "Dealer" means a person or entity that is in the business of selling facilitative devices, or any agents of that person or entity. "Dealer" includes an alternative warranty service provider.

(4) (a) "Early termination cost" means any expense or obligation that a lessor of facilitative devices incurs as a result of:

(I) Terminating a written lease before the termination date set forth in the lease; and

(II) Returning the facilitative device to the manufacturer.

(b) "Early termination cost" includes any prepayment penalty under a finance arrangement.

(5) "Early termination savings" means any expense or obligation that a lessor of facilitative devices avoids as a result of performing the acts described in paragraph (a) of subsection (4) of this section. "Early termination savings" includes any interest charge that the lessor of facilitative devices would have paid to finance the facilitative device or, if the lessor did not finance the facilitative device, the difference between the total amount the lessee was obligated to pay over the period of the lease term remaining after the early termination date and the present value of that amount on the early termination date.

(6) "Express warranty" means an express warranty as set forth in sections 4-2-313 and 4-2.5-210, C.R.S. An express warranty shall cover every part of a new facilitative device.

(7) "Facilitative device" means a device that has a retail price equal to or greater than one hundred dollars and that is exclusively designed and manufactured to assist a person with a disability with such person's specific disability, through the use of facilitative technology, to be self-sufficient or to maintain or improve that person's quality of life. "Facilitative device" does not include wheelchairs as that term is defined in section 6-1-402 (17). "Facilitative device" does include the following:

(a) Telephone communication devices for the hearing impaired and other facilitative listening devices except for hearing aids as defined in section 12-5.5-301 (4), C.R.S., and cochlear implants as defined in section 12-5.5-301 (2), C.R.S.;

(b) Computer equipment and reading devices with voice input or output, optical scanners, talking software, braille printers, and other aids and devices that provide access to text by a person with a disability;

(c) Computer equipment with voice output, artificial larynges, voice amplification devices, and other alternative and augmentative communication devices;

(d) Voice recognition computer equipment, software and hardware accommodations, and other forms of alternative access to computers for persons with disabilities; and

(e) Any other device, other than a wheelchair, that enables a person with a disability to communicate, see, hear, or maneuver.

(8) "Facilitative technology" means technology used to develop technological devices to be used exclusively for the purpose of assisting a person with a disability with respect to such person's specific disability by facilitating or enhancing that person's ability to be self-sufficient.

(9) "Lessor" means a person or entity that leases a facilitative device to a consumer or that holds the lessor's rights under a written lease, or any agents of that person or entity.

(10) "Manufacturer" means a person or entity that manufactures or assembles facilitative devices and any agents of that person or entity, including an importer, a distributor, an authorized servicer, a factory branch, a distributor branch, and warrantors of the manufacturer's facilitative devices. "Manufacturer" does not include a dealer.

(11) "Nonconformity" means a defect that substantially impairs the use, reliability, value, or safety of a facilitative device and that is covered by an express warranty applicable to such facilitative device or a component of such facilitative device. "Nonconformity" does not include a defect that is the result of abuse, neglect, or the unauthorized modification or alteration of a facilitative device by a consumer.

(12) "Person with a disability" means a person who is considered to have a mental or physical disability, impairment, or handicap for purposes of any other law of this state or of the United States, including any rule or regulation.

(13) "Reasonable attempt to repair" means that one of the following has occurred within the term of an express warranty applicable to a new facilitative device or within one year after first delivery of a facilitative device to a consumer, whichever occurs earlier:

(a) The same nonconformity is subject to repair at least three times by the manufacturer, the lessor, or any of the manufacturer's authorized dealers; or

(b) Because of a nonconformity, the facilitative device cannot be used by the consumer for an aggregate of at least thirty days.

(14) "Replacement facilitative device" means a facilitative device of comparable quality, size, and function.

(15) "Selling dealer" means the entity that originally sold the facilitative device to the consumer and was involved in the design, assembly, fitting, and education of the consumer on the use and maintenance of the facilitative device.

Source: L. 98: Entire part added, p. 194, § 1, effective July 1. L. 99: (7)(a) amended, p. 654, § 9, effective May 18. L. 2007: (7)(a) amended, p. 809, § 3, effective July 1.

6-1-502. Express warranty required - authorized servicers. (1) A consumer who purchases or leases a new facilitative device either directly or indirectly through a dealer or lessor shall receive an express warranty for such facilitative device. The manufacturer shall issue this express warranty that shall extend for not less than one year after first delivery to the consumer.

(2) If a manufacturer or dealer fails to furnish the express warranty required by this section, the facilitative device shall be covered by a warranty the same as if an express warranty had been provided by the manufacturer or dealer pursuant to this section.

(3) Any entity that sells or leases facilitative devices in this state, including any entity that sells or leases through mail order or catalogue sales, shall designate an authorized servicer for such facilitative devices that is accessible to the consumer.

(4) (a) In the event that the selling dealer from whom the consumer purchased the facilitative device goes out of business or ceases to be an authorized dealer or service center for the manufacturer, or if the dealer or consumer moves or relocates to a location that makes it unreasonable for the consumer to seek warranty service from the selling dealer, or if the consumer is dissatisfied with the selling dealer, the consumer shall be responsible for contacting the manufacturer or another authorized dealer which will be responsible for facilitating the warranty service required with an authorized dealer, to be mutually agreed upon by the consumer and the manufacturer, which entity shall be referred to as the "alternative warranty service provider".

(b) In the event that an alternative warranty service provider is designated pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (4), the consumer may only seek warranty service from such alternative warranty service provider.

6-1-503. Remedies. (1) If a new facilitative device does not conform to the applicable express warranty and the consumer reports the nonconformity to the manufacturer, the lessor, the selling dealer, or the alternative warranty service provider and makes the facilitative device available for repair within the warranty period, the nonconformity shall be repaired at no charge to the consumer. Any repairs performed pursuant to the provisions of this section shall be warranted for a period not less than the original warranty period.

(2) If the manufacturer authorizes the dealer or lessor to make the repair, the dealer or lessor shall make the repair and then be reimbursed by the manufacturer for the dealer's or lessor's cost for parts, labor, and repair if the nonconformity is a manufacturer's defect. A manufacturer shall respond to the dealer's or lessor's request for authorization to make a repair within three business days after such a request is made.

(3) If a nonconformity is not repaired after a reasonable attempt to repair, the manufacturer or dealer who originally supplied or modified the facilitative device, as required by this section, shall:

(a) If the facilitative device was purchased, take the following action at the direction of the consumer:

(I) Accept a return of the facilitative device, provide a replacement facilitative device of equal or greater value, and refund any collateral costs to the consumer, a holder of a perfected security interest in the facilitative device, or a third-party purchaser; or

(II) Accept a return of the facilitative device and refund to the consumer, holder of a perfected security interest in the facilitative device, or third-party purchaser not more than the full purchase price plus any finance charge, sales tax, shipping costs, and collateral costs paid;

(b) If the facilitative device was leased, take all of the following actions at the direction of the consumer:

(I) Accept a return of the facilitative device;

(II) (A) Refund to the lessor or any holder of a perfected security interest in the facilitative device the current value of the written lease.

(B) For purposes of this subparagraph (II), "current value of the written lease" means the sum of the total amount for which the consumer is obligated during the term of the lease remaining after the early termination date, the dealer's early termination costs, and the value of the facilitative device on the lease expiration date, if the lease sets forth that value, less the lessor's early termination savings.

(III) Refund to the consumer or third-party purchaser the amount paid under the lease plus any collateral costs.

(4) (a) In the event that a dispute arises as to liability under this part 5 between or among a manufacturer, dealer, lessor, or consumer and the consumer is covered by any third-party insurer, such third-party insurer shall not be relieved of any obligation to provide benefits covered under its plan or applicable law.

(b) In the event that a facilitative device is found to be defective, the third-party payor described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (4) shall have all rights of recovery, including the right to costs, that the consumer would have had under this part 5.

6-1-504. Remedies for consumers - conditions. (1) To receive a refund or a replacement facilitative device, the consumer of a purchased facilitative device shall first offer to transfer the facilitative device with the nonconformity to the manufacturer, selling dealer, or alternative warranty service provider.

(2) Within thirty business days after receipt of the offer described in subsection (1) of this section, the manufacturer or dealer shall provide the consumer with a refund or a replacement facilitative device.

(3) When a manufacturer or dealer provides a consumer with a refund or a replacement facilitative device, such consumer shall return the facilitative device with the nonconformity to the manufacturer or dealer with any endorsements necessary to transfer possession to the manufacturer or dealer.

6-1-505. Remedies for consumers of leased facilitative devices - conditions. (1) To receive a refund due on a leased facilitative device, a consumer shall first offer to return the facilitative device with the nonconformity to the lessor.

(2) Within thirty business days after receipt of the offer described in subsection (1) of this section, the lessor shall provide the consumer with a refund.

(3) When a lessor provides a consumer with a refund, such consumer shall return the facilitative device with the nonconformity to such lessor.

(4) A lessor shall offer to transfer to the manufacturer or dealer possession of the facilitative device returned pursuant to subsection (3) of this section. Within thirty business days after receiving such offer, the manufacturer or dealer shall remit the refund amount to the lessor. When the manufacturer or dealer makes such refund, the lessor shall provide the manufacturer or dealer with the endorsements necessary to transfer possession to the manufacturer or dealer.

6-1-507. Other remedies - waiver of rights void - limitation of coverage. (1) This part 5 shall not limit the rights or remedies available to a consumer under any other law of this state.

(2) This part 5 shall be in addition to and shall not limit the rights or remedies available to a consumer under any manufacturer's warranty with respect to a facilitative device or other technological device designed to be used by and assist a person with a disability, regardless of the retail price of the facilitative device or other technological device.

(3) If a consumer waives the rights granted to consumers pursuant to this part 5, such waiver shall be void as against public policy.

(4) Notwithstanding the remedies that are available to a consumer pursuant to this part 5, a consumer may pursue any other remedy, including an action to recover damages caused by a violation of this part 5. If a manufacturer or dealer is found to have violated this part 5, a consumer shall be awarded the amount of actual damages caused by the violation and reasonable attorney fees. The consumer may be awarded collateral costs and punitive damages.

(5) Nothing in this part 5 shall be deemed or construed to be a warranty to consumers of wheelchairs described in part 4 of this article.

6-1-509. Arbitration. Disputes among manufacturers, dealers, and lessors concerning the enforcement of rights or remedies of consumers under this part 5 shall be subject to arbitration pursuant to the Colorado rules of civil procedure. The award of the arbitration panel shall be binding upon the parties and shall only be subject to court review by trial de novo.

6-1-510. Defect notification. (1) A manufacturer shall be responsible for providing written notification to an owner, user, purchaser, dealer, lessor, or consumer of any known or discovered inherent defect in a facilitative device that affects the safety, usability, or reliability of that facilitative device. The manufacturer shall send such notification by first-class mail to the last-known address of the owner, user, purchaser, dealer, lessor, or consumer within fourteen days after learning of such a defect.

(2) A manufacturer shall be responsible for the costs of providing the notification required in subsection (1) of this section and for all costs associated with correcting any defect described in subsection (1) of this section.

(3) The provisions of this section shall apply without time limitations.

6-1-511. Disclosures. (1) Prior to the sale of any facilitative device, the seller shall disclose whether the facilitative device is new or used and whether any warranty applies to such facilitative device.

(2) Upon delivery of a new or used facilitative device, the seller shall advise the consumer of any warranty rights under this part 5 and the facilitative device's maintenance schedule and operating instructions and shall provide the consumer with a copy of the owner's manual.

(3) The disclosure required pursuant to subsection (1) of this section and the advisement required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section shall be in writing and shall, in the case of a consumer who is a person adjudicated not mentally competent, be provided to the guardian, parent, legal custodian, or primary caregiver of such person.

PART 7

SPECIFIC PROVISIONS

Editor's note: This part 7 was added with relocations in 1999. Former C.R.S. section numbers are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated.

6-1-701. Registered hearing aid providers - deceptive trade practices. (Repealed)

Source: L. 99: Entire part added with relocations, p. 637, § 2, effective May 18. L. 2000: (1)(d), (1)(f), IP(2), (2)(a)(I), (2)(a)(II), (2)(a)(III), (2)(c)(I), (2)(c)(II), (2)(e)(I), (2)(e)(II), (2)(e)(III), (2)(g), and (2)(j) amended and (1)(e.5) added, p. 1092, § 11, effective July 1; (1)(a) amended, p. 1837, § 1, effective August 2. L. 2007: Entire section repealed, p. 810, § 4, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 6-1-105.5, as it existed prior to 1999.

6-1-702. Unsolicited facsimiles - deceptive trade practice. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person:

(a) Uses a telephone facsimile machine, computer, or other device to send an unsolicited advertisement to a telephone facsimile machine;

(b) Uses a computer or other electronic device to send any message via a telephone facsimile machine unless such person clearly marks, in a margin at the top or bottom of each transmitted page of the message or on the first page of the transmission:

(I) The date and time the facsimile is sent;

(II) An identification of the person sending the facsimile; and

(III) The telephone number of the sending machine of the person; or

(c) Violates 47 U.S.C. sec. 227 or any rule promulgated thereunder.

(2) For the purposes of this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Telephone facsimile machine" means equipment that has the capacity to:

(I) Transcribe text or images from paper into an electronic signal and to transmit that signal over a regular telephone line; or

(II) Transcribe text or images from an electronic signal received over a regular telephone line onto paper.

(b) "Unsolicited advertisement" means material that advertises the commercial availability or quality of any property, good, or service and that is transmitted to a person without that person's prior express invitation or permission.

(3) (a) The provisions of this section shall not apply to:

(I) A person who has an existing business relationship with the person receiving a facsimile; or

(II) A nonprofit organization operating pursuant to 26 U.S.C. sec. 501 (c) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended, that sends a facsimile to a nonmember recipient, if the nonprofit organization has received, by facsimile or other means, such nonmember recipient's prior express written invitation or permission to deliver facsimiles that includes the recipient's signature and facsimile number.

(b) For the purposes of this subsection (3), "existing business relationship" means a relationship formed by a voluntary two-way communication between a person or entity and a residential or business subscriber, with or without an exchange of consideration on the basis of an inquiry, application, purchase, membership, or transaction by the residential or business subscriber regarding products or services offered by such person or entity.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 6-1-105 (1)(p.3), (1)(p.5), and (1)(p.7), as it existed prior to 1999.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Regulating Faxing Activity Under State and Federal Law", see 34 Colo. Law. 63 (December 2005).

Colorado state courts have jurisdiction over private actions under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), 47 U.S.C. § 227, under the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution, and the TCPA does not limit this jurisdiction, even assuming congress could do so. When congress created a private right of action that could be prosecuted in state courts, it was acknowledging that the state could apply their own rules of procedure to such an action, but it did not intend to require that any state adopt a further law or rule of court to allow the prosecution of such actions in its courts. The supremacy clause requires the exercise of such jurisdiction as the state court possesses. Consumer Crusade, Inc. v. Affordable Health Care Solutions, Inc., 121 P.3d 350 (Colo. App. 2005).

"If otherwise permitted" phrase under TCPA provisions creating a private right of action is merely an acknowledgment by congress that states have the right to structure their own court systems and that state courts are not obligated to change their procedural rules to accommodate TCPA claims. Under this view, no state can refuse to entertain a private TCPA action, but a state is not compelled to adopt a special procedural rule for such actions. Consumer Crusade, Inc. v. Affordable Health Care Solutions, Inc., 121 P.3d 350 (Colo. App. 2005).

Claims under the Colorado Consumer Protection Act (CCPA) are not assignable because the statute is penal in nature. U.S. Fax Law Ctr., Inc. v. iHire, Inc., 374 F. Supp.2d 924 (D. Colo. 2005); U.S. Fax Law Ctr., Inc. v. T2 Techs., Inc., 183 P.3d 626 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 476 F.3d 1112 (10th Cir. 2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1139, 128 S. Ct. 1062, 169 L. Ed. 2d 806 (2008).

A four-part test determines whether the CCPA is penal in nature and whether a CCPA claim is assignable. First, to be penal, a statute must create a new and distinct statutory cause of action. Second, the statute must require no proof of actual damages as a condition precedent to recovery. Third, the statute must impose a penalty in excess of actual damages. Finally, the statute must serve a public interest through a deterrent effect by the damages awarded. U.S. Fax Law Ctr., Inc. v. iHire, Inc., 374 F. Supp. 2d 924 (D. Colo. 2005); U.S. Fax Law Ctr., Inc. v. T2 Techs., Inc., 183 P.3d 626 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd on other grounds, 476 F.3d 1112 (10th Cir. 2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1139, 128 S. Ct. 1062, 169 L. Ed. 2d 806 (2008).

The same test applies to a claim under the TCPA. Kruse v. McKenna, 178 P.3d 1198 (Colo.), cert. denied, 555 U.S. 821, 129 S. Ct. 112, 172 L. Ed. 2d 35 (2008).

Under Colorado law, a claim for liquidated damages under the TCPA is a claim for a penalty that cannot be assigned. Kruse v. McKenna, 178 P.3d 1198 (Colo.), cert. denied, 555 U.S. 821, 129 S. Ct. 112, 172 L. Ed. 2d 35 (2008).

An action based on receipt by individuals of unsolicited faxes in violation of the TCPA is not assignable because such an action is in the nature of a violation of the right to privacy. McKenna v. Oliver, 159 P.3d 697 (Colo. App. 2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1140, 128 S. Ct. 1062, 169 L. Ed. 2d 806 (2008).

Under the plain language of § 6-1-113 (1), the only assignees authorized to bring an action under the CCPA are those whose assignors were actual consumers who purchased defendant's goods, services, or property. U.S. Fax Law Ctr. v. Myron Corp., 159 P.3d 745 (Colo. App. 2006); U.S. Fax Law Ctr., Inc. v. T2 Techs., Inc., 183 P.3d 626 (Colo. App. 2007).

6-1-702.5. Commercial electronic mail messages - deceptive trade practice - remedies - definitions - short title - legislative declaration. (1) This section shall be known and may be cited as the "Spam Reduction Act of 2008".

(2) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person:

(a) Violates any provision of the federal "Controlling the Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing ('CAN-SPAM') Act of 2003", 15 U.S.C. secs. 7701 to 7713, or any rule promulgated under the federal act that can be enforced by states or providers of internet access service pursuant to 15 U.S.C. sec. 7706 (f) or (g);

(b) Knowingly fails to disclose the actual point-of-origin electronic mail address of a commercial electronic mail message in order to mislead or deceive the recipient as to the source or sender of the message;

(c) Knowingly falsifies electronic mail transmission information or other routing information for a commercial electronic mail message in order to mislead or deceive the recipient as to the source or sender of the message;

(d) Knowingly uses a third party's internet address or domain name without the third party's consent for the purposes of transmitting a commercial electronic mail message; or

(e) Knowingly sends a commercial electronic mail message to any person that has previously given the sender a do-not-email directive under 15 U.S.C. sec. 7704 (a) (3) (A) or provides the electronic mail address of any such person to a third party for the purpose of enabling the third party to send a commercial electronic mail message, other than pursuant to affirmative consent, to that electronic mail address.

(3) As used in this section:

(a) "Affirmative consent" has the same meaning as set forth in 15 U.S.C. sec. 7702.

(b) "Commercial electronic mail message" has the same meaning as set forth in 15 U.S.C. sec. 7702.

(c) "Electronic mail service provider" means a provider of internet access service, as defined in 47 U.S.C. sec. 231.

(d) "Sender" has the same meaning as set forth in 15 U.S.C. sec. 7702.

(4) (a) In the case of any violation of this section, an electronic mail service provider whose network or facilities were used in the transmission or attempted transmission of a commercial electronic mail message may file a civil action in a court of competent jurisdiction and may, upon proof of such violation, recover such sums as are allowed under this subsection (4).

(b) (I) In any such action, if the electronic mail service provider prevails, the provider shall be entitled to actual damages. Upon a showing that the sender of a commercial electronic mail message violated any provision of this section, whether or not the violation resulted in a financial loss or injury, the electronic mail service provider may recover attorney fees and costs.

(II) In any such action, if the electronic mail service provider prevails, the provider is also entitled to recover, as part of the judgment, statutory damages in the amount of one thousand dollars for each commercial electronic mail message transmitted in violation of this section; except that the total amount of statutory damages awarded against a single defendant based on one transaction or occurrence shall not exceed ten million dollars.

(c) The remedies, duties, prohibitions, and penalties of this subsection (4) are not exclusive and are in addition to all other causes of action, remedies, and penalties provided by law.

(d) At the request of any party to an action brought pursuant to this subsection (4), the court may, in its discretion, conduct all legal proceedings in such a way as to protect the secrecy and security of any computer, computer network, computer data, or computer software involved in order to prevent possible recurrence of the same or similar conduct by another person and to protect the trade secrets of any party.

(e) Electronic mail service providers that adopt and implement terms, conditions, or technical measures in good faith to prevent or prohibit the origination or transmission of commercial electronic mail messages in violation of this section shall be immune from civil liability for any such actions, and no provision of this section shall be construed to create any liability for such actions.

(f) No electronic mail service provider shall be liable for the mere transmission of commercial electronic mail messages over the provider's computer network or facilities.

(g) This section shall not be construed to require any electronic mail service provider to carry or deliver any electronic mail merely because a sender complies with the provisions of this section.

(h) This section shall apply when a commercial electronic mail message is sent to a computer located in Colorado or to an electronic mail address that the sender knows, or has reason to know, is held by a Colorado resident.

(5) (a) The attorney general is hereby specifically authorized to take all actions and invoke all remedies authorized under 15 U.S.C. sec. 7706 (f) to enforce this section. Such actions and remedies are not exclusive and are in addition to all other causes of action, remedies, and penalties provided by this article and any other state or federal law.

(b) The attorney general is encouraged to and may, in his or her discretion, cooperate with an electronic mail service provider in an action by such provider under 15 U.S.C. sec. 7706 (g).

(6) The general assembly:

(a) Finds that all violations of the federal "CAN-SPAM Act of 2003" are inherently false and deceptive;

(b) Determines that falsity and deception in any portion of a commercial electronic mail message or an attachment thereto harms Colorado consumers and threatens Colorado's economy; and

(c) Declares that the intent of this section and of section 18-5-308, C.R.S., is to exercise state authority in a manner consistent with, and to the maximum extent permissible under, the federal preemption provisions of 15 U.S.C. sec. 7707 (b).

6-1-703. Time shares - deceptive trade practices. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person engages in one or more of the following activities in connection with the advertisement or sale of a time share:

(a) Misrepresents the investment, resale, or rental value of any time share; the conditions under which a purchaser may exchange the right to use accommodations or facilities in one location for the right to use accommodations or facilities in another location; or the period of time during which the accommodations or facilities contracted for will be available to the purchaser;

(b) Fails to allow any purchaser of a time share a right to rescind the sale within five calendar days after the sale;

(c) Fails to provide conspicuous notice on the contract of the right of a purchaser of a time share to rescind the sale either by telegram, mail, or hand delivery. For purposes of this section, notice of rescission is considered given, if by mail when postmarked, if by telegram when filed for telegraphic transmission, or if by hand delivery when delivered to the seller's place of business.

(d) Fails to refund any down payment or deposit made pursuant to a time share contract within seven days after the seller receives the purchaser's written notice of rescission.

Source: L. 99: Entire part added with relocations, p. 642, § 2, effective May 18.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 6-1-105 (1)(s), as it existed prior to 1999.

6-1-704. Health clubs - deceptive trade practices. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person engages in one or more of the following activities in connection with the advertisement or sale of a membership in a health club:

(a) Fails to allow any buyer of a membership in a health club to rescind the membership contract within three business days after receipt by the buyer of a copy of the contract;

(b) Fails to provide conspicuous notice of the right of a purchaser of a health club membership to rescind the sale either by telegram, mail, or hand delivery. For purposes of this section, notice of rescission is considered given, if by mail when postmarked, if by telegram when filed for telegraphic transmission, or if by hand delivery when delivered to the seller's place of business.

(c) Fails to allow the buyer, or the estate of the buyer, to cancel the membership contract when:

(I) The buyer dies;

(II) The buyer becomes totally physically disabled as determined by a licensed physician or advanced practice nurse for the duration of the membership contract;

(III) The health club is moved to a location that is more than five miles from the location of the establishment when the buyer entered into the membership contract;

(IV) The membership in the health club is transferred to a location of the same club or another club, which location is more than five miles from the location of the club when the buyer entered into the contract, and this transfer occurs because of cessation of health club services at the club location from which the membership is transferred;

(V) The seller permanently discontinues operation of the health club or sells the health club and the sale results in substantial alteration of the quality of health club services or facilities or the nature of benefits so that they no longer conform to the provisions of the membership contract, but there shall be a thirty-day "right to cure" during which the fees payable by the buyer under the membership contract shall be suspended and the health club may bring the services, facilities, and benefits into conformance with the provisions of the membership contract;

(d) Fails to refund all payments made pursuant to the membership contract, less a prorated fee for days of actual use of the health club by the buyer, within fifteen days after the seller receives the buyer's written notice of rescission;

(e) When a health club is planned or under construction, and the sale of the membership takes place before the health club is completed, fails to:

(I) Disclose clearly and conspicuously in the membership contract the date on which the health club will open for use;

(II) Escrow all preopening membership sales receipts in a separate account in a bank or trust company doing business in the state of Colorado or provide a cash bond, letter of credit, certificate of deposit, or other similar surety, in the amount of fifty thousand dollars, for the repayment of amounts actually paid under preopening membership agreements until the health club is open for business;

(III) Allow the buyer to cancel the membership contract and receive a full refund of all payments made pursuant to the membership contract if the date the health club will open for use is delayed more than sixty days from the date of opening specified in the membership contract;

(f) Sells any membership contract, the actual or financial duration of which, including any option to renew, is longer than twenty-four months; except that a person does not engage in a deceptive trade practice when such person sells any membership contract the actual or financial duration of which is not longer than thirty-six months with a buyer's option to renew annually thereafter if:

(I) The health club has been in operation in this state more than two years; and

(II) The health club maintains a bond with a corporate surety from a company authorized to do business in this state or other security acceptable to and approved by the attorney general; and

(III) The aggregate amount of the bond is one hundred thousand dollars for each club location; and

(IV) The bond is payable to the state for the benefit of any buyer injured in the event the health club goes out of business prior to the expiration of the buyer's membership contract; and

(V) The bond is maintained for so long as the health club has any membership contracts in place and outstanding, the specified term for which exceeds twenty-four months; and

(VI) The bond is not cancelled, revoked, or terminated except after notice to, and with the written consent of, the attorney general at least forty-five days in advance of such cancellation, revocation, or termination; and

(VII) The annual renewal option for continued membership contained in the membership contract is not automatic but requires that the buyer affirmatively accept the renewal option by notice in writing to the person selling the membership contract for reasonable consideration on or before the expiration of each contract term, but not more than six months prior to the expiration of any contract term; and

(VIII) In the event that the health club elects to cancel, revoke, or terminate the bond, it posts a notice of such action, in twenty-four-point bold-faced type, to its customers, on the front door of such health club; or

(g) Makes any representation, orally or in writing, in connection with the offer or sale of a membership in a health club that a membership contract is for a lifetime or is for a perpetual membership, or uses coercive sales tactics, or misrepresents the quality, benefits, or nature of the services.

6-1-705. Dance studios - deceptive trade practices. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person engages in one or more of the following activities or practices in connection with the advertisement, sale, or performance of contracts for dance studio services in which the total amount of the obligation that the purchaser undertakes is in excess of five hundred dollars:

(a) Fails to execute a written contract and to provide a copy of the contract to the purchaser at the time the purchaser signs it;

(b) Fails to include, printed in ten-point, bold-faced type in the contract:

(I) The total amount of the obligation the purchaser undertakes;

(II) All goods and services that the purchaser is to receive under the contract set forth in specific terms, including the total number or hours of dance instruction to be given by the dance studio under the contract broken down by different hourly rates, if applicable, and all other goods and services;

(III) The itemized cost of all goods and services to be provided under the contract, including but not limited to the cost per hour of dance instruction and the different hourly rates for different types of dance lessons, if any, and any charges to be paid by the purchaser for cost of travel, accommodations, or other expenses of dance studio owners, operators, managers, agents, or employees, the total cost of which shall equal the amount to be specified in the contract pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b); and

(IV) The purchaser's right to cancel as specified in paragraphs (c) to (e) of this subsection (1);

(c) Fails to include in the contract the following statement in bold-faced type under the conspicuous caption:

PURCHASER'S RIGHT TO CANCEL:

YOU, THE PURCHASER, MAY CANCEL THIS CONTRACT AT ANY TIME DURING THE TERM OF ITS EFFECTIVENESS. YOU MUST GIVE WRITTEN NOTICE TO THE DANCE STUDIO THAT YOU DO NOT WANT TO BE FURTHER BOUND BY THIS CONTRACT. THE NOTICE OF CANCELLATION MAY BE SERVED IN PERSON, BY TELEGRAM, OR BY MAIL TO THE DANCE STUDIO AT THE ADDRESS STATED IN THIS CONTRACT OR AT THE LOCATION WHERE DANCE LESSONS ARE CONDUCTED. WITHIN THIRTY DAYS AFTER RECEIPT OF YOUR NOTICE OF CANCELLATION, THE DANCE STUDIO SHALL REFUND TO YOU THE CONTRACT PRICE LESS THE COST OF GOODS AND SERVICES ALREADY RECEIVED BY YOU AND AN AMOUNT OF LIQUIDATED DAMAGES EQUAL TO NOT MORE THAN TEN PERCENT OF THE COST OF THE REMAINING GOODS AND SERVICES.

(d) Fails to allow the contract to be cancelled by the purchaser upon the purchaser's serving written notice to the dance studio;

(e) Fails, upon cancellation of a contract for dance studio services, to refund to the purchaser all prepayments made under the contract, minus the total of:

(I) The amount equal to the cost of goods and services actually received by the purchaser under the contract; and

(II) An amount of liquidated damages equal to not more than ten percent of the cost of the remaining goods and services not received by the purchaser;

(f) Subtracts a total amount under subparagraphs (I) and (II) of paragraph (e) of this subsection (1) that exceeds the total amount of the obligation as set out in subparagraph (I) of paragraph (b) of this subsection (1);

(g) Fails to have a performance bond in the amount of twenty-five thousand dollars, as to each studio, location, or owner, for the benefit of any person who enters into a contract for dance studio services in which the total amount of the obligation that the purchaser undertakes is in excess of five hundred dollars and who is damaged by the failure of the dance studio to provide the services specified in the contract or by the failure of the dance studio to comply with this section, which performance bond guarantees the dance studio's performance of its contractual obligations with the purchaser in accordance with the provisions of this section, or fails to disclose in the contract with such purchaser the existence of the performance bond;

(h) Sells or induces any person to purchase or to become obligated directly or contingently, or both, under more than one contract for dance studio services at the same time for the purpose of avoiding the provisions of this section; or

(i) Assigns or accepts an assignment of dance studio services without the written consent of the purchaser.

6-1-706. Buyers' clubs - deceptive trade practices. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person engages in one or more of the following activities or practices in connection with the advertisement, sale, or performance of any contract of membership in a buyers' club in which the price of the membership equals or exceeds one hundred dollars:

(a) Fails to allow any purchaser of a membership in a buyers' club to rescind the membership contract at any time prior to the close of business on the next business day following the day the purchaser signs the contract;

(b) Fails to provide in the membership contract the following mandatory disclosure under the heading:

PURCHASER'S RIGHT TO CANCEL:

THE PURCHASER MAY CANCEL THIS CONTRACT FOR ANY REASON AT ANY TIME PRIOR TO THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS ON THE NEXT BUSINESS DAY FOLLOWING THE DAY THE PURCHASER SIGNS THE MEMBERSHIP CONTRACT BY DELIVERING OR MAILING TO THE BUYERS' CLUB WRITTEN NOTICE OF CANCELLATION. NOTICE OF CANCELLATION, IF SENT BY MAIL, IS DEEMED TO BE GIVEN AS OF THE DATE THE MAILED NOTICE WAS POSTMARKED.

Said heading and disclosure shall be in capital letters in no less than ten-point, bold-faced type.

(c) Fails to refund all payments made pursuant to the membership contract within fifteen days after the buyers' club receives notice of cancellation from the purchaser.

6-1-707. Use of title or degree - deceptive trade practice. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person:

(a) (I) Claims, either orally or in writing, to possess either an academic degree or an honorary degree or the title associated with said degree, unless the person has, in fact, been awarded said degree from an institution that is:

(A) Accredited by a regional or professional accrediting agency recognized by the United States department of education or the council on postsecondary accreditation, or is recognized as a candidate for accreditation by such an agency;

(B) Provided, operated, and supported by a state government or any of its political subdivisions or by the federal government;

(C) A school, institute, college, or university chartered outside the United States, the academic degree from which has been validated by an accrediting agency approved by the United States department of education as equivalent to the baccalaureate or postbaccalaureate degree conferred by a regionally accredited college or university in the United States;

(D) A religious seminary, institute, college, or university that offers only educational programs that prepare students for a religious vocation, career, occupation, profession, or lifework, and the nomenclature of whose certificates, diplomas, or degrees clearly identifies the religious character of the educational program;

(E) Authorized to grant degrees pursuant to article 2 of title 23, C.R.S.

(II) This paragraph (a) shall not apply to persons claiming degrees or certificates that were submitted as a requirement of the application process for licensure, certification, or registration pursuant to title 12, C.R.S.

(III) No person awarded a doctorate degree from an institution not listed in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) shall claim in the state, either orally or in writing, the title "Dr." before the person's name or any mark, appellation, or series of letters, numbers, or words, such as, but not limited to, "Ph.D.","Ed.D.", "D.N.", or "D.Th.", which signify, purport, or are generally taken to signify satisfactory completion of the requirements of a doctorate degree, after the person's name.

(b) Claims either orally or in writing to be a "dietitian", "dietician", "certified dietitian", or "certified dietician" or uses the abbreviation "C.D." or "D." to indicate that such person is a dietitian, unless such person:

(I) Possesses a baccalaureate, masters, or doctorate degree in human nutrition, foods and nutrition, dietetics, nutrition education, food systems management, or public health nutrition from an institution that is:

(A) Accredited by a regional or professional accrediting agency recognized by the United States department of education or the council on postsecondary accreditation, or is recognized as a candidate for accreditation by such accrediting agency;

(B) Authorized to grant degrees pursuant to article 2 of title 23, C.R.S.; or

(C) A school, institute, college, or university chartered outside the United States, the academic degree from which has been validated by an accrediting agency approved by the United States department of education as equivalent to a baccalaureate or postbaccalaureate degree conferred by a regionally accredited college or university in the United States; and

(II) Meets one of the following:

(A) Completes at least nine hundred hours of a planned, continuous, preprofessional work experience in a nutrition or dietetic practice under the supervision of a qualified dietitian; or

(B) Holds a certificate of registered dietitian through the commission on dietetic registration;

(c) Repealed.

(d) (I) Claims either orally or in writing to be a "certified optician" or "certified opticien", unless such person holds a current certificate of competence issued by the American board of opticianry. Each certificate shall be prominently displayed or maintained in such person's place of business and made available for immediate inspection and review by any consumer or agent of the state of Colorado. No person may associate a service, product, or business name with the title "certified optician" unless such person holds the required certificate of competence. This paragraph (d) shall not apply to persons authorized under article 36 or 40 of title 12, C.R.S., to practice medicine or optometry.

(II) Performs or claims orally or in writing to be able to perform the following procedures, and such person is a certified optician:

(A) Vision therapy;

(B) Refractions;

(C) Automated refractions; except that a certified optician may use an auto refractor to provide vision screenings for the sole purpose of determining if the subject of the screening needs a further eye examination;

(D) Refractometry;

(E) Fitting contact lenses;

(F) Keratometry or automated keratometry; or

(G) Any other act that constitutes the practice of optometry or the practice of medicine.

(III) A certified optician does not engage in a deceptive trade practice under subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (d), if said optician performs the described procedures under the direction and supervision of a person who has statutory authority under title 12, C.R.S., to supervise the work of others within the scope of his or her license.

(e) Claims to be a "sign language interpreter", "interpreter for the deaf", "deaf interpreter", "ASL-English interpreter", "American sign language (ASL) interpreter", "transliterator", "certified sign language interpreter", "certified interpreter for the deaf", "certified deaf interpreter", "certified ASL-English interpreter", "certified American sign language (ASL) interpreter", or "certified transliterator", unless he or she holds a current certification issued by the registry of interpreters for the deaf or a successor organization. A registry of interpreters for the deaf, or successor organization, membership card that shows proof of current membership and certification shall be made available for immediate inspection and review by any consumer or agent of the state of Colorado.

6-1-708. Motor vehicle sales and leases - deceptive trade practice. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person:

(a) Commits any of the following acts pertaining to the sale or lease of a motor vehicle or a used motor vehicle:

(I) Guarantees to a purchaser or lessee of a motor vehicle or used motor vehicle who conditions such purchase or lease on the approval of a consumer credit transaction as defined in section 5-1-301 (12), C.R.S., that such purchaser or lessee has been approved for a consumer credit transaction if such approval is not final. For purposes of this subparagraph (I), "guarantee" means a written document or oral representation between the purchaser or lessee and the person selling or leasing the vehicle that leads such purchaser or lessee to a reasonable good faith belief that the financing of such vehicle is certain.

(II) Accepts a used motor vehicle as a trade-in on the purchase or lease of a motor vehicle or used motor vehicle and sells or leases such used motor vehicle before the purchaser or lessee has been approved for a consumer credit transaction as defined in section 5-1-301 (12), C.R.S., if such approval is a condition of the purchase or lease;

(III) Fails to return to the purchaser or lessee any collateral or down payment tendered by such purchaser or lessee conditioned upon a guarantee by a motor vehicle dealer or used motor vehicle dealer that a consumer credit transaction as defined in section 5-1-301 (12), C.R.S., has been approved for such purchaser or lessee, if such approval was a condition of the sale or lease and if such financing is not approved and the purchaser or lessee is required to return the vehicle;

(b) Fails to disclose in writing, prior to sale, to the purchaser that a motor vehicle is a salvage vehicle, as defined in section 42-6-102 (17), C.R.S., or that a vehicle was repurchased by or returned to the manufacturer from a previous owner for inability to conform the motor vehicle to the manufacturer's warranty in accordance with article 10 of title 42, C.R.S., or with any other state or federal motor vehicle warranty law or knowingly fails to disclose in writing, prior to sale, to the purchaser that a motor vehicle has sustained material damage at any one time from any one incident.

(2) For purposes of this section, if a motor vehicle or used motor vehicle dealer guarantees financing and if approval for financing is a condition of the sale or lease, such motor vehicle or used motor vehicle dealer shall not retain any portion of such purchaser's down payment or any trade-in vehicle as payment of rent on any vehicle released by such dealer to such purchaser pending approval of financing even if such dealer has obtained a waiver of such purchaser's right to return a vehicle or has contracted for a rental agreement with such purchaser.

6-1-711. Restrictions on credit card receipts - legislative declaration - application - definitions. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that credit, particularly the use of credit cards, is an important tool for consumers in today's economy. Unscrupulous persons often fraudulently use the credit card accounts of others by stealing the credit card itself or obtaining the necessary information to fraudulently charge the purchase of goods and services to another person's credit card account. The general assembly, therefore, finds, determines, and declares that protection from unauthorized use of credit card accounts is necessary.

(2) No person that accepts credit cards for the transaction of business shall print more than the last five digits of the credit card account number or print the credit card expiration date, or both, on a credit card receipt.

(3) This section shall apply only to receipts that are electronically printed and shall not apply to transactions in which the sole means of recording the credit card number is by handwriting or by an imprint or copy of the credit card.

(4) For the purposes of this section, "credit card" means a card or device existing for the purpose of obtaining money, property, labor, or services on credit; those cards pursuant to which unpaid balances are payable upon demand; and any card or device used to withdraw moneys from a bank account.

(5) (a) Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (5), this section shall apply to any entity formed on and after April 25, 2002, that uses a cash register or any other machine or device that electronically imprints receipts on credit card transactions and is placed into service on or after April 25, 2002.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (5), on and after January 1, 2004, this section shall apply to any cash register and any other machine or device that electronically imprints receipts on credit card transactions for entities that were formed on or before April 25, 2002.

(c) On and after January 1, 2005, this section shall apply to:

(I) Institutions of higher education; and

(II) Persons who employ no more than twenty-five employees or who have generated no more than five million dollars annually in revenues from the person's business activities.

6-1-712. Discount health plan and cards - deceptive trade practices. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person:

(a) Solicits, markets, advertises, promotes, or sells to a consumer residing in Colorado a discount health plan and such plan materials:

(I) Fail to provide to the consumer a clear and conspicuous disclosure that the discount health plan is not insurance and that the plan only provides for discount health care services from participating providers within the plan;

(II) Fail to provide the name, address, and telephone number of the administrator of the discount health plan;

(III) Fail to make available to the consumer through a toll-free telephone number, upon request of the consumer, a complete and accurate list of the participating providers within the plan in the consumer's local area and a list of the services for which the discounts are applicable. Such list shall be available to the consumer upon request commencing with the time of purchase and shall be updated at least every six months.

(IV) Fail to use common usage for words and phrases in describing the discounts or access to discounts offered, and such failure results in representations of the discounts that are misleading, deceptive, or fraudulent;

(V) Fail to provide to the consumer notice of the right to cancel such discount health plan pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (1);

(b) Offers discounted health services or products that are not authorized by a contract with each provider listed in conjunction with the discount health plan;

(c) Fails to allow a purchaser of a discount health plan to cancel such plan within thirty days after purchase;

(d) Fails to refund all membership fees paid to the discount health plan by the consumer within thirty days after timely notification of the cancellation of the plan to the discount health plan administrator pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (1).

(2) The provisions of this section shall not apply to:

(a) A carrier as defined in section 10-16-102 (8), C.R.S., that offers discounts for services to a covered person, as defined in section 10-16-102 (13.5), C.R.S., and such services are supplemental to and not part of the health coverage plan of the carrier;

(b) A medicare endorsed drug card as approved by the centers for medicare and medicaid services pursuant to the "Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003", Public Law 108-173.

(3) For the purposes of this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Health care services" shall have the same meaning as in section 10-16-102 (22), C.R.S.

(b) "Provider" shall have the same meaning as in section 10-16-102 (36), C.R.S.

6-1-713. Disposal of personal identifying documents - policy. (1) Each public and private entity in the state that uses documents during the course of business that contain personal identifying information shall develop a policy for the destruction or proper disposal of paper documents containing personal identifying information.

(2) For the purposes of this section, "personal identifying information" means: A social security number; a personal identification number; a password; a pass code; an official state or government-issued driver's license or identification card number; a government passport number; biometric data; an employer, student, or military identification number; or a financial transaction device.

(3) A public entity that is managing its records in compliance with part 1 of article 80 of title 24, C.R.S., shall be deemed to have met its obligations under subsection (1) of this section.

(4) Unless an entity specifically contracts with a recycler or disposal firm for destruction of documents that contain personal identifying information, nothing herein shall require a recycler or disposal firm to verify that the documents contained in the products it receives for disposal or recycling have been properly destroyed or disposed of as required by this section.

6-1-714. Unfair drug pricing practice - definitions - deceptive trade practice. (1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Emergency" means a declaration made by the department of public health and environment pursuant to section 25-1.5-101 (1) (aa), C.R.S., after the department has determined that there is a shortage of drugs critical to public safety.

(b) "Unfair drug pricing" means charging a consumer an unconscionable amount for the sale of a drug. Unfair drug pricing occurs if:

(I) The price charged by a wholesaler, distributor, or retailer exceeds by more than ten percent the average price for the drug charged by that wholesaler, distributor, or retailer during the thirty days immediately preceding the declaration of an emergency; and

(II) The increase in the amount charged by a wholesaler, distributor, or retailer is not attributable to cost factors of the retailer, including, but not limited to, replacement costs, taxes, and transportation costs incurred by that wholesaler, distributor, or retailer.

(2) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, the person engages in the practice of unfair drug pricing.

6-1-715. Confidentiality of social security numbers. (1) Except as provided in subsections (2) to (4) of this section, a person or entity may not do any of the following:

(a) Publicly post or publicly display in any manner an individual's social security number. "Publicly post" or "publicly display" means to intentionally communicate or otherwise make available to the general public.

(b) Print an individual's social security number on any card required for the individual to access products or services provided by the person or entity;

(c) Require an individual to transmit his or her social security number over the internet, unless the connection is secure or the social security number is encrypted;

(d) Require an individual to use his or her social security number to access an internet web site, unless a password or unique personal identification number or other authentication device is also required to access the internet web site; and

(e) Print an individual's social security number on any materials that are mailed to the individual, unless state or federal law requires, permits, or authorizes the social security number to be on the document to be mailed. Notwithstanding this paragraph (e), social security numbers may be included in applications and forms sent by mail, including documents sent as part of an application or enrollment process, or to establish, amend, or terminate an account, contract, or policy, or to confirm the accuracy of the social security number. A social security number that is permitted to be mailed under this section may not be printed, in whole or in part, on a postcard or other mailer not requiring an envelope, or visible on the envelope or without the envelope having been opened.

(2) (a) A person or entity that has used, prior to January 1, 2007, an individual's social security number in a manner inconsistent with subsection (1) of this section, may continue using that individual's social security number in that manner on or after January 1, 2007, if all of the following conditions are met:

(I) The use of the social security number is continuous. If the use is stopped for any reason, subsection (1) of this section shall apply.

(II) The person or entity provides the individual with an annual disclosure that informs the individual that he or she has the right to stop the use of his or her social security number in a manner prohibited by subsection (1) of this section.

(b) The person or entity shall implement a written request by an individual to stop the use of his or her social security number in a manner prohibited by subsection (1) of this section within thirty days after the receipt of the request. The person or entity may not impose a fee or charge for implementing the request.

(c) The person or entity shall not deny services to an individual because the individual makes a written request pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (2).

(3) This section shall not prevent the collection, use, or release of a social security number as required, permitted, or authorized by state or federal law or the use of a social security number for internal verification or administrative purposes, including by the department of revenue.

(4) This section shall not apply to:

(a) Documents or records that are recorded or required to be open to the public pursuant to the constitution or laws of this state or by court rule or order, and this section shall not limit access to these documents or records; or

(b) An entity that is subject to the federal "Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996", as amended, 42 U.S.C. sec. 1320d to 1320d-9.

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 274, § 1, effective January 1, 2007. L. 2010: (4)(b) amended, (HB 10-1422), ch. 419, p. 2063, § 8, effective August 11.

6-1-716. Notification of security breach. (1) Definitions. As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Breach of the security of the system" means the unauthorized acquisition of unencrypted computerized data that compromises the security, confidentiality, or integrity of personal information maintained by an individual or a commercial entity. Good faith acquisition of personal information by an employee or agent of an individual or commercial entity for the purposes of the individual or commercial entity is not a breach of the security of the system if the personal information is not used for or is not subject to further unauthorized disclosure.

(b) "Commercial entity" means any private legal entity, whether for-profit or not-for-profit.

(c) "Notice" means:

(I) Written notice to the postal address listed in the records of the individual or commercial entity;

(II) Telephonic notice;

(III) Electronic notice, if a primary means of communication by the individual or commercial entity with a Colorado resident is by electronic means or the notice provided is consistent with the provisions regarding electronic records and signatures set forth in 15 U.S.C. sec. 7001 et seq.; or

(IV) Substitute notice, if the individual or the commercial entity required to provide notice demonstrates that the cost of providing notice will exceed two hundred fifty thousand dollars, the affected class of persons to be notified exceeds two hundred fifty thousand Colorado residents, or the individual or the commercial entity does not have sufficient contact information to provide notice. Substitute notice consists of all of the following:

(A) E-mail notice if the individual or the commercial entity has e-mail addresses for the members of the affected class of Colorado residents;

(B) Conspicuous posting of the notice on the web site page of the individual or the commercial entity if the individual or the commercial entity maintains one; and

(C) Notification to major statewide media.

(d) (I) "Personal information" means a Colorado resident's first name or first initial and last name in combination with any one or more of the following data elements that relate to the resident, when the data elements are not encrypted, redacted, or secured by any other method rendering the name or the element unreadable or unusable:

(A) Social security number;

(B) Driver's license number or identification card number;

(C) Account number or credit or debit card number, in combination with any required security code, access code, or password that would permit access to a resident's financial account.

(II) "Personal information" does not include publicly available information that is lawfully made available to the general public from federal, state, or local government records or widely distributed media.

(2) Disclosure of breach. (a) An individual or a commercial entity that conducts business in Colorado and that owns or licenses computerized data that includes personal information about a resident of Colorado shall, when it becomes aware of a breach of the security of the system, conduct in good faith a prompt investigation to determine the likelihood that personal information has been or will be misused. The individual or the commercial entity shall give notice as soon as possible to the affected Colorado resident unless the investigation determines that the misuse of information about a Colorado resident has not occurred and is not reasonably likely to occur. Notice shall be made in the most expedient time possible and without unreasonable delay, consistent with the legitimate needs of law enforcement and consistent with any measures necessary to determine the scope of the breach and to restore the reasonable integrity of the computerized data system.

(b) An individual or a commercial entity that maintains computerized data that includes personal information that the individual or the commercial entity does not own or license shall give notice to and cooperate with the owner or licensee of the information of any breach of the security of the system immediately following discovery of a breach, if misuse of personal information about a Colorado resident occurred or is likely to occur. Cooperation includes sharing with the owner or licensee information relevant to the breach; except that such cooperation shall not be deemed to require the disclosure of confidential business information or trade secrets.

(c) Notice required by this section may be delayed if a law enforcement agency determines that the notice will impede a criminal investigation and the law enforcement agency has notified the individual or commercial entity that conducts business in Colorado not to send notice required by this section. Notice required by this section shall be made in good faith, without unreasonable delay, and as soon as possible after the law enforcement agency determines that notification will no longer impede the investigation and has notified the individual or commercial entity that conducts business in Colorado that it is appropriate to send the notice required by this section.

(d) If an individual or commercial entity is required to notify more than one thousand Colorado residents of a breach of the security of the system pursuant to this section, the individual or commercial entity shall also notify, without unreasonable delay, all consumer reporting agencies that compile and maintain files on consumers on a nationwide basis, as defined by 15 U.S.C. sec. 1681a (p), of the anticipated date of the notification to the residents and the approximate number of residents who are to be notified. Nothing in this paragraph (d) shall be construed to require the individual or commercial entity to provide to the consumer reporting agency the names or other personal information of breach notice recipients. This paragraph (d) shall not apply to a person who is subject to Title V of the federal "Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act", 15 U.S.C. sec. 6801 et seq.

(3) Procedures deemed in compliance with notice requirements. (a) Under this section, an individual or a commercial entity that maintains its own notification procedures as part of an information security policy for the treatment of personal information and whose procedures are otherwise consistent with the timing requirements of this section shall be deemed to be in compliance with the notice requirements of this section if the individual or the commercial entity notifies affected Colorado customers in accordance with its policies in the event of a breach of security of the system.

(b) An individual or a commercial entity that is regulated by state or federal law and that maintains procedures for a breach of the security of the system pursuant to the laws, rules, regulations, guidances, or guidelines established by its primary or functional state or federal regulator is deemed to be in compliance with this section.

(4) Violations. The attorney general may bring an action in law or equity to address violations of this section and for other relief that may be appropriate to ensure compliance with this section or to recover direct economic damages resulting from a violation, or both. The provisions of this section are not exclusive and do not relieve an individual or a commercial entity subject to this section from compliance with all other applicable provisions of law.

6-1-717. Influencing a real estate appraisal. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, the person:

(a) Knowingly submits a false or misleading appraisal in connection with a dwelling offered as security for repayment of a mortgage loan; or

(b) Directly or indirectly compensates, coerces, or intimidates an appraiser, or attempts, directly or indirectly, to compensate, coerce, or intimidate an appraiser, for the purpose of influencing the independent judgment of the appraiser with respect to the value of a dwelling offered as security for repayment of a mortgage loan.

(2) The prohibition referred to in subsection (1) of this section shall not be construed as prohibiting a person from requesting an appraiser to:

(a) Consider additional, appropriate property information;

(b) Provide further detail, substantiation, or explanation for the appraiser's value conclusion; or

(c) Correct errors in the appraisal report.

6-1-718. Ticket sales and resales - prohibitions - unlawful conditions - definitions. (1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Operator" means a person or entity who owns, operates, or controls a place of entertainment or who promotes or produces entertainment and that sells a ticket to an event for original sale, including an employee of such person or entity.

(b) "Original sale" means the first sale of a ticket by an operator.

(c) "Place of entertainment" means a public or private entertainment facility, such as a stadium, arena, racetrack, museum, amusement park, or other place where performances, concerts, exhibits, athletic games, or contests are held, for which an entry fee is charged, to which the public is invited to observe, and for which tickets are sold. "Place of entertainment" does not include a ski area.

(d) "Purchaser" means a person or entity who purchases a ticket to a place of entertainment.

(e) "Resale" or "resold" means a sale other than the original sale of a ticket by a person or entity.

(f) "Reseller" means a person or entity that offers or sells tickets for resale after the original sale by the operator including an entity that operates a platform or exchange for the purchase and sale of tickets to events that also engages in the purchase and resale of the ticket either on behalf of the operator or on its own behalf if a reseller.

(g) "Ticket" means a license issued by the operator of a place of entertainment for admission to an event at the date and time specified on the ticket, subject to the terms and conditions as specified by the operator.

(2) Resellers shall guarantee a full refund to a purchaser if:

(a) The event for which the ticket was resold is canceled;

(b) The ticket does not or would not in fact grant the purchaser admission to the event for which the ticket was resold;

(c) The ticket is counterfeit; or

(d) The ticket fails to conform to its description as advertised or as represented to the purchaser by the reseller.

(3) (a) It is void as against public policy to apply a term or condition to the original sale to the purchaser to limit the terms or conditions of resale, including, but not limited to, a term or condition:

(I) That restricts resale in a subscription or season ticket package agreement as a condition of purchase;

(II) That a purchaser must comply with to retain a ticket for the duration of a subscription or season ticket package agreement that limits the rights of the purchaser to resell the ticket;

(III) That a purchaser must comply with to retain any contractually agreed-upon rights to purchase future subscriptions or season ticket package agreements; or

(IV) That imposes a sanction on the purchaser if the sale of the ticket is not through a reseller approved by the operator.

(b) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit an operator from prohibiting the resale of a contractual right in a season ticket package agreement that gives the original purchaser a priority or other preference to enter into a subsequent season ticket package agreement with the operator.

(4) A person or entity, including an operator, that regulates admission to an event shall not deny access to the event to a person in possession of a valid ticket to the event, regardless of whether the ticket is subject to a subscription or season ticket package agreement, based solely on the ground that such ticket was resold through a reseller that was not approved by the operator.

(5) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit an operator from maintaining and enforcing policies regarding conduct or behavior at or in connection with the operator's venue. An operator may revoke or restrict season tickets for reasons relating to a violation of venue policies and to the extent the operator may deem necessary for the protection of the safety of patrons or to address fraud or misconduct.

6-1-719. Truth in music advertising. (1) Definitions. As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Performing group" means a vocal or instrumental group seeking to use the name of a recording group.

(b) "Recording group" means a vocal or instrumental group, at least one of whose members has previously released a commercial sound recording under that group's name and in which at least one of the members has a legal right by virtue of use or operation under the group name without having abandoned the name or affiliation with the group.

(c) "Sound recording" means a work that results from the fixation, on or in a recording medium or other material object, of a series of musical, spoken, or other sounds regardless of the nature of the medium or object, such as a disk, tape, or other phono record, in which the sounds are recorded.

(2) Production. (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2), it is unlawful for any person to advertise or conduct a live musical performance or production in this state through the use of a false, deceptive, or misleading affiliation, connection, or association between a performing group and a recording group.

(b) Paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) does not apply if:

(I) The performing group is the authorized registrant and owner of a federal service mark for that group registered in the United States patent and trademark office;

(II) At least one member of the performing group was a member of the recording group and has a legal right by virtue of use or operation under the group name without having abandoned the name or affiliation with the group;

(III) The live musical performance or production is identified in all advertising and promotion as a salute or tribute;

(IV) The advertising does not relate to a live musical performance or production taking place in this state; or

(V) The performance or production is expressly authorized by the recording group.

(3) Restraining prohibited acts. In addition to the actions and remedies specified in part 1 of this article that may apply:

(a) Injunction. Whenever the attorney general or a district attorney has reason to believe that a person is advertising, conducting, or about to advertise or conduct a live musical performance or production in violation of this section and that proceedings would be in the public interest, the attorney general or district attorney may bring an action in the name of the state against the person to restrain that practice by temporary or permanent injunction.

(b) Payment of costs and restitution. Whenever a court issues a permanent injunction to restrain and prevent violations of this section as authorized in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3), the court may, in its discretion, direct that the defendant restore to any person in interest any moneys or property, real or personal, that may have been acquired by means of a violation of this section, under terms and conditions to be established by the court.

(c) Penalty. A person who violates this section is liable to the state for a civil penalty of not less than five thousand dollars nor more than fifteen thousand dollars per violation, which civil penalty shall be in addition to any other relief that may be granted under this subsection (3) but which shall not be cumulative with the penalty specified in section 6-1-112. Each performance or production that violates this section constitutes a separate violation.

6-1-720. Deceptive trade practice - on-line event ticket sales. (1) A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when, in the course of the person's business, vocation, or occupation, such person:

(a) Uses or causes to be used a software application that runs automated tasks over the internet to access a computer, computer network, or computer system, or any part thereof, for the purpose of purchasing tickets in excess of authorized limits for an on-line event ticket sale with the intent to resell such tickets; or

(b) Uses or causes to be used a software application that runs automated tasks over the internet that circumvents or disables any electronic queues, waiting periods, or other sales volume limitation systems associated with an on-line event ticket sale.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "In excess of authorized limits", with regard to an on-line purchase of tickets, means exceeding a restriction on the number of individual tickets that can be purchased by any single person or circumventing any other terms and conditions of access to an on-line event ticket sale established by the event sponsor or promoter.

(b) "On-line event ticket sale" means an electronic system utilized by the sponsor or promoter of a sporting or entertainment event to sell tickets to such event to the public over the internet.

(3) This section shall not prohibit the resale of tickets in a secondary market by a person other than the event sponsor or promoter.

(4) Every ticket acquired in violation of this section shall constitute a separate violation for purposes of assessing a civil penalty under section 6-1-112 (1) (a) and (1) (b).

6-1-721. Like-kind exchanges by exchange facilitators - definitions. (1) Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby:

(a) Finds that, absent enactment of this section, Colorado has no requirements for the protection of taxpayers who engage persons or entities that facilitate like-kind exchanges pursuant to 26 U.S.C. sec. 1031; and

(b) Determines that, to protect taxpayers who engage exchange facilitators, exchange facilitators should meet certain requirements and follow certain procedures.

(2) Definitions. As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Affiliated with" means that a person directly, or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with the other specified person.

(b) "Colorado property" means real property located in Colorado; except that replacement property need not be located in Colorado.

(c) (I) "Exchange facilitator" means a person that holds a taxpayer's exchange funds and that:

(A) For a fee, facilitates an exchange of like-kind Colorado property by entering into an agreement with a taxpayer by which the exchange facilitator acquires from the taxpayer the contractual rights to sell the taxpayer's relinquished Colorado property and transfer a replacement property to the taxpayer as an exchange facilitator, as is defined in 26 CFR 1.1031 (k)-1 (g) (4), or enters into an agreement with a taxpayer to take title to Colorado property as an exchange accommodation titleholder, as that term is defined in federal internal revenue service revenue procedure 2000-37, or enters into an agreement with a taxpayer to act as a qualified trustee or qualified escrow holder, as those terms are defined in 26 CFR 1.1031 (k)-1 (g) (3), except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c); or

(B) Maintains an office in this state for the purpose of soliciting business as an exchange facilitator regarding Colorado property.

(II) "Exchange facilitator" does not include:

(A) The taxpayer or disqualified person, as defined under 26 CFR 1.1031 (k)-1 (k), seeking to qualify for the nonrecognition provisions of 26 U.S.C. sec. 1031;

(B) A bank, savings bank, savings and loan association, building and loan association, or credit union; a bank or savings association holding company organized under the laws of any state, the District of Columbia, a territory or protectorate of the United States, or the United States, subject to regulation and supervision by a federal banking agency; an operating subsidiary of such entities; or an employee or exclusive agent of any of such entities, including, without limitation, a subsidiary that is owned or controlled by such entities;

(C) A person who advertises for and teaches seminars or classes for, or gives presentations to, attorneys, accountants, real estate professionals, tax professionals, or other professionals, where the primary purpose is to teach the professionals about tax-deferred exchanges or train them to act as exchange facilitators;

(D) An exchange facilitator, as defined in 26 CFR 1.1031 (k)-1 (g) (4), whose sole business in this state as an exchange facilitator consists of holding exchange funds from the disposition of relinquished property located outside this state; or

(E) An entity that is wholly owned by an exchange facilitator or is wholly owned by the owner of an exchange facilitator and is used by that exchange facilitator to facilitate exchanges or to take title to Colorado property as an exchange accommodation titleholder, as defined in federal internal revenue service revenue procedure 2000-37.

(III) For purposes of this paragraph (c), "fee" means compensation of any nature, direct or indirect, monetary or in-kind, that is received by a person or a related person as defined in 26 U.S.C. sec. 1031 (f) (3) for any services relating to or incidental to the exchange of like-kind property under 26 U.S.C. sec. 1031.

(d) "Like-kind exchange" means a section 1031 exchange that is subject to 26 U.S.C. sec. 1031.

(e) "Publicly traded company" means a corporation whose securities are publicly traded on a stock exchange that is regulated by the United States securities and exchange commission. The term "publicly traded company" also includes all subsidiaries of such publicly traded company.

(f) "Section 1031 exchange" means an exchange conducted pursuant to 26 U.S.C. sec. 1031 that allows investors to defer the tax on capital gains.

(g) "Taxpayer exchange funds" or "exchange funds" means money a taxpayer entrusts to an exchange facilitator.

(3) Deceptive trade practices. A person engages in a deceptive trade practice when a person acts as an exchange facilitator and:

(a) (I) Except as specified in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (a), fails to notify all current clients of any change in control of the exchange facilitator within two business days after the effective date of the change by:

(A) Facsimile, e-mail transmission, or first-class mail; and

(B) Posting such notice on the exchange facilitator's web site for a period ending not sooner than ninety days after the change in control.

(II) The notice required in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) shall specify the name, address, and other contact information of the transferees.

(III) If the exchange facilitator is a publicly traded company and remains a publicly traded company after a change in control, the exchange facilitator need not notify its client of the change in control.

(IV) For purposes of this paragraph (a), "change in control" means any transfer within twelve months of more than fifty percent of the assets or ownership interests, directly or indirectly, of the exchange facilitator.

(b) (I) Fails to maintain adequate financial assurance and errors and omissions insurance or deposits. An exchange facilitator may maintain bonds, insurance policies, deposits, or irrevocable letters of credit in excess of the amounts required by this subparagraph (I). An exchange facilitator shall at all times:

(A) Maintain a fidelity bond or bonds executed by an insurer authorized to do business in this state in the amount of at least one million dollars and maintain a policy of errors and omissions insurance, in an amount of at least two hundred fifty thousand dollars, executed by an insurer authorized to do business in this state;

(B) Deposit an amount of cash or irrevocable letters of credit in an amount of at least the sum of the amounts specified in sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (I) in an interest-bearing deposit account or in a money market account with a financial institution of the exchange facilitator's choice, with the interest earned on such account accruing to the exchange facilitator; or

(C) Deposit all exchange funds in a qualified escrow or qualified trust as those terms are defined under 26 CFR 1.1031(k)-1 (g) (3) with a financial institution and provide that any withdrawals from such qualified escrow or qualified trust require the taxpayer's and the exchange facilitator's written authorization.

(II) A person claiming to have sustained damage by reason of the failure of an exchange facilitator to comply with this section may file a claim to recover damages from the bond or deposit described in this paragraph (b).

(c) Fails to act as a custodian for all exchange funds, including money, Colorado property, other consideration, or instruments received by the exchange facilitator from or on behalf of the taxpayer, except funds received as the exchange facilitator's compensation. As used in this paragraph (c), "custodian" means a person who has the same responsibilities as a fiduciary under Colorado law to protect and preserve assets and shall not mean a person who has the same responsibilities as a fiduciary under Colorado law to increase assets or to accomplish other fiduciary duties. Exchange funds are not subject to execution or attachment on any claim against an exchange facilitator. An exchange facilitator shall not knowingly keep or cause to be kept any money in a financial institution under any name designating the money as belonging to a taxpayer unless the money equitably belongs to the taxpayer and was actually entrusted to the exchange facilitator by the taxpayer. Taxpayer exchange funds in excess of two hundred fifty thousand dollars shall be invested or deposited in such manner as to require both the taxpayer's and the exchange facilitator's commercially reasonable means of authorization for withdrawal, including: The taxpayer's delivery to the exchange facilitator of the taxpayer's authorization to disburse exchange funds, and the exchange facilitator's delivery to the depository of the exchange facilitator's authorization to disburse exchange funds; or delivery to the depository of both the taxpayer's and the exchange facilitator's authorizations to disburse exchange funds. An exchange facilitator shall provide the taxpayer with written notification of the manner in which the exchange funds will be invested or deposited, shall invest or deposit exchange funds for the benefit of the taxpayer in investments that meet a standard of care that an ordinarily prudent investor would use when dealing with the property of another, and shall satisfy investment goals of liquidity and preservation of principal. For purposes of this paragraph (c), a prudent investor standard of care shall be deemed to have been violated if:

(I) A taxpayer's exchange funds are commingled by the exchange facilitator with the operating accounts of the exchange facilitator or with the exchange funds of another taxpayer; except that an exchange facilitator may aggregate exchange funds. For purposes of this subparagraph (I):

(A) "Aggregate" means to combine exchange funds of multiple taxpayers for investment purposes to achieve common investment goals and efficiencies. Exchange funds that have been aggregated into common investments shall be readily identifiable by the financial institution or other regulated investment custodian holding the funds as to each taxpayer for whom they are held through an accounting or subaccounting system.

(B) "Commingle" means to mix together exchange funds of taxpayers with other funds belonging to or under the control of the exchange facilitator in such a manner that a taxpayer's exchange funds cannot be distinguished from other funds belonging to or under the control of the exchange facilitator.

(II) Exchange funds are loaned or otherwise transferred to any person or entity affiliated with the exchange facilitator; except that this subparagraph (II) shall not apply to a transfer or loan made to a financial institution that is the parent of or affiliated with the exchange facilitator or from an exchange facilitator to an exchange accommodation titleholder, as defined in federal internal revenue service revenue procedure 2000-37, as required under the section 1031 exchange contract; or

(III) Exchange funds are invested in a manner that does not provide sufficient liquidity to meet the exchange facilitator's contractual obligations to the taxpayer and does not preserve the principal of the exchange funds. The deposit of funds in a financial institution exempted from this section pursuant to sub-subparagraph (B) of subparagraph (II) of paragraph (c) of subsection (2) of this section shall be deemed to be sufficiently liquid to meet the requirements of this subparagraph (III).

(d) Commits any of the following:

(I) Knowingly makes any material misrepresentation concerning an exchange facilitator's transaction that is intended to mislead another;

(II) Pursues a continued or flagrant course of misrepresentation or makes false statements through advertising or otherwise;

(III) Fails, within a reasonable time, to account for any money or property belonging to others that may be in the possession or under the control of the exchange facilitator;

(IV) Engages in any conduct constituting fraudulent or dishonest dealing;

(V) Is convicted of, or, in the case of an entity, one or more of its owners, officers, directors, or employees who has access to exchange funds is convicted of, any crime involving fraud, misrepresentation, deceit, embezzlement, misappropriation of funds, robbery, or other theft of property; except that commission of such crime by an officer, director, or employee of an exchange facilitator shall not be considered a violation of this subparagraph (V) if the employment or appointment of the officer, director, or employee has been terminated and no clients of the exchange facilitator were harmed or full restitution has been made to all harmed clients;

(VI) Wilfully fails to fulfill an exchange facilitator's contractual duties to the taxpayer to deliver property or funds to the taxpayer unless such failure is due to circumstances beyond the control of the exchange facilitator;

(VII) Materially violates this section or aids, abets, or knowingly permits any person to violate this section;

(VIII) Commits an act that does not meet generally accepted standards of practice for ordinarily prudent investors or fails to perform an act necessary to meet generally accepted standards of practice for ordinarily prudent investors;

(IX) Fails to keep appropriate business and transaction records, falsifies such records, or knowingly and wilfully makes incorrect entries of an essential nature on such records; except that an exchange facilitator may dispose of records after a reasonable time pursuant to the exchange facilitator's document retention and document destruction policy;

(X) Is disciplined in any way by a national certifying agency or by a regulatory agency of another jurisdiction for conduct that relates to the person's employment as an exchange facilitator; or

(XI) Is convicted of or pleads guilty or nolo contendere to a felony or any crime defined in title 18, C.R.S., that relates to the person's employment as an exchange facilitator. A certified copy of the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction of the conviction or plea shall be prima facie evidence of the conviction or plea.

6-1-722. Gift certificates - validity - exemptions - definitions. (1) (a) As used in this section, "gift card" means a prefunded tangible or electronic record of a specific monetary value evidencing an issuer's agreement to provide goods, services, credit, money, or anything of value. A "gift card" includes, but is not limited to, a tangible card; electronic card; stored-value card; or certificate or similar instrument, card, or tangible record, all of which contain a microprocessor chip, magnetic chip, or other means for the storage of information and for which the value is decremented upon each use. A "gift card" does not include a prefunded tangible or electronic record issued by, or on behalf of, any government agency; a gift certificate that is issued only on paper; a prepaid telecommunications or technology card; a card or certificate issued to a consumer pursuant to an awards, loyalty, or promotional program for which no money or other item of monetary value was exchanged; or a card that is donated or sold below face value at a volume discount to an employer or charitable organization for fundraising purposes.

(b) This section shall not apply to gift cards that are usable with multiple sellers of goods or services. This exception shall not apply to a gift card usable only with affiliated sellers of goods or services.

(2) On and after August 11, 2010, the issuer shall redeem the remaining value of a gift card for cash if the amount remaining is five dollars or less on request of the holder.

(3) It is unlawful for any person or entity to sell to a purchaser a gift card that contains a service fee, a dormancy fee, an inactivity fee, a maintenance fee, or any other type of fee.

(4) A violation of this section shall be deemed a deceptive trade practice as provided in section 6-1-105 (1) (ccc).

6-1-723. Cathinone bath salts - deceptive trade practice. (1) It is unlawful for any person or entity to distribute, dispense, manufacture, or sell to a purchaser any product that is labeled as a bath salt or any other trademark if the product contains any amount of any cathinones, as defined in section 18-18-102 (3.5), C.R.S.

(2) A violation of this section shall be deemed a deceptive trade practice as provided in section 6-1-105 (1) (e), and the violator shall be subject to a civil penalty as described in section 6-1-112 (1) (d) in addition to any applicable criminal penalty.

PART 8

SWEEPSTAKES AND CONTESTS

6-1-801. Legislative finding, declaration, and intent. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that a vast number of sweepstakes and contests have been and are being directed to Colorado consumers; that Colorado consumers may have paid millions of dollars to purchase goods or services to enter sweepstakes and contests based on representations created by the sponsors of those sweepstakes and contests; that these sweepstakes and contests may be targeted to certain vulnerable Colorado consumers; that there is a compelling need to curtail and prevent the most deceptive practices in connection with the promotion of sweepstakes and contests; that there is a compelling need for more complete disclosure of rules and operation of sweepstakes and contests in which money or other valuable consideration may be solicited; that preventing the deceptive promotions of sweepstakes and contests is a matter vitally affecting the public interest; and, therefore, that statutory regulation of sweepstakes and contests is necessary to the general welfare of the public.

(2) It is the intent of the general assembly to require that Colorado consumers be provided with all relevant information necessary to make an informed decision concerning sweepstakes and contests. It is also the intent of the general assembly to prohibit misleading and deceptive prize promotions. The terms of this part 8 shall be construed liberally in order to achieve this purpose.

6-1-802. Definitions. As used in this part 8, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Contest" means any game, puzzle, competition, or plan that holds out or offers to prospective participants the opportunity to receive or compete for gifts, prizes, or gratuities as determined by skill or any combination of chance and skill; except that "contest" shall not be construed to include any activity of licensees regulated under article 9 or article 47.1 of title 12, C.R.S., or part 2 of article 35 of title 24, C.R.S.

(2) "No purchase necessary message" means the following statement, set apart and in bold-faced type, and at least ten-point type: "No purchase or payment of any kind is necessary to enter or win this [sweepstakes or contest].".

(3) "Official rules" means the formal printed statement of the rules for the sweepstakes or contest, which statement shall be printed in contrasting type face at least ten-point type.

(4) "Prize" means cash or an item or service of monetary value that is offered or awarded to a person in a real or purported sweepstakes or contest.

(5) "Prize notice" means a written notice, other than an advertisement appearing in a magazine or newspaper of general circulation, delivered by the United States postal service or by a private carrier, that is or contains a representation that the recipient will receive, or may be or may become eligible to receive, a prize.

(6) "Represent" and "representation" includes express statements and the implications and inferences that would be drawn from those statements, taking into account the context in which the representation is made, including, but not limited to, emphasis, font, size, color, location, and presentation of the representation and any qualifying language. If the representation is made on or visible through a mailing envelope, the context in which the representation is to be considered, including any qualifying language, shall be limited to that which is visible without opening the mailing envelope.

(7) "Retail value" of a prize means:

(a) A price at which the sponsor can demonstrate that a substantial number of the prizes or substantially similar items have been sold to the public in this state by someone other than the sponsor during the preceding year; or

(b) If the sponsor is unable to satisfy the requirement in paragraph (a) of this subsection (7), then the retail value is no more than one and one-half times the amount that the sponsor paid or would pay for the prize in a bona fide purchase from a seller unaffiliated with the sponsor.

(8) "Specially selected" means a representation that a person is a winner, a finalist, in first place or tied for first place, or otherwise among a limited group of persons with an enhanced likelihood of receiving a prize.

(9) "Sponsor" means a person who offers, by means of a prize notice, a prize to another person in this state in conjunction with any real or purported sweepstakes or contest that requires or allows, or creates the impression of requiring or allowing, the person to purchase any goods or services or pay any money as a condition of receiving, or in conjunction with allowing the person to receive, use, compete for, or obtain a prize or information about a prize.

(10) "Sweepstakes" means any competition, giveaway, drawing, plan, or other selection process or other enterprise or promotion in which anything of value is awarded to participants by chance or random selection that is not otherwise unlawful under other provisions of law; except that "sweepstakes" shall not be construed to include any activity of licensees regulated under article 9 or article 47.1 of title 12, C.R.S., or part 2 of article 35 of title 24, C.R.S.

6-1-803. Prohibited practices and required disclosures. (1) No sponsor shall require a person to pay the sponsor money or any other consideration as a condition of awarding the person a prize, or as a condition of allowing the person to receive, use, compete for, or obtain a prize or information about a prize.

(2) No sponsor shall represent that a person has won or unconditionally will be the winner of a prize or use language that may lead a person to believe he or she has won a prize, unless all of the following conditions are met:

(a) The person shall be given the prize without obligation;

(b) The person shall be notified at no expense to such person within fifteen days of winning a prize; and

(c) The representation is not false, deceptive, or misleading.

(3) If a sponsor offers one or more items of the same or substantially the same value to all or substantially all of the recipients of a prize notice, the sponsor shall not:

(a) Represent that such items are prizes or that the process by which such items are to be distributed is a sweepstakes or contest, or otherwise represent that such process involves a distribution by chance; or

(b) Represent that the recipient is or has been specially selected unless it is true.

(4) No sponsor shall represent that a person has been specially selected in connection with a sweepstakes or contest unless it is true.

(5) No sponsor shall represent that a person may be or may become a winner of a prize, characterize the person as a possible winner of a prize, or represent that the person will, upon the satisfaction of some condition or the occurrence of some event or other contingency, become the winner of a prize, unless each of the following is clearly and conspicuously disclosed:

(a) The material conditions necessary to make the representation truthful and not misleading, including but not limited to the conditions that must be satisfied in order for the person to be determined as the winner. All such conditions shall be:

(I) Presented in such a manner that they are an integral part of the representation and not separated from the remainder of the representation by intervening words, graphics, colors, or excessive blank space;

(II) Made in terms, syntax, and grammar that are as simple and easy to understand as those used in the representation; and

(III) Presented in such a manner that they appear in the same type size and in the same type face, color, style, and font as the remainder of the representation.

(b) The fact that the person has not yet won;

(c) The no purchase necessary message;

(d) The retail value of each prize;

(e) The estimated odds of receiving each prize pursuant to paragraph (c) of subsection (6) of this section;

(f) The true name or names of the sponsor, the address of the sponsor's actual principal place of business, and the address at which the sponsor may be contacted;

(g) If receipt of a prize is subject to a restriction, a statement that a restriction applies and a description of the restriction;

(h) The deadline for submission of an entry to be eligible to win each prize;

(i) If a sponsor represents that the person is or has been specially selected, and if the representation is not prohibited under subsections (3) and (4) of this section, then immediately adjacent to such representation, in the same type size and boldness as the representation, a statement of the maximum number of persons in the group or purported group of persons with this enhanced likelihood of receiving a prize;

(j) The official rules for the sweepstakes or contest.

(6) Unless otherwise provided by subsection (5) of this section, the information required by subsection (5) of this section shall be presented in the following form:

(a) The information required by paragraphs (b) to (h) of subsection (5) of this section may be presented either:

(I) Immediately adjacent to the first identification of the prize to which it refers and in the same type size and boldness as the reference to the prize; or

(II) In a separate section of official rules with a section entitled "consumer disclosure", which title shall be printed in no less than twelve-point, bold-faced type, which section shall contain only a description of the prize, and which text shall be printed in no less than ten-point type.

(b) In addition to the other requirements of this subsection (6), the no purchase necessary message shall be presented in the official rules and, if the official rules do not appear thereon, on any device by which a person enters a sweepstakes or contest or purchases any goods or services or pays any money in connection with a sweepstakes or contest. The no purchase necessary message included in the official rules shall be set out in a separate paragraph in the official rules and be printed in capital letters in contrasting type face not smaller than the largest type face used in the text of the official rules. If a person is required or allowed to enter the sweepstakes or contest, or purchase any goods or services or pay any money in connection with a sweepstakes or contest, through a telephone call, the no purchase necessary message must be read to the person during the telephone call prior to accepting the entry, purchase, or payment.

(c) The statement of the odds of receiving each prize shall include, for each prize, the total number of prizes to be given away and the estimated odds of winning each prize based upon the following formula: "____ [number of prizes] out of _____ prize notices distributed".

(d) All dollar values shall be stated in Arabic numerals and be preceded by a dollar sign.

(7) No sponsor shall subject sweepstakes or contest entries not accompanied by an order for products or services to any disability or disadvantage in the winner selection process to which an entry accompanied by an order for products or services would not be subject.

(8) No sponsor shall represent that an entry in a sweepstakes or contest accompanied by an order for products or services will be eligible to receive additional prizes or be more likely to win than an entry not accompanied by an order for products or services, or that an entry not accompanied by an order for products or services will have a reduced chance of winning a prize in the sweepstakes or contest.

(9) No sponsor shall represent that a person will have an increased chance of receiving a prize by making multiple or duplicate purchases, payments, or donations, or by entering a sweepstakes or contest more than one time.

(10) No sponsor shall represent that a person is being notified a second or final time of the opportunity to receive or compete for a prize, unless the representation is true.

(11) No sponsor shall represent that a prize notice is urgent or otherwise convey an impression of urgency by use of description, narrative copy, phrasing on a mailing envelope, or similar method, unless there is a limited time period in which the recipient must take some action to claim or be eligible to receive a prize, and the date by which such action is required appears immediately adjacent to each representation of urgency in the same type size and boldness as each representation of urgency.

(12) No sponsor shall deliver, or cause to be delivered, a prize notice which is in the form of, or a prize notice which includes, a document which simulates a bond, check, or other negotiable instrument, unless that document contains a statement that such document is nonnegotiable and has no cash value.

(13) No sponsor shall deliver, or cause to be delivered, a prize notice which:

(a) Simulates or falsely represents that it is a document authorized, issued, or approved by any court, official, or agency of the United States or any state or by any lawyer, law firm, or insurance or brokerage company; or

(b) Creates a false impression as to its source, authorization, or approval.

(14) No sponsor shall represent that a prize notice is being delivered by any method other than bulk mail unless that is the case or otherwise misrepresent the manner in which the prize notice is delivered.

(15) In the operation of a sweepstakes or contest, no sponsor shall:

(a) Misrepresent in any manner the likelihood or odds of winning any prize or misrepresent in any manner the rules, terms, or conditions of participation in a sweepstakes or contest;

(b) Fail to clearly and conspicuously disclose with all contest puzzles and games all of the following in the rules:

(I) The number of rounds or levels which may be necessary to complete the contest and determine winners;

(II) Whether future puzzles or games, if any, or tie breakers, if any, will be significantly more difficult than the initial puzzle;

(III) The date or dates on or before which the contest will terminate and upon which all prizes will be awarded;

(IV) The method of determining prizewinners if a tie remains after the last tie breaker puzzle is completed; and

(V) All rules, regulations, terms, and conditions of the contest.

(16) The prohibited practices listed in this section are in addition to and do not limit the types of unfair trade practices actionable at common law or under other civil and criminal statutes of this state.

(17) No sponsor, requiring a person to respond in any manner to claim a prize, shall require the person to purchase insurance; except that the sponsor is in no way responsible for applicable state and federal taxes on the prize; and except that a sponsor may require proof of health insurance in order to claim a prize for travel or recreational activities. Such health insurance may not be acquired from the sponsor.

6-1-804. Exemptions. (1) The requirements of section 6-1-803 (5) and (6) shall not apply to solicitations or representations made in connection with the sale of goods:

(a) By a catalog seller that derives at least thirty-seven and one-half percent of its annual revenues from the sale of products sold in connection with the distribution of catalogs of at least twenty-four pages that contain written descriptions or illustrations and sale prices for each item of merchandise, if the catalogs are distributed in more than one state with a total annual distribution of at least two hundred fifty thousand; or

(b) From a membership group or club selling books, periodicals, recordings, videocassettes and similar items that is regulated by the federal trade commission pursuant to 16 CFR 425.1 concerning the use of negative option plans by sellers in commerce.

PART 9

COLORADO NO-CALL LIST ACT

6-1-901. Short title. This part 9 shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado No-Call List Act".

Source: L. 2001: Entire part added, p. 1454, § 1, effective August 8.

6-1-902. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that:

(a) The use of the telephone and telefacsimile ("fax") to market goods and services is widespread;

(b) Many citizens of this state view telemarketing as an invasion of privacy;

(c) Individuals' privacy rights and commercial freedom of speech should be balanced in a way that accommodates both the privacy of individuals and legitimate telemarketing practices;

(d) Although charitable and political organizations are exempt from the provisions of this part 9 because of considerations of freedom of speech, the general assembly encourages such organizations to voluntarily comply with this part 9 when possible; and

(e) It is in the public interest to establish a mechanism under which the individual citizens of this state can decide whether or not to receive telephone solicitations by phone or fax.

Source: L. 2001: Entire part added, p. 1454, § 1, effective August 8.

6-1-903. Definitions. As used in this part 9, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Caller identification service" means a type of telephone service that permits telephone subscribers to see the telephone number of incoming telephone calls.

(2) "Colorado no-call list" means the database of Colorado residential subscribers and wireless telephone service subscribers that have given notice, in accordance with rules promulgated under section 6-1-905, of such subscribers' objection to receiving telephone solicitations.

(3) "Conforming consolidated no-call list" means any database that includes telephone numbers of telephone subscribers that do not wish to receive telephone solicitations, if such database has been updated within the prior thirty days to include all of the telephone numbers on the Colorado no-call list.

(4) "Conforming list broker" means any person or entity that provides lists for the purpose of telephone solicitation, if such lists shall have removed, at a minimum of every thirty days, any phone numbers that are included on the Colorado no-call list.

(5) "Designated agent" means the party with which the public utilities commission contracts under section 6-1-905 (2).

(6) "Electronic mail" means an electronic message that is transmitted between two or more computers or electronic terminals. "Electronic mail" includes electronic messages that are transmitted within or between computer networks.

(7) (a) "Established business relationship" means a relationship that:

(I) Was formed, prior to the telephone solicitation, through a voluntary, two-way communication between a seller or telephone solicitor and a residential subscriber or wireless telephone service subscriber, with or without consideration, on the basis of an application, purchase, ongoing contractual agreement, or commercial transaction between the parties regarding products or services offered by such seller or telephone solicitor; and

(II) Has not been previously terminated by either party; and

(III) Currently exists or has existed within the immediately preceding eighteen months.

(b) "Established business relationship", with respect to a financial institution or affiliate, as those terms are defined in section 527 of the federal "Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act", includes any situation in which a financial institution or affiliate makes solicitation calls related to other financial services offered, if the financial institution or affiliate is subject to the requirements regarding privacy of Title V of the federal "Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act", and the financial institution or affiliate regularly conducts business in Colorado.

(8) "Internet" means the international computer network consisting of federal and nonfederal, interoperable, packet-controlled switched data networks.

(9) "Residential subscriber" means a person who has subscribed to residential telephone service with a local exchange provider, as defined in section 40-15-102 (18), C.R.S. "Person" also includes any other persons living or residing with such person.

(10) (a) "Telephone solicitation" means any voice, telefacsimile, graphic imaging, or data communication, including text messaging communication over a telephone line or through a wireless telephone for the purpose of encouraging the purchase or rental of, or investment in, property, goods, or services.

(b) Notwithstanding paragraph (a) of this subsection (10), "telephone solicitation" does not include communications:

(I) To any residential subscriber or wireless telephone service subscriber with the subscriber's prior express invitation or permission;

(II) By or on behalf of any person or entity with whom a residential subscriber or wireless telephone service subscriber has an established business relationship;

(III) For thirty days after a residential subscriber or wireless telephone service subscriber has contacted a business to inquire about the potential purchase of goods or services or until the subscriber requests that no further calls be made, whichever occurs first;

(IV) By or on behalf of a charitable organization that is required to comply and that has complied with the notice and reporting requirements of section 6-16-104 or is excluded from such notice and reporting requirements by section 6-16-104 (6);

(V) Made for the sole purpose of urging support for or opposition to a political candidate or ballot issue; or

(VI) Made for the sole purpose of conducting political polls or soliciting the expression of opinions, ideas, or votes.

(c) "Telephone solicitation" includes any communication described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (10), whether such communication originates from a live operator, through the use of automatic dialing and recorded message equipment, or by other means.

(11) "Wireless telephone" means a telephone that operates without a physical, wireline connection to the provider's equipment. The term includes, without limitation, cellular and mobile telephones.

(12) "Wireless telephone service subscriber" means a person who has subscribed to a telephone service that does not employ a wireline telephone or that employs both wireline and wireless telephones on the same customer account.

ANNOTATION

"Residential subscriber" defined. A "residential subscriber", for purposes of the No-Call List Act, is a person who has subscribed to residential telephone service and has added that number to the Colorado no-call list. The act contains no exceptions or qualifying language based on the use of the number for business purposes. Holcomb v. Steven D. Smith, Inc., 170 P.3d 815 (Colo. App. 2007).

Nothing suggests that using a no-call listed telephone number for business purposes or permitting it to appear on commercial telephone listings causes an otherwise qualifying "residential subscriber" to somehow lose the protections of the act. Holcomb v. Jan-Pro Cleaning Sys., 172 P.3d 888 (Colo. 2007).

6-1-904. Unlawful to make telephone solicitations to subscribers on the Colorado no-call list - requirements for telephone solicitations generally. (1) (a) No person or entity shall make or cause to be made any telephone solicitation to the telephone of any residential subscriber or wireless telephone service subscriber in this state who has added his or her telephone number and zip code to the Colorado no-call list in accordance with rules promulgated under section 6-1-905.

(b) Any person or entity that makes a telephone solicitation to the telephone of any residential subscriber or wireless telephone service subscriber in this state shall register in accordance with the provisions of section 6-1-905 (3) (b) (II).

(2) Repealed.

(3) No person or entity that makes a telephone solicitation to the telephone of a residential subscriber or a wireless telephone service subscriber in this state shall knowingly utilize any method to block or otherwise circumvent such subscriber's use of a caller identification service when that person or entity's service or equipment is capable of allowing the display of the number.

(4) Persons or entities desiring to make telephone solicitations shall update their copies of the Colorado no-call list, conforming consolidated no-call list, or a list obtained from a conforming list broker within thirty days after the beginning of every calendar quarter, on or after July 1, 2002, or upon the initial availability and accessibility of the Colorado no-call list, whichever is earlier.

ANNOTATION

No implied exception for dual use of number. A "residential subscriber", for purposes of the No-Call List Act, is a person who has subscribed to residential telephone service and has added that number to the Colorado no-call list. The act contains no exceptions or qualifying language based on the use of the number for business purposes. Holcomb v. Steven D. Smith, Inc., 170 P.3d 815 (Colo. App. 2007).

6-1-905. Establishment and operation of a Colorado no-call list. (1) The Colorado no-call list program is hereby created for the purpose of establishing a database to use when verifying residential subscribers and wireless telephone service subscribers in this state who have given notice, in accordance with rules promulgated under paragraph (b) of subsection (3) of this section, of such subscribers' objection to receiving telephone solicitations. The program shall be administered by the public utilities commission.

(2) Not later than January 1, 2002, the public utilities commission shall contract with a designated agent, which shall maintain the web site and database containing the Colorado no-call list. If no more than one entity bids on the contract, the public utilities commission may award, at its discretion, such contract.

(3) (a) Not later than July 1, 2002, the designated agent, using the designated state internet web site, shall develop and maintain the Colorado no-call list database with information provided by residential subscribers and, as soon as practicable after March 25, 2003, shall include information provided by wireless telephone service subscribers.

(b) The public utilities commission shall establish, by rule, guidelines for the designated agent for the development and maintenance of the Colorado no-call list so that the no-call list can easily be accessed by persons or entities desiring to make telephone solicitations, and by state and local law enforcement agencies. As soon as practicable after March 25, 2003, the public utilities commission shall promulgate rules that:

(I) Specify that there shall be no cost for a residential subscriber or wireless telephone service subscriber to provide notification to the designated agent that such subscriber objects to receiving telephone solicitations;

(II) Specify that there shall be an annual registration fee of not more than five hundred dollars for persons or entities that wish to make telephone solicitations or otherwise access the database of telephone numbers and zip codes contained in the Colorado no-call list database. The public utilities commission shall determine such fee on a sliding scale so that persons or entities with fewer than five employees shall pay no fee. In addition, there shall be no fee charged to conforming list brokers or nonprofit corporations, as defined in section 7-121-401 (26), C.R.S. The maximum fee shall be charged only to persons or entities with more than one thousand employees. Moneys collected from such fees shall cover the direct and indirect costs related to the creation and operation of the Colorado no-call list. Moneys from such fees shall be collected by and paid directly to the designated agent. The public utilities commission shall have the authority to annually adjust the fees below the stated maximum based on revenue history of the fees received by the designated agent. The designated agent shall provide means for on-line registration and credit card payment of fees charged pursuant to this subparagraph (II). Each such person or entity shall provide a current business name, business address, e-mail address if available, and telephone number when initially registering for the no-call list. This information shall be updated when changes occur.

(III) Specify that the method by which each residential subscriber and wireless telephone service subscriber may give notice to the designated agent of his or her objection to receiving such solicitations, or may revoke such notice, shall be exclusively by entering the area code, phone number, and zip code of the subscriber directly into the database via the designated state internet web site or by using a touch-tone phone to enter the area code, phone number, and zip code of the subscriber via a designated statewide, toll-free telephone number maintained by the designated agent as a part of the Colorado no-call list;

(IV) Specify that the date of every notice received in accordance with subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (b) be recorded and included as part of the information in the no-call list;

(V) Require the designated agent to provide updated information about the Colorado no-call list program on the designated state web site, subject to supervision by the public utilities commission;

(VI) Prohibit the designated agent or any person or entity collecting information to be transmitted to the designated agent from making any use or distribution of subscriber information contained in the no-call list except as expressly authorized under this part 9;

(VII) Specify the methods by which additions, deletions, changes, and modifications shall be made to the Colorado no-call list database and how updates of the database shall be made available to persons or entities desiring such updates. Such methods shall include provisions to remove from the Colorado no-call list, on at least an annual basis, any telephone number that has been disconnected or reassigned.

(VIII) Require the designated agent to maintain an automated, on-line complaint system for residential subscribers and wireless telephone service subscribers to report suspected violations over the internet web site. The automated, on-line complaint system shall have the capability to collect, sort, and report suspected violations to the appropriate state enforcement agency electronically for enforcement purposes.

(IX) Specify that the no-call list shall be available on line at the Colorado no-call list web site to a person or entity desiring to make telephone solicitations if the person or entity has registered in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b). The list shall be available in a text or other compatible format, at the discretion of the public utilities commission, but shall allow telephone solicitors to select and sort by specific zip codes and telephone area codes. Telephone solicitors and conforming list brokers shall not receive additional compensation for distributing the Colorado no-call list, but are encouraged to freely distribute the Colorado no-call list at no cost.

(X) Specify such other matters relating to the database as the public utilities commission deems necessary or desirable.

(c) If the federal government establishes one or more official databases of residential or wireless telephone service subscribers who object to receiving telephone solicitations, the designated agent is authorized to provide appropriate data from the official Colorado no-call list exclusively for inclusion in an official, national do-not-call database. To the extent allowed by federal law, the designated agent shall ensure that the Colorado no-call list includes that portion of an official national do-not-call database that relates to Colorado.

(4) The state shall not be liable to any person for gathering, managing, or using information in the Colorado no-call list database pursuant to this part 9 and for enforcing the provisions of this part 9.

(5) The designated agent shall not be liable to any person for performing its duties under this part 9 unless, and only to the extent that, the designated agent commits a willful and wanton act or omission.

(6) As soon as practicable after March 25, 2003, the designated agent shall update the database, on an ongoing basis, with information provided by residential subscribers, wireless telephone service subscribers, and local exchange providers.

(7) No person shall place the telephone number of another person on the Colorado no-call list without the authorization of the person to whom the number is assigned.

(8) Repealed.

6-1-906. Enforcement - penalties - defenses. (1) On and after July 1, 2002, violation of any provision of this part 9 constitutes a deceptive trade practice under the provisions of section 6-1-105 (1) and may be enforced under sections 6-1-110, 6-1-112, and 6-1-113. No state enforcement action under this part 9 may be brought against a person or entity for fewer than three violations per month.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, it shall not be a violation of this part 9 if:

(a) The person or entity has otherwise fully complied with the provisions of this part 9 and has established and implemented, prior to the violation, written practices and procedures to effectively prevent telephone solicitations in violation of this part 9; or

(b) The violation resulted from an error in transcription or other technical defect, not the fault of the person or entity, that caused the information in the no-call list as received by the person or entity to differ from the information that was or should have been included in the no-call list as transmitted by the designated agent.

(3) The remedies, duties, prohibitions, and penalties of this section are not exclusive and are in addition to all other causes of action, remedies, and penalties provided by law.

(4) No provider of telephone caller identification service shall be held liable for violations of this part 9 committed by other persons or entities.

Source: L. 2001: Entire part added, p. 1460, § 1, effective August 8.

6-1-908. Severability. If any provision of this part 9 or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect other provisions or applications of this part 9 which can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this part 9 are declared to be severable.

PART 10

RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF LOAN INFORMATION - SOLICITATIONS

6-1-1001. Restrictions on use of loan information for solicitations. (1) A person shall not reference the trade name or trademark of a lender or a trade name or trademark confusingly similar to that of a lender in a solicitation for the offering of services or products without the consent of the lender unless the solicitation clearly and conspicuously states in bold-faced type on the front page of the correspondence containing the solicitation:

(a) The name, address, and telephone number of the person making the solicitation;

(b) That the person making the solicitation is not affiliated with the lender;

(c) That the solicitation is not authorized or sponsored by the lender; and

(d) That the loan information referenced was not provided by the lender.

(2) A person shall not reference a loan number, loan amount, or other specific loan information that is not publicly available in a solicitation for the purchase of services or products; except that this prohibition shall not apply to communications by a lender or its affiliates with a current customer of the lender or with a person who was a customer of the lender.

(3) (a) A person shall not reference a loan number, loan amount, or other specific loan information that is publicly available in a solicitation for the purchase of services or products unless the communication clearly and conspicuously states in bold-faced type on the front page of the correspondence containing the solicitation:

(I) The name, address, and telephone number of the person making the solicitation;

(II) That the person making the solicitation is not affiliated with the lender;

(III) That the solicitation is not authorized or sponsored by the lender; and

(IV) That the loan information referenced was not provided by the lender.

(b) The prohibition in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3) shall not apply to communications by a lender or its affiliates with a current customer of the lender or with a person who was a customer of the lender.

(4) Any reference to an existing lender without the consent of the lender, and any reference to a loan number, loan amount, or other specific loan information, appearing on the outside of an envelope, visible through the envelope window, or on a postcard, in connection with any written communication that includes or contains a solicitation for goods or services is prohibited.

(5) It is not a violation of this section for a person to use the trade name of another lender in an advertisement for services or products to compare the services or products offered by the other lender.

(6) A lender or owner of a trade name or trademark may seek an injunction against a person who violates this section to stop the unlawful use of the trade name, trademark, or loan information. The person seeking the injunction shall not have to prove actual damage as a result of the violation. Irreparable harm and interim harm to the lender or owner shall be presumed. The lender or owner seeking the injunction may seek to recover actual damages and any profits the defendant has accrued as a result of the violation. The prevailing party in any action brought pursuant to this section is entitled to recover costs associated with the action and reasonable attorney fees from the other party.

(7) For the purposes of this section, "lender" means a bank, industrial bank, savings and loan association, savings bank, credit union, finance company, mortgage bank, mortgage broker, loan originator or holder of the loan, or other person who makes loans in this state, and any affiliate thereof, or any third party operating with the consent of the lender. For the purposes of this section, a person shall not be considered a lender based on the person's former employment with a lender.

(8) Nothing in this section shall apply to title insurance.

PART 11

COLORADO FORECLOSURE PROTECTION ACT

SUBPART 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

6-1-1101. Short title. This part 11 shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Foreclosure Protection Act".

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1330, § 1, effective May 30.

6-1-1102. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that home ownership and the accumulation of equity in one's home provide significant social and economic benefits to the state and its citizens. Unfortunately, too many home owners in financial distress, especially the poor, elderly, and financially unsophisticated, are vulnerable to a variety of deceptive or unconscionable business practices designed to dispossess them or otherwise strip the equity from their homes. There is a compelling need to curtail and to prevent the most deceptive and unconscionable of these business practices, to provide each home owner with information necessary to make an informed and intelligent decision regarding transactions with certain foreclosure consultants and equity purchasers, to provide certain minimum requirements for contracts between such parties, including statutory rights to cancel such contracts, and to ensure and foster fair dealing in the sale and purchase of homes in foreclosure. Therefore, it is the intent of the general assembly that all violations of this part 11 have a significant public impact and that the terms of this part 11 be liberally construed to achieve these purposes.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1330, § 1, effective May 30.

6-1-1103. Definitions. As used in this part 11, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Associate" means a partner, subsidiary, affiliate, agent, or any other person working in association with a foreclosure consultant or an equity purchaser. "Associate" does not include a person who is excluded from the definition of an "equity purchaser" or a "foreclosure consultant".

(2) "Equity purchaser" means a person, other than a person who acquires a property for the purpose of using such property as his or her personal residence, who acquires title to a residence in foreclosure; except that the term does not include a person who acquires such title:

(a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2010, (HB 10-1133), ch. 350, p. 1615, § 1, effective January 1, 2011.)

(b) By a deed in lieu of foreclosure to the holder of an evidence of debt, or an associate of the holder of an evidence of debt, of a consensual lien or encumbrance of record if such consensual lien or encumbrance is recorded in the real property records of the clerk and recorder of the county where the residence in foreclosure is located prior to the recording of the notice of election and demand for sale required under section 38-38-101, C.R.S.;

(c) By a deed from the public trustee or a county sheriff as a result of a foreclosure sale conducted pursuant to article 38 of title 38, C.R.S.;

(d) At a sale of property authorized by statute;

(e) By order or judgment of any court;

(f) From the person's spouse, relative, or relative of a spouse, by the half or whole blood or by adoption, or from a guardian, conservator, or personal representative of a person identified in this paragraph (f);

(g) While performing services as a part of a person's normal business activities under any law of this state or the United States that regulates banks, trust companies, savings and loan associations, credit unions, insurance companies, title insurers, insurance producers, or escrow companies authorized to conduct business in the state, an affiliate or subsidiary of such person, or an employee or agent acting on behalf of such person; or

(h) As a result of a short sale transaction in which a short sale addendum form, as promulgated by the Colorado real estate commission, is part of the contract used to acquire a residence in foreclosure and such transaction complies with section 6-1-1121.

(3) "Evidence of debt" means a writing that evidences a promise to pay or a right to the payment of a monetary obligation, such as a promissory note, bond, negotiable instrument, a loan, credit, or similar agreement, or a monetary judgment entered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

(4) (a) "Foreclosure consultant" means a person who does not, directly or through an associate, take or acquire any interest in or title to a homeowner's property and who, in the course of such person's business, vocation, or occupation, makes a solicitation, representation, or offer to a home owner to perform, in exchange for compensation from the home owner or from the proceeds of any loan or advance of funds, a service that the person represents will do any of the following:

(I) Stop or postpone a foreclosure sale;

(II) Obtain a forbearance from a beneficiary under a deed of trust, mortgage, or other lien;

(III) Assist the home owner in exercising a right to cure a default as provided in article 38 of title 38, C.R.S.;

(IV) Obtain an extension of the period within which the home owner may cure a default as provided in article 38 of title 38, C.R.S.;

(V) Obtain a waiver of an acceleration clause contained in an evidence of debt secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or other lien on a residence in foreclosure or contained in such deed of trust, mortgage, or other lien;

(VI) Assist the home owner to obtain a loan or advance of funds;

(VII) Avoid or reduce the impairment of the home owner's credit resulting from the recording of a notice of election and demand for sale, commencement of a judicial foreclosure action, or due to any foreclosure sale or the granting of a deed in lieu of foreclosure or resulting from any late payment or other failure to pay or perform under the evidence of debt, the deed of trust, or other lien securing such evidence of debt;

(VIII) In any way delay, hinder, or prevent the foreclosure upon the home owner's residence; or

(IX) Assist the home owner in obtaining from the beneficiary, mortgagee, or grantee of the lien in foreclosure, or from counsel for such beneficiary, mortgagee, or grantee, the remaining or excess proceeds from the foreclosure sale of the residence in foreclosure.

(b) The term "foreclosure consultant" does not include:

(I) A person licensed to practice law in this state, while performing any activity related to the person's attorney-client relationship with a home owner or any activity related to the person's attorney-client relationship with the beneficiary, mortgagee, grantee, or holder of any lien being enforced by way of foreclosure;

(II) A holder or servicer of an evidence of debt or the attorney for the holder or servicer of an evidence of debt secured by a deed of trust or other lien on any residence in foreclosure while the person performs services in connection with the evidence of debt, lien, deed of trust, or other lien securing such debt;

(III) A person doing business under any law of this state or the United States, which law regulates banks, trust companies, savings and loan associations, credit unions, insurance companies, title insurers, insurance producers, or escrow companies authorized to conduct business in the state, while the person performs services as part of the person's normal business activities, an affiliate or subsidiary of any of the foregoing, or an employee or agent acting on behalf of any of the foregoing;

(IV) A person originating or closing a loan in a person's normal course of business if, as to that loan:

(A) The loan is subject to the requirements of the federal "Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974", as amended, 12 U.S.C. sec. 2601 to 2617; or

(B) With respect to any second mortgage or home equity line of credit, the loan is subordinate to and closed simultaneously with a qualified first mortgage loan under sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (IV) or is initially payable on the face of the note or contract to an entity included in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (b);

(V) A judgment creditor of the home owner, if the judgment is recorded in the real property records of the clerk and recorder of the county where the residence in foreclosure is located and the legal action giving rise to the judgment was commenced before the notice of election and demand for sale required under section 38-38-101, C.R.S.;

(VI) A title insurance company or title insurance agent authorized to conduct business in this state, while performing title insurance and settlement services;

(VII) A person licensed as a real estate broker under article 61 of title 12, C.R.S., while the person engages in any activity for which the person is licensed; or (VIII) A nonprofit organization that solely offers counseling or advice to home owners in foreclosure or loan default, unless the organization is an associate of the foreclosure consultant.

(5) "Foreclosure consulting contract" means any agreement between a foreclosure consultant and a home owner.

(6) "Holder of evidence of debt" means the person in actual possession of or otherwise entitled to enforce an evidence of debt; except that "holder of evidence of debt" does not include a person acting as a nominee solely for the purpose of holding the evidence of debt or deed of trust as an electronic registry without any authority to enforce the evidence of debt or deed of trust. The following persons are presumed to be the holder of evidence of debt:

(a) The person who is the obligee of and who is in possession of an original evidence of debt;

(b) The person in possession of an original evidence of debt together with the proper indorsement or assignment thereof to such person in accordance with section 38-38-101 (6), C.R.S.;

(c) The person in possession of a negotiable instrument evidencing a debt, which has been duly negotiated to such person or to bearer or indorsed in blank; or

(d) The person in possession of an evidence of debt with authority, which may be granted by the original evidence of debt or deed of trust, to enforce the evidence of debt as agent, nominee, or trustee or in a similar capacity for the obligee of the evidence of debt.

(7) "Home owner" means the owner of a dwelling who occupies it as his or her principal place of residence, including a vendee under a contract for deed to real property, as that term is defined in section 38-35-126 (1) (b), C.R.S.

(8) (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (8), "residence in foreclosure" means a residence or dwelling, as defined in sections 5-1-201 and 5-1-301, C.R.S., that is occupied as the home owner's principal place of residence and that is encumbered by a residential mortgage loan that is at least thirty days delinquent or in default.

(b) With respect to subpart 3 of this part 11, "residence in foreclosure" means a residence or dwelling, as defined in sections 5-1-201 and 5-1-301, C.R.S., that is occupied as the home owner's principal place of residence, is encumbered by a residential mortgage loan, and against which a foreclosure action has been commenced or as to which an equity purchaser otherwise has actual or constructive knowledge that the loan is at least thirty days delinquent or in default.

(9) "Short sale" or "short sale transaction" means a transaction in which the residence in foreclosure is sold when:

(a) A holder of evidence of debt agrees to release its lien for an amount that is less than the outstanding amount due and owing under such evidence of debt; and

(b) The lien described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (9) is recorded in the real property records of the county where the residence in foreclosure is located.

SUBPART 2

FORECLOSURE CONSULTANTS

6-1-1104. Foreclosure consulting contract. (1) A foreclosure consulting contract shall be in writing and provided to and retained by the home owner, without changes, alterations, or modifications, for review at least twenty-four hours before it is signed by the home owner.

(2) A foreclosure consulting contract shall be printed in at least twelve-point type and shall include the name and address of the foreclosure consultant to which a notice of cancellation can be mailed and the date the home owner signed the contract.

(3) A foreclosure consulting contract shall fully disclose the exact nature of the foreclosure consulting services to be provided and the total amount and terms of any compensation to be received by the foreclosure consultant or associate.

(4) A foreclosure consulting contract shall be dated and personally signed, with each page being initialed, by each home owner and the foreclosure consultant and shall be acknowledged by a notary public in the presence of the home owner at the time the contract is signed by the home owner.

(5) A foreclosure consulting contract shall contain the following notice, which shall be printed in at least fourteen-point bold-faced type, completed with the name of the foreclosure consultant, and located in immediate proximity to the space reserved for the home owner's signature:

Notice Required by Colorado Law

_______ (Name) or (his/her/its) associate cannot ask you to sign or have you sign any document that transfers any interest in your home or property to (him/her/it) or (his/her/its) associate.

_______ (Name) or (his/her/its) associate cannot guarantee you that they will be able to refinance your home or arrange for you to keep your home.

You may, at any time, cancel this contract, without penalty of any kind.

If you want to cancel this contract, mail or deliver a signed and dated copy of this notice of cancellation, or any other written notice, indicating your intent to cancel to _______________ (name and address of foreclosure consultant) at _____________________ (address of foreclosure consultant, including facsimile and electronic mail address).

As part of any cancellation, you (the home owner) must repay any money actually spent on your behalf by ____________________ (name of foreclosure consultant) prior to receipt of this notice and as a result of this agreement, within sixty days, along with interest at the prime rate published by the federal reserve plus two percentage points, with the total interest rate not to exceed eight percent per year.

This is an important legal contract and could result in the loss of your home. Contact an attorney or a housing counselor approved by the federal department of housing and urban development before signing.

(6) A completed form in duplicate, captioned "Notice of Cancellation" shall accompany the foreclosure consulting contract. The notice of cancellation shall:

(a) Be on a separate sheet of paper attached to the contract;

(b) Be easily detachable; and

(c) Contain the following statement, printed in at least fourteen-point type:

Notice of Cancellation

(Date of contract)

To: (name of foreclosure consultant)

(Address of foreclosure consultant, including facsimile and electronic mail)

I hereby cancel this contract.

__________________ (Home owner's signature)

(7) The foreclosure consultant shall provide to the home owner a signed, dated, and acknowledged copy of the foreclosure consulting contract and the attached notice of cancellation immediately upon execution of the contract.

(8) The time during which the home owner may cancel the foreclosure consulting contract does not begin to run until the foreclosure consultant has complied with this section.

6-1-1105. Right of cancellation. (1) In addition to any right of rescission available under state or federal law, the home owner has the right to cancel a foreclosure consulting contract at any time.

(2) Cancellation occurs when the home owner gives written notice of cancellation of the foreclosure consulting contract to the foreclosure consultant at the address specified in the contract or through any facsimile or electronic mail address identified in the contract or other materials provided to the home owner by the foreclosure consultant.

(3) Notice of cancellation, if given by mail, is effective when deposited in the United States mail, properly addressed, with postage prepaid.

(4) Notice of cancellation need not be in the form provided with the contract and is effective, however expressed, if it indicates the intention of the home owner to cancel the foreclosure consulting contract.

(5) As part of the cancellation of a foreclosure consulting contract, the home owner shall repay, within sixty days after the date of cancellation, all funds paid or advanced in good faith prior to the receipt of notice of cancellation by the foreclosure consultant or associate under the terms of the foreclosure consulting contract, together with interest at the prime rate published by the federal reserve plus two percentage points, with the total interest rate not to exceed eight percent per year, from the date of expenditure until repaid by the home owner.

(6) The right to cancel may not be conditioned on the repayment of any funds.

6-1-1106. Waiver of rights - void. (1) A provision in a foreclosure consulting contract is void as against public policy if the provision attempts or purports to:

(a) Waive any of the rights specified in this subpart 2 or the right to a jury trial;

(b) Consent to jurisdiction for litigation or choice of law in a state other than Colorado;

(c) Consent to venue in a county other than the county in which the property is located; or

(d) Impose any costs or fees greater than the actual costs and fees.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1337, § 1, effective May 30.

6-1-1107. Prohibited acts. (1) A foreclosure consultant may not:

(a) Claim, demand, charge, collect, or receive any compensation until after the foreclosure consultant has fully performed each and every service the foreclosure consultant contracted to perform or represented that the foreclosure consultant would perform;

(b) Claim, demand, charge, collect, or receive any interest or any other compensation for a loan that the foreclosure consultant makes to the home owner that exceeds the prime rate published by the federal reserve at the time of any loan plus two percentage points, with the total interest rate not to exceed eight percent per year;

(c) Take a wage assignment, lien of any type on real or personal property, or other security to secure the payment of compensation;

(d) Receive any consideration from a third party in connection with foreclosure consulting services provided to a home owner unless the consideration is first fully disclosed in writing to the home owner;

(e) Acquire an interest, directly, indirectly, or through an associate, in the real or personal property of a home owner with whom the foreclosure consultant has contracted;

(f) Obtain a power of attorney from a home owner for any purpose other than to inspect documents as provided by law; or

(g) Induce or attempt to induce a home owner to enter into a foreclosure consulting contract that does not comply in all respects with this subpart 2.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1337, § 1, effective May 30.

6-1-1108. Criminal penalties. A person who violates section 6-1-1107 is guilty of a misdemeanor, as defined in section 18-1.3-504, C.R.S., and shall be subject to imprisonment in county jail for up to one year, a fine of up to twenty-five thousand dollars, or both.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1338, § 1, effective May 30.

6-1-1109. Unconscionability. (1) A foreclosure consultant or associate may not facilitate or engage in any transaction that is unconscionable given the terms and circumstances of the transaction.

(2) (a) If a court, as a matter of law, finds a foreclosure consultant contract or any clause of such contract to have been unconscionable at the time it was made, the court may refuse to enforce the contract, enforce the remainder of the contract without the unconscionable clause, or so limit the application of any unconscionable clause as to avoid an unconscionable result.

(b) When it is claimed or appears to the court that a foreclosure consultant contract or any clause of such contract may be unconscionable, the parties shall be afforded a reasonable opportunity to present evidence as to its commercial setting, purpose, and effect, to aid the court in making the determination.

(c) In order to support a finding of unconscionability, there must be evidence of some bad faith overreaching on the part of the foreclosure consultant or associate such as that which results from an unreasonable inequality of bargaining power or other circumstances in which there is an absence of meaningful choice for one of the parties, together with contract terms that are, under standard industry practices, unreasonably favorable to the foreclosure consultant or associate.

6-1-1110. Language. A foreclosure consulting contract, and all notices of cancellation provided for therein, shall be written in English and shall be accompanied by a written translation from English into any other language principally spoken by the home owner, certified by the person making the translation as a true and correct translation of the English version. The translated version shall be presumed to have equal status and credibility as the English version.

SUBPART 3

EQUITY PURCHASERS

6-1-1111. Written contract required. Every contract shall be written in at least nine-point, legible type and fully completed, signed, and dated by the home owner and equity purchaser prior to the execution of any instrument quit-claiming, assigning, transferring, conveying, or encumbering an interest in the residence in foreclosure.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1338, § 1, effective May 30. L. 2010: Entire section amended, (HB 10-1133), ch. 350, p. 1616, § 4, effective January 1, 2011.

6-1-1112. Written contract - contents - notice. (1) Every contract shall contain the entire agreement of the parties and shall include the following terms:

(a) The name, business address, and telephone number of the equity purchaser;

(b) The street address and full legal description of the residence in foreclosure;

(c) Clear and conspicuous disclosure of any financial or legal obligations of the home owner that will be assumed by the equity purchaser. If the equity purchaser will not be assuming any financial or legal obligations of the home owner, the equity purchaser shall provide to the home owner a separate written disclosure that substantially complies with section 18-5-802 (6), C.R.S.

(d) The total consideration to be paid by the equity purchaser in connection with or incident to the acquisition by the equity purchaser of the residence in foreclosure;

(e) The terms of payment or other consideration, including, but not limited to, any services of any nature that the equity purchaser represents will be performed for the home owner before or after the sale;

(f) The date and time when possession of the residence in foreclosure is to be transferred to the equity purchaser;

(g) The terms of any rental agreement or lease;

(h) The specifications of any option or right to repurchase the residence in foreclosure, including the specific amounts of any escrow deposit, down payment, purchase price, closing costs, commissions, or other fees or costs;

(i) A notice of cancellation as provided in section 6-1-1114; and

(j) The following notice, in at least nine-point bold-faced type, and completed with the name of the equity purchaser, immediately above the statement required by section 6-1-1114:

NOTICE REQUIRED BY COLORADO LAW

Until your right to cancel this contract has ended, (Name) or anyone working for ______________ (Name) CANNOT ask you to sign or have you sign any deed or any other document.

(2) The contract required by this section survives delivery of any instrument of conveyance of the residence in foreclosure, but does not have any effect on persons other than the parties to the contract or affect title to the residence in foreclosure.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1339, § 1, effective May 30. L. 2010: IP(1)(j) amended, (HB 10-1133), ch. 350, p. 1617, § 5, effective January 1, 2011.

6-1-1113. Cancellation. (1) In addition to any right of rescission available under state or federal law, the home owner has the right to cancel a contract with an equity purchaser until 12 midnight of the third business day following the day on which the home owner signs a contract that complies with this part 11 or until 12 noon on the day before the foreclosure sale of the residence in foreclosure, whichever occurs first.

(2) Cancellation occurs when the home owner personally delivers written notice of cancellation to the address specified in the contract or upon deposit of such notice in the United States mail, properly addressed, with postage prepaid.

(3) A notice of cancellation given by the home owner need not take the particular form as provided with the contract and, however expressed, is effective if it indicates the intention of the home owner not to be bound by the contract.

(4) In the absence of any written notice of cancellation from the home owner, the execution by the home owner of a deed or other instrument of conveyance of an interest in the residence in foreclosure to the equity purchaser after the expiration of the rescission period creates a rebuttable presumption that the home owner did not cancel the contract with the equity purchaser.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1340, § 1, effective May 30.

6-1-1114. Notice of cancellation. (1) (a) The contract shall contain, as the last provision before the space reserved for the home owner's signature, a conspicuous statement in at least twelve-point bold-faced type, as follows:

> You may cancel this contract for the sale of your house without any penalty or obligation at any time before ________________ (Date and time of day). See the attached notice of cancellation form for an explanation of this right.

(b) The equity purchaser shall accurately specify the date and time of day on which the cancellation right ends.

(2) The contract shall be accompanied by duplicate completed forms, captioned "notice of cancellation" in at least nine-point bold-faced type if the contract is printed or in capital letters if the contract is typed, followed by a space in which the equity purchaser shall enter the date on which the home owner executed the contract. Such form shall:

(a) Be attached to the contract;

(b) Be easily detachable; and

(c) Contain the following statement, in at least nine-point type if the contract is printed or in capital letters if the contract is typed:

NOTICE OF CANCELLATION

> ________________ (Enter date contract signed). You may cancel this contract for the sale of your house, without any penalty or obligation, at any time before ________________ (Enter date and time of day). To cancel this transaction, personally deliver a signed and dated copy of this Notice of Cancellation in the United States mail, postage prepaid, to ________________________, (Name of purchaser) at ______________________________ (Street address of purchaser's place of business) NOT LATER THAN ________________ (Enter date and time of day). I hereby cancel this transaction ____________________ (Date) ________________________ (Seller's signature)

(3) The equity purchaser shall provide the home owner with a copy of the contract and the attached notice of cancellation.

(4) Until the equity purchaser has complied with this section, the home owner may cancel the contract.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1340, § 1, effective May 30. L. 2010: IP(2) and IP(2)(c) amended, (HB 10-1133), ch. 350, p. 1617, § 6, effective January 1, 2011.

6-1-1115. Options through reconveyances. (1) A transaction in which a home owner purports to grant a residence in foreclosure to an equity purchaser by an instrument that appears to be an absolute conveyance and reserves to the home owner or is given by the equity purchaser an option to repurchase shall be permitted only where all of the following conditions have been met:

(a) The reconveyance contract complies in all respects with section 6-1-1112;

(b) The reconveyance contract provides the home owner with a nonwaivable thirty-day right to cure any default of said reconveyance contract and specifies that the home owner may exercise this right to cure on at least three separate occasions during such reconveyance contract;

(c) The equity purchaser fully assumes or discharges the lien in foreclosure as well as any prior liens that will not be extinguished by such foreclosure, which assumption or discharge shall be accomplished without violation of the terms and conditions of the liens being assumed or discharged;

(d) The equity purchaser verifies and can demonstrate that the home owner has or will have a reasonable ability to make the lease payments and to repurchase the residence in foreclosure within the term of the option to repurchase under the reconveyance contract. For purposes of this section, there is a rebuttable presumption that the home owner has a reasonable ability to make lease payments and to repurchase the residence in foreclosure if the home owner's payments for primary housing expenses and regular principal and interest payments on other personal debt do not exceed sixty percent of the home owner's monthly gross income; and

(e) The price the home owner must pay to exercise the option to repurchase the residence in foreclosure is not unconscionable. Without limitation on available claims under section 6-1-1119, a repurchase price exceeding twenty-five percent of the price at which the equity purchaser acquired the residence in foreclosure creates a rebuttable presumption that the reconveyance contract is unconscionable. The acquisition price paid by the equity purchaser may include any actual costs incurred by the equity purchaser in acquiring the residence in foreclosure.

6-1-1116. Waiver of rights - void. (1) A provision in a contract between an equity purchaser and home owner is void as against public policy if it attempts or purports to:

(a) Waive any of the rights specified in this subpart 3 or the right to a jury trial;

(b) Consent to jurisdiction for litigation or choice of law in a state other than Colorado;

(c) Consent to venue in a county other than the county in which the property is located; or

(d) Impose any costs or fees greater than the actual costs and fees.

6-1-1117. Prohibited conduct. (1) The contract provisions required by sections 6-1-1111 to 6-1-1114 shall be provided and completed in conformity with such sections by the equity purchaser.

(2) Until the time within which the home owner may cancel the transaction has fully elapsed, the equity purchaser shall not do any of the following:

(a) Accept from a home owner an execution of, or induce a home owner to execute, an instrument of conveyance of any interest in the residence in foreclosure;

(b) Record with the county recorder any document, including, but not limited to, the contract or any lease, lien, or instrument of conveyance, that has been signed by the home owner;

(c) Transfer or encumber or purport to transfer or encumber an interest in the residence in foreclosure to a third party; or

(d) Pay the home owner any consideration.

(3) Within ten days following receipt of a notice of cancellation given in accordance with sections 6-1-1113 and 6-1-1114, the equity purchaser shall return without condition the original contract and any other documents signed by the home owner.

(4) An equity purchaser shall make no untrue or misleading statements of material fact regarding the value of the residence in foreclosure, the amount of proceeds the home owner will receive after a foreclosure sale, any contract term, the home owner's rights or obligations incident to or arising out of the sale transaction, the nature of any document that the equity purchaser induces the home owner to sign, or any other untrue or misleading statement concerning the sale of the residence in foreclosure to the equity purchaser.

6-1-1119. Unconscionability. (1) An equity purchaser or associate may not facilitate or engage in any transaction that is unconscionable given the terms and circumstances of the transaction.

(2) (a) If a court, as a matter of law, finds an equity purchaser contract or any clause of such contract to have been unconscionable at the time it was made, the court may refuse to enforce the contract, enforce the remainder of the contract without the unconscionable clause, or so limit the application of any unconscionable clause as to avoid an unconscionable result.

(b) When it is claimed or appears to the court that the contract or any clause thereof may be unconscionable, the parties shall be afforded a reasonable opportunity to present evidence as to its commercial setting, purpose, and effect, to aid the court in making the determination.

(c) In order to support a finding of unconscionability, there must be evidence of some bad faith overreaching on the part of the equity purchaser or associate such as that which results from an unreasonable inequality of bargaining power or under other circumstances in which there is an absence of meaningful choice for one of the parties, together with contract terms that are, under standard industry practices, unreasonably favorable to the equity purchaser or associate.

6-1-1120. Language. (1) Any contract, rental agreement, lease, option or right to repurchase, and any notice, conveyance, lien, encumbrance, consent, or other document or instrument signed by a home owner, shall be written in English; except that, if the equity purchaser has actual or constructive knowledge that the home owner's principal language is other than English, the home owner shall be provided with a notice, written in the home owner's principal language, substantially as follows:

> This transaction involves important and complex legal consequences, including your right to cancel this transaction within three business days following the date you sign this contract. You should consult with an attorney or seek assistance from a housing counselor by calling the Colorado foreclosure hotline at ________________ [current, correct telephone number].

(2) If a notice in the home owner's principal language is required to be provided under subsection (1) of this section, the notice shall be given to the home owner as a separate document accompanying the written contract required by section 6-1-1111.

6-1-1121. Short sales - subsequent purchaser - definition. (1) With respect to any short sale transaction in which an equity purchaser intends to resell the residence in foreclosure to a subsequent purchaser, the equity purchaser shall:

(a) Provide full disclosure to the home owner and to the holders of the evidence of debt on the residence in foreclosure, or such holders' representatives, of the terms of the agreement between the equity purchaser and any subsequent purchaser, including but not limited to the purchase price to be paid by the subsequent purchaser for the residence in foreclosure, which disclosure shall be made within one business day of identifying any such subsequent purchaser and in no event later than closing on the short sale transaction;

(b) Provide full disclosure to any subsequent purchaser and to any subsequent purchaser's lender, or such lender's representative, at the time of contract with the equity purchaser, of the terms of the agreement between the equity purchaser and the home owner, including but not limited to the purchase price paid by the equity purchaser for the residence in foreclosure;

(c) Comply with all applicable rules adopted by the Colorado real estate commission with regard to short sales; and competition is not so ill founded as to be contrary to the law or the constitution. Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

(d) Comply with section 38-35-125, C.R.S.

(2) As used in this section, a "subsequent purchaser" means any person who enters into a contract with an equity purchaser prior to the disbursement of the short sale transaction to acquire the residence in foreclosure and who acquires the residence in foreclosure within fourteen days after the disbursement of the short sale transaction.

6-2-103. Discriminatory sales - exceptions. (1) It is unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation doing business in the state of Colorado and engaged in the production, manufacture, distribution, or sale of any commodity, product, or service of general use or consumption, or the sale of any merchandise or product by any public utility, with the intent to destroy the competition of any regular established dealer in such commodity, product, or service, or to prevent the competition of any person, firm, private corporation, or municipal or other public corporation that in good faith intends and attempts to become a dealer, to discriminate between different sections, communities, or cities, or portions thereof, or between different locations in such sections, communities, cities, or portions thereof in this state by selling or furnishing a commodity, product, or service at a lower rate in one section, community, or city, or any portion thereof, or in one location in such section, community, or city, or any portion thereof than in another after making allowance for the difference, if any, in the grade or quality, quantity, and actual cost of transportation from the point of production, if a raw product or commodity, or from the point of manufacture, if a manufactured product or commodity. Motion picture films when delivered under a lease to motion picture houses shall not be deemed to be a commodity or product of general use or consumption.

(2) Nothing in this article shall be construed to affect or apply to any service or product sold, rendered, or furnished by any public utility, the sale, rendition, or furnishing of which is subject to regulation by the Colorado public utilities commission or by any municipal regulatory body. This article shall not be construed to prohibit the meeting in good faith of a competitive rate.

(3) The inhibition in this section against locality discrimination shall embrace any scheme of special rebates, collateral contracts, or any device of any nature whereby such discrimination is, in substance or fact, effected in violation of the spirit and intent of this article.

(4) It is an unfair trade practice for any person, firm, or corporation doing business in this state and engaged in the production, manufacture, or distribution of either written or printed material or motion pictures to require a buyer or lessee, as a condition of the purchase or lease of such material or motion pictures, to accept other material or motion pictures which the buyer or lessee deems objectionable and written objection is made thereto by such buyer or lessee to the seller or lessor of said material or motion pictures within thirty days after delivery to said buyer or lessee. If such written objection is made within the time provided in this subsection (4), and the seller or lessor does not, within ten days of the receipt of said objection, repurchase or recall such objectionable material or motion pictures from the buyer or lessee, all the remedies provided in this article shall be applicable against said seller or lessor. The provisions of this subsection (4) shall apply whether the material or motion pictures are acquired by the buyer or lessee for resale, sublease, or for any other purpose.

A "fair trade" price maintenance contract as described by this section is lawful. United States v. Frankfort Distilleries, 324 U.S. 293, 65 S. Ct. 661, 89 L. Ed. 649, rev'g 144 F.2d 824 (1945).

This section is not a price-fixing law. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940).

Its purpose is to prevent ruinous price-cutting, by which the business of competitors might be injured and competition destroyed. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940).

Consumers' payment of overcharges qualifies as a type of injury that the statute was designed to prevent. Dunlap v. Colo. Springs Cablevision, Inc., 829 P.2d 1286 (Colo. 1992).

Act applies whenever a business charges different prices to purchasers based on geographic differences with an intent to drive out competition in one geographic area. The act does not require that a business have more than one location. Dunlap v. Colo. Springs Cablevision, Inc., 855 P.2d 6 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided on remand from 829 P.2d 1286 (Colo. 1992)); Ervin v. Amoco Oil Co., 885 P.2d 246 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd, 908 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1995).

A retailer, not guilty of any fraud or deception, who takes a smaller profit than another retailer is willing to accept for the same commodity is not engaged in unfair competition. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp. v. Francis, 134 Colo. 160, 301 P.2d 139 (1956).

Actions performed for the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition are the only ones that violate this law, this purpose or intention is manifestly intended to be a vital element of the violation. Miller's Groceteria Co. v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 113, 109 P.2d 637 (1941).

Thus, where the evidence shows that defendants entered upon a carefully planned, intensive campaign, using nearly all of the common "tricks of the trade" to break into the market in the territory served by competitors, such constitutes a violation of this act. Old Homestead Bread Co. v. Marx Baking Co., 108 Colo. 375, 117 P.2d 1007 (1941).

Also, forcing such contracts is unlawful. Combinations of producers, wholesalers, and retailers, or any of them, to force others into making "fair trade" contracts are not lawful. United States v. Frankfort Distilleries, 324 U.S. 293, 65 S. Ct. 661, 89 L. Ed. 649, rev'g 144 F.2d 824 (1945).

Unfair practices act applicable to title insurance. The state's unfair practices act is applicable to the business of title insurance. Commander Leasing Co. v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co., 477 F.2d 77 (10th Cir. 1973).

This act is not analogous to federal Robinson-Patman Price Discrimination Act. Colorado's Unfair Practices Act does not cover discrimination between purchasers, but rather discrimination based upon and directed at geographic differences, termed "locality discrimination". Venta, Inc. v. Frontier Oil and Ref. Co., 827 F. Supp. 1526 (D. Colo. 1993).

Applied in Q-T Mkts., Inc. v. Fleming Cos., 394 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1975); Carlock v. Pillsbury Co., 719 F. Supp. 791 (D. Minn. 1989).

6-2-104. Personal responsibility. (1) Any person who, either as director, officer, or agent of any firm or corporation or as agent of any person violating the provisions of this article, assists or aids, directly or indirectly, in such violation shall be responsible equally with the person, firm, or corporation for which he acts.

(2) In the prosecution of any person as officer, director, or agent, it shall be sufficient to allege and prove the unlawful intent of the person, firm, or corporation for which he acts.

6-2-105. Unlawful to sell below cost. (1) (a) It is unlawful for any person, partnership, firm, corporation, joint stock company, or other association engaged in business within this state to sell, offer for sale, or advertise for sale any product or service for less than the cost of the product or service with the intent to both injure competitors and destroy competition and where the likely result of such sale would be the acquisition or maintenance of a monopoly. A vendor who violates this section is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to the penalties provided in section 6-2-116.

(b) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 514, § 2, effective April 16, 2007.)

(2) For purposes of this section, "cost" means an appropriate determination of cost that is consistent with federal court interpretations of cost in federal predatory pricing cases under the federal "Sherman Act", 15 U.S.C. sec. 1 et seq.

ANNOTATION

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Antitrust and the Lay Lawyer", see 44 Den. L.J. 558 (1967). For article, "May Regulated Utilities Monopolize the Sun?", see 56 Den. L.J. 31 (1979).

When consideration is paid for one product that is sold in conjunction with another product advertised to be "free" or otherwise offered at no cost to the consumer, the transaction constitutes a combined sale, and thus is not a gift pursuant to the unfair practices act. Defendant's offer of a free car wash in conjunction with the purchase of gasoline is not a gift pursuant to this section. Mastercar, Inc. v. Amoco Oil Co., 835 P. 2d 534 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in Val Vu, Inc. v. Lacey, 31 Colo. App. 55, 497 P.2d 723 (1972); Colo. Petroleum Marketers Ass'n v. Southland Corp., 476 F. Supp. 373 (D. Colo. 1979).

II. UNLAWFUL TO SELL BELOW COST.

Where a merchant is charged with selling goods at below cost in violation of the unfair practices act, it is not error for the trial court to permit evidence to prove the actual intent animating the admitted sales below cost. Perkins v. King Soopers, Inc., 122 Colo. 263, 221 P.2d 343 (1950).

A statute attempting to prohibit all sales below cost would be unconstitutional. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp. v. Francis, 134 Colo. 160, 301 P.2d 139 (1956).

To avoid this result, only such sales may be prohibited which are intended to injure the public in a manner warranting the exercise of the police power. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp. v. Francis, 134 Colo. 160, 301 P.2d 139 (1956).

Thus, intent has to be proved, otherwise this section would be a flat fixing of prices without regard to the public welfare. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp. v. Francis, 134 Colo. 160, 301 P.2d 139 (1956).

Moreover, in action for violation of this section where company denied allegation that the advertisement of intent to give away and the giving away of samples was done for the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition, an issue of fact was tendered which could not be disposed of by a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Miller's Groceteria Co. v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 113, 109 P.2d 637 (1941).

Where the ability to make a purchase at a concession price is expressly contingent on the purchase of other goods, the concession goods are sold below cost only if the total price paid by the customer for the goods involved in such linked transactions is below the total cost of such goods. Parish Oil Co. v. Dillon Cos., 523 F.3d 1244 (10th Cir. 2008) (decided under law in effect prior to 2007 amendment).

A grocery store may sell gasoline below cost if such sales are conditioned on the purchase of enough groceries above cost that the entire series of transactions comes in at a profit. Parish Oil Co. v. Dillon Cos., 523 F.3d 1244 (10th Cir. 2008) (decided under law in effect prior to 2007 amendment).

III. COST.

Evidence which seeks to establish "cost" and "cost of doing business" need not be sufficient to establish these facts with mathematical precision and exactness, the proof need not exist to that high degree of certainty. Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

Such is a problem of sufficiency, not constitutionality. Establishing by competent and material evidence allegations with respect to definitions of costs as applied to "production" and relative to "cost of doing business" or "overhead expense" is not a problem of constitutionality, but a problem of sufficiency of the evidence. Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

Difficulty in application not enough to render section unconstitutional. Any difficulty in computing cost is a factual one, and this section is not to be declared invalid because in its application factual difficulties may arise; mere difficulty of application in the processes of litigation is not enough to enable a court to say that a statute is unconstitutional. Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

Moreover, the term "cost" or "cost of doing business" is not so vague and indefinite that it violates the substantive due process requirement of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution or is so vague that it is wholly impractical. Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

"Seller's costs" means the expense to seller to provide an article or product to its users. Pepcol Mfg. Co. v. Denver Union Corp., 668 P.2d 971 (Colo. App. 1983).

IV. COST OF DOING BUSINESS.

The "cost of doing business" which must be added to the invoice cost need not be absolutely exact or based upon a precise method of accounting which any one merchant might adopt. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940); Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

Rather, the term means the approximate cost arrived at by a reasonable rule. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940); Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

Hence, if a particular method adopted by a merchant cannot be said to be unreasonable, and does not disclose an intentional evasion of the law, the method so adopted should be accepted as correct. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940); Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

In other words, all that a man is required to do under the statute is to act in good faith. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940); Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

6-2-106. How cost established. In establishing the cost of a given product to the distributor and vendor, the invoice cost of the product purchased at a forced, bankrupt, closeout sale, or other sale outside of the ordinary channels of trade may not be used as a basis for justifying a price lower than one based upon the replacement cost as of date of said sale of the product replaced through the ordinary channels of trade, unless the product is kept separate from goods purchased in the ordinary channels of trade and unless the product is advertised and sold as merchandise purchased at a forced, bankrupt, closeout sale, or by means other than through the ordinary channels of trade. The advertising shall state the conditions under which said goods were purchased and the quantity of such merchandise to be sold or offered for sale.

6-2-107. Allegation and proof - evidence. In any injunction proceeding or in the prosecution of any person as officer, director, or agent, it shall be sufficient to allege and prove the unlawful intent of the person, firm, or corporation for which he acts. Where a particular trade or industry of which the person, firm, or corporation complained against is a member has an established cost survey for the locality and vicinity in which the offense is committed, the cost survey shall be deemed competent evidence to be used in proving the costs of the person, firm, or corporation complained against within the provisions of this article.

ANNOTATION

Evidence of intent sufficient for injunction. Defendant's refusal to attend meetings for the purpose of reaching an agreement on the cost of doing business and asserting that he did not think the law could be enforced indicated an intent not to obey it; this, and other, evidence was sufficient to warrant injunction against violation of law. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940).

6-2-108. Secret rebates or refunds prohibited. The secret payment or allowance of rebates, refunds, commissions, or unearned discounts, whether in the form of money or otherwise, or secretly extending to certain purchasers special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers upon like terms and conditions, to the injury of a competitor and where such payment or allowance tends to destroy competition, is an unfair trade practice. Any person, firm, partnership, corporation, or association resorting to such unfair trade practice is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to the penalties provided in section 6-2-116.

Section 6-2-109 inapplicable. Since the reference in § 6-2-109 is "to" § 6-2-108, that section is excluded and § 6-2-109 is inapplicable to secret rebates or refunds. Q-T Mkts., Inc. v. Fleming Cos., 394 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1975).

6-2-109. Contract illegal - when. Any contract, express or implied, made by any person, firm, or corporation in violation of any of the provisions of sections 6-2-103 to 6-2-108 is an illegal contract, and no recovery thereon shall be had; except that no part of this article shall prevent the payment of patronage refunds by cooperative agencies or associations existing and operating under the laws of this state.

Section 6-2-108 excluded. Since the reference in § 6-2-109 is "to" § 6-2-108, that section is excluded and § 6-2-109 is inapplicable to secret rebates or refunds. Q-T Mkts., Inc. v. Fleming Cos., 394 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1975).

6-2-110. When provisions not applicable. (1) The provisions of sections 6-2-105 to 6-2-107 shall not apply to any sale made:

(a) In closing out in good faith the owner's stock or any part thereof for the purpose of discontinuing his trade in any such stock or commodity, and in the case of the sale of seasonal goods or the bona fide sale of perishable goods to prevent loss to the vendor by spoilage or depreciation, if notice is given to the public thereof;

(b) When the goods are damaged or deteriorated in quality and notice is given to the public thereof;

(c) By an officer acting under the orders of any court;

(d) In an endeavor made in good faith to meet the prices of a competitor selling the same product or service in the same locality or trade area.

(2) Any person, firm, or corporation who performs work upon, renovates, alters, or improves any personal property belonging to another person, firm, or corporation shall be construed to be a vendor within the meaning of this article.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Antitrust and the Lay Lawyer", see 44 Den. L.J. 558 (1967).

The term "trade area" as used in this section is not limited in terms of the immediate geographic area of the business. Val Vu, Inc. v. Lacey, 31 Colo. App. 55, 497 P.2d 723 (1972).

So where there are a significant number of persons who would leave a particular merchant's immediate area and go to an adjoining area as a result of advertisement from that area's newspapers, that merchant should be allowed to meet those advertised prices without violating this statute. Val Vu, Inc. v. Lacey, 31 Colo. App. 55, 497 P.2d 723 (1972).

For example, Boulder merchant may meet Denver prices. In the light of the mobility of our population, and the proclivity of residents of Boulder to shop throughout the Denver metropolitan area, a Boulder merchant may meet Denver prices. Val Vu, Inc. v. Lacey, 31 Colo. App. 55, 497 P.2d 723 (1972).

6-2-111. Unlawful acts - remedy - license. (1) Any person, firm, private corporation, municipal corporation, public corporation, or trade association may maintain an action to enjoin a continuance of any act in violation of sections 6-2-103 to 6-2-108 or section 6-2-110 and, if injured thereby, for the recovery of damages. If, in such action, the court finds that the defendant is violating or has violated any of the provisions of sections 6-2-103 to 6-2-108 or section 6-2-110, it shall enjoin the defendant from a continuance of the violations. It shall not be necessary that actual damages to the plaintiff be alleged or proved. In addition to such injunctive relief, the plaintiff in said action shall be entitled to recover from the defendant three times the amount of the actual damages, if any, sustained.

(2) Without prejudice to the rights of any person, firm, private corporation, municipal corporation, public corporation, or trade association to bring an action, the attorney general of the state of Colorado, as an incident to and power of his office, has like powers to those provided in subsection (1) of this section, and it is his duty, upon showing by any person, firm, private corporation, municipal corporation, public corporation, or trade association that there is reason to believe that any person subject to the terms of this article is violating any term of sections 6-2-103 to 6-2-108 or section 6-2-110, to prosecute actions for violation of any provisions of this article, and to seek injunctions or restraining orders to enjoin the continuance thereof by any defendant.

(3) If any person, firm, private corporation, municipal corporation, public corporation, or trade association, in writing and under oath, submits to the attorney general a statement setting forth facts sufficient to constitute a prima facie case of violation of any of the provisions of sections 6-2-103 to 6-2-108 or any other provisions of this article, it shall be mandatory upon the attorney general to seek injunctive relief or restraining orders to enjoin the continuance of such violation by any person, firm, private corporation, or other organization so charged; and to this end, and for this purpose, the attorney general has the power to appear in his official capacity in any court in the state of Colorado, having jurisdiction in the premises, to seek relief.

(4) It is the duty of any district attorney in and for each of the judicial districts of the state of Colorado, when requested in writing by the attorney general, to advise and consult with the attorney general concerning the institution and prosecution of such actions, and to act for the attorney general in prosecution of any such action; but the attorney general has the power in his discretion to choose, select, appoint, and recompense from funds provided for the purposes of enforcement of the provisions of this article any attorney-at-law admitted to practice in the state of Colorado as a special prosecutor who has full and complete power to act for the attorney general.

(5) The attorney general, for the purposes of carrying out the terms and provisions of this article, has the power to promulgate rules and regulations for the enforcement of this article, not inconsistent with its terms, and to publish the same.

(6) The attorney general is empowered to appoint such personnel as may reasonably be required to carry out the functions prescribed for his office.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Antitrust and the Lay Lawyer", see 44 Den. L.J. 558 (1967).

Unfair Practices Act does not require that a plaintiff make a prima facie showing to support the allegations of a complaint before obtaining discovery. Direct Sales Tire Co. v. Dist. Court, 686 P.2d 1316 (Colo. 1984).

Enforcement of unfair practices act is left to the courts instead of to an administrative board. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940).

Where an injunction is sought, this section is viewed from the standpoint not of the prudent man, but rather from the standpoint of the judge hearing the case; therefore, the proper test is whether the standards contained in the statutory provisions are so vague as to make it impossible to adjudicate rights arising out of their provisions. Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

In an injunction action, prospective in effect, the terms "cost" and "cost of doing business" are not so indefinite and uncertain as to provide no basis for the adjudication of rights. Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

Furthermore, the adjudication itself provides notice to defendant. When a plaintiff seeks an injunction he is not demanding that the defendant be punished, but rather that he be restrained from acting unlawfully in the future. Consequently, the adjudication itself provides notice to the defendant and is prospective in its application, and the result is that the defendant is not prejudiced by the failure of the statute to provide precise and adequate warning beforehand. Where, however, the requested sanction is penal or criminal, there is a reasonable basis for requiring it to give actual prior notice so that men of common intelligence are not required to guess at its meaning and differ as to its application. Flank Oil Co. v. Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., 141 Colo. 554, 349 P.2d 1005 (1960).

This section does not contravene § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const., which guarantees trial by jury in criminal cases, since the effect of injunctive relief in a civil action is different from that following a judgment under a criminal information. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940).

A nonprofit corporation is a proper party plaintiff for the maintenance of a suit under this section, whether it be classed as a private corporation or an association. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1940).

A nonprofit corporation is entitled to the same protection against unfair competition as a for-profit corporation and has standing to bring an action for a preliminary injunction against alleged unfair competition. Am. Ski Ass'n v. Bergstedt, 682 P.2d 57 (Colo. App. 1984).

When there is sufficient evidence to sustain a ruling or judgment under this section, the same will not be disturbed on appeal. Dikeou v. Food Distribs. Ass'n, 107 Colo. 38, 108 P.2d 529 (1941).

For an injunction held not too broad, see Old Homestead Bread Co. v. Marx Baking Co., 108 Colo. 375, 117 P.2d 1007 (1941).

An injunction properly entered against two companies. Where two companies had the same officers and directors, the sales manager acted as such for both companies, the products were identical and it was these products that were made the instruments of an offense under this act, an injunction restraining violations was properly entered as against both companies. Old Homestead Bread Co. v. Marx Baking Co., 108 Colo. 375, 117 P.2d 1007 (1941).

If the practice sought to be restrained in an injunction suit has been abandoned in good faith and for all time, a decree enjoining the practice is without prejudice to defendant, while it affords protection to which the plaintiff is entitled. Old Homestead Bread Co. v. Marx Baking Co., 108 Colo. 375, 117 P.2d 1007 (1941).

Consumers may maintain an action for damages if they can show that they have been injured as a result of an antitrust violation specified in this section, and the injury is the type of injury that the particular antitrust statutory provision was designed to prevent. Dunlap v. Colo. Springs Cablevision, Inc., 829 P.2d 1286 (Colo. 1992).

6-2-111.5. Civil discovery requests. (1) When the attorney general has reasonable cause to believe that any person, partnership, firm, corporation, joint stock company, or other association has engaged in or is engaging in a violation of any provision of this article, the attorney general may:

(a) Request such person to file a statement or report in writing, under oath or otherwise, on forms prescribed by the attorney general, or to answer in writing, under oath or otherwise, any questions propounded by the attorney general as to all facts and circumstances reasonably related to the alleged violation, and to provide any other data and information the attorney general reasonably deems to be necessary;

(b) Issue subpoenas to require the attendance of witnesses or the production of relevant documents, administer oaths, conduct hearings in aid of an investigation or inquiry, and prescribe such forms and promulgate such rules as may reasonably be deemed to be necessary to administer the provisions of this article; and

(c) Make true copies, at the expense of the attorney general, of any documents examined pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (1), which copies may be offered into evidence in lieu of the originals thereof in any civil action brought pursuant to this article. The person producing the documents may require that the attorney general make copies of the documents. If the attorney general determines the use of originals is necessary, the attorney general shall pay to have copies of those documents made for use by the person producing the documents.

(2) Service of any request or subpoena shall be made in the manner prescribed by law.

(3) Any written response, testimony, or documents obtained by the attorney general pursuant to this section or any information derived directly or indirectly from such written response, testimony, or documents shall not be admissible in evidence in any criminal prosecution against the person providing the written response, testimony, or documents. The provisions of this subsection (3) shall not be construed to prevent any law enforcement officer having an independent basis therefor from producing or obtaining the same or similar facts, information, or evidence for use in any criminal prosecution.

(4) Nothing in this section shall prohibit the attorney general from disclosing information obtained pursuant to this section to any other law enforcement agency or department of any governmental or public entity of this or any other state or to the federal government if such other law enforcement agency or department executes an agreement that such information will remain confidential and will not be used in any criminal prosecution against the person providing the written response, testimony, or documents.

(5) If any person fails to appear or fails to cooperate with any investigation or inquiry pursuant to a request or subpoena issued pursuant to this section, the attorney general may apply to any district court for an appropriate order to effect the purposes of this section. The application shall state that there is reasonable cause to believe that the order applied for is necessary to investigate, prosecute, or terminate a violation of this article. If the court is satisfied that reasonable cause exists, the court may:

(a) Require the attendance of or the production of documents by such person, or both;

(b) Assess a civil penalty of up to five thousand dollars for such failure to appear and answer questions, written or otherwise, or such failure to produce documents unless the court finds that the failure to appear, to answer questions, or to produce documents was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an assessment of a civil penalty unjust;

(c) Award the attorney general reasonable costs and attorney fees in making this application unless the court finds that the failure to appear, to answer questions, or to produce documents was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of costs and attorney fees unjust;

(d) Enter any protective order as provided for in the Colorado rules of civil procedure;

(e) Grant such other or further relief as may be necessary to obtain compliance by such person.

6-2-112. Testimony - books and records. In an action brought under this article, any defendant may be required to testify under subpoena duly issued in pursuance to the Colorado rules of civil procedure, and the books and records of any such defendant may be brought into court and introduced into evidence. No information so obtained may be used against the defendant as a basis for a misdemeanor prosecution under the provisions of this article.

6-2-113. Selling below cost. For the purposes of this article, in all sales involving more than one product or service and in all sales involving the giving of any concession of any kind, the combined total selling price of all products or services shall be compared to the combined total cost of all products or services involved in the sales to determine whether the vendor or distributor is selling below cost.

ANNOTATION

Where the ability to make a purchase at a concession price is expressly contingent on the purchase of other goods, the concession goods are sold below cost only if the total price paid by the customer for the goods involved in such linked transactions is below the total cost of such goods. A grocery store may sell gasoline below cost if such sales are conditioned on the purchase of enough groceries above cost that the entire series of transactions comes in at a profit. 6-2-115.5. State agencies - authority to contract with private enterprise. (1) Any state agency which is provided goods or services or which provides goods to the public, including manufacturing, processing, selling, offering for sale, renting, leasing, delivering, distributing, or advertising, shall determine if such goods can also be provided for by contract with private persons, partnerships, or corporations or any other type of private enterprise.

(2) Whenever a state agency determines that goods provided by it to the public can be more cost-effectively delivered by contract with private enterprise, or whenever a state agency determines that goods can be provided to it more cost-effectively by contract with private enterprise, such state agency is authorized to enter into a contract, in accordance with the "Procurement Code", articles 101 to 112 of title 24, C.R.S., to obtain such goods.

(3) The provisions of subsections (1) and (2) of this section do not apply to the division of correctional industries products and services as long as such products and services are of comparable price and quality.

ARTICLE 2.7

Internet Evidence for Law Enforcement Investigations

6-2.7-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Court order" means an order for the release of information, including but not limited to a subpoena, court order, search warrant, or summons.

(2) "Internet access provider" means an entity that provides electronic communications or remote computing as defined in 18 U.S.C. sec. 119 and sec. 121, to customers in Colorado. "Internet access provider" shall not include noninternet-based communications.

Source: L. 2006: Entire article added, p. 2057, § 9, effective October 1.

6-2.7-102. Internet evidence for law enforcement - preserve and release evidence - reports - training materials. (1) (a) An internet access provider, upon the request of a law enforcement agency, shall take all necessary steps to preserve records and other evidence in its possession pending the issuance of a court order or other legal process. The internet access provider shall comply with the request as soon as possible following receipt.

(b) Records referred to in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) shall be retained for a period of ninety days, which shall be extended for an additional ninety-day period upon a renewed request by the law enforcement agency.

(2) (a) An internet access provider shall release evidence regarding all categories of information identified in 18 U.S.C. sec. 2703 (c) (2) that are in its possession within ten days after receiving a court order requiring the internet access provider to release such evidence to law enforcement. If the internet access provider demonstrates to the requesting law enforcement agency within five days of the request that, for bona fide technical reasons, it cannot comply with the order within ten days of the request, it shall make every reasonable effort to comply with the request as soon as reasonably possible.

(b) In connection with any criminal investigation regarding possible sex offenses involving a child under section 18-1.3-1003, C.R.S., that involves immediate danger of death or serious bodily harm, a law enforcement agency in this state may issue a request, without compulsory legal process or court order, to a designated recipient of the internet access provider to disclose, consistent with 18 U.S.C. sec. 2702 (c) (4), the information identified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2). The internet access provider shall comply with the request immediately and without delay, or if unable to immediately comply, communicate with the requesting agency to discuss the nature of the request and to coordinate a timely response.

(3) An internet access provider doing business in this state shall report incidents of apparent child pornography to the national center for missing and exploited children pursuant to 42 U.S.C. sec. 13032. The report shall include, if available, the subscriber's city and state or zip code.

(4) Each internet access provider with more than fifteen thousand subscribers who are residents of this state shall, upon request of the attorney general, provide training materials to law enforcement agencies in this state regarding best practices for investigating internet-related crimes involving sexual exploitation of children, the internet access provider's law enforcement compliance practices, and contact information for the internet access provider and its designated recipient for law enforcement requests.

(5) Subsections (1) and (2) of this section shall be interpreted consistent with the requirements of federal law that apply to internet access providers, including but not limited to 18 U.S.C. 2701 et seq. and 42 U.S.C. 13032.

Source: L. 2006: Entire article added, p. 2058, § 9, effective October 1.

6-2.7-103. Internet evidence - failure to release or preserve - civil penalty. (1) An internet access provider that fails to comply with the requirements in section 6-2.7-102 (1) or (2) shall be liable for payment of a civil penalty of up to two thousand five hundred dollars for each incidence of noncompliance; except that the internet access provider shall be liable for payment of up to ten thousand dollars for a third and subsequent incidence of noncompliance that occurs within a twelve-month period. The state attorney general is authorized to bring suit in a court of competent jurisdiction for enforcement of the provisions of this subsection (1).

(2) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (1) of this section, an internet access provider's failure to comply with the requirements specified in section 6-2.7-102 shall not result in further civil liability to the state.

Annotator's note. Since § 6-4-104 is similar to § 6-4-101 as it existed prior to the 1992 repeal and reenactment of this article, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Purpose of state antitrust legislation. State antitrust legislation serves the important function of protecting the public against illegal trade restraints beyond the reach of federal law, without undercutting the legitimate rights of employees to engage in lawful, concerted activities for the purpose of improving their wages, hours and other conditions of employment. People v. North Ave. Furn. & Appliance, Inc., 645 P.2d 1291 (Colo. 1982).

Antitrust statute, as does its federal counterpart, reaches only those contracts or combinations in restraint of trade which unreasonably restrain trade or are designed to destroy competition in a particular market. People v. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors, 692 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1984).

Illegal restraint of trade act applicable to title insurance. The state's illegal restraint of trade act is applicable to the business of title insurance. Commander Leasing Co. v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co., 477 F.2d 77 (10th Cir. 1973).

A coroner may not conspire with a private funeral home to acquire business for the funeral home through the discharge of his public duties in restraint of trade among all private funeral homes. People ex rel. Kinsey v. Sumner, 34 Colo. App. 61, 525 P.2d 512 (1974).

What establishes restraint of trade. Plaintiffs have a remedy under the Colorado restraint of trade act only to the extent that they can establish that there was a combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce in Colorado, or a combination or conspiracy fixing prices, or a combination and conspiracy which monopolized or attempted to monopolize trade or commerce in Colorado. Q-T Mkts., Inc. v. Fleming Cos., 394 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1975).

Federal antitrust laws. Federal and state antitrust statutes serve complementary purposes. In view of their common goals of preserving free competition and protecting the public against illegal restraints of trade, the antitrust decisions of the United States supreme court are entitled to careful consideration in determining the meaning and scope of the Colorado antitrust statute. People v. North Ave. Furn. & Appliance, Inc., 645 P.2d 1291 (Colo. 1982).

Economic power means that a single seller possesses the ability to raise prices and restrict output for the product in the relevant market. Economic power can be established by showing that the tying product is unavailable elsewhere or is particularly unique and desirable or that the defendant has a dominant position in the tying market. Factual uniqueness alone is insufficient. The markets in which products are sold is the focus of any inquiry into the validity of a tying arrangement. The impact on competition of a single forced sale of a tied product to a single customer is never sufficient to warrant a finding of market power over the tying product. McCormick v. Bradley, 870 P.2d 599 (Colo. App. 1993).

No claim presented under this section where discharged employee was not injured "by reason of" alleged anticompetitive effect of employer's conduct. Winther v. DEC Inter'l Inc., 625 F. Supp. 100 (D. Colo. 1985).

Three types of restraint of trade. The two sentences in this section appear to define three different types of illegal restraints of trade. Q-T Mkts., Inc. v. Fleming Cos., 394 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1975).

Monopolization limited to conspiracy, etc. Given the grammar of this section, it must be concluded that monopolization or attempted monopolization is limited to a combination, conspiracy, trust, or pool because it is inconceivable that a contract or agreement could, in itself, monopolize or attempt to monopolize trade or commerce. Q-T Mkts., Inc. v. Fleming Cos., 394 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1975).

Group boycott. The term "group boycott" refers to a concerted refusal by traders to deal with competitors. Under the circumstances, the state failed to establish that requirement of board of realtors membership for access to multiple listing service was group boycott or refusal to deal with competitors which constituted per se violation of antitrust statute. People v. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors, 692 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1984).

An illegal tying contract is irrelevant to this section because such contracts are not prohibited by it. Q-T Mkts., Inc. v. Fleming Cos., 394 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1975).

Tying arrangement. The essential characteristic of any tying arrangement is an agreement to sell one product but only on the condition that the buyer also purchase a different (or tied) product. Tying arrangements constitute unreasonable restraints of trade in and of themselves per se whenever a party has sufficient economic power with respect to the tying product to appreciably restrain free competition in the market for the tied product and a not insubstantial amount of interstate commerce is affected, but mere fact that goods or services are sold in combination does not establish prohibited tying arrangement. People v. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors, 692 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1984).

Test applied in McCormick v. Bradley, 870 P.2d 599 (Colo. App. 1993).

Determination of violation. Any particular business agreement, combination, or arrangement may in some circumstances be determined to constitute a per se violation of the statute, without the necessity of proving actual anticompetitive impact on the particular market involved. Additionally, a business arrangement which does not per se violate antitrust law nevertheless may be found to constitute an illegal arrangement under the rule of reason analysis articulated by the United States supreme court. Thus, in determining whether particular conduct violates this section, a trial court must normally determine whether the challenged arrangement is illegal per se. If no per se violation is established, the court may be required to apply the rule of reason analysis to the challenged conduct. People v. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors, 692 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1984).

Test applied in McCormick v. Bradley, 870 P.2d 599 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where violation of statute consisted of the adoption of two specific membership criteria, and neither criteria were applied to deny membership to any applicant, nor were any damages sustained by any party as the result of the violator's adoption of such criteria, the appropriate sanction is to prohibit the violator from enforcing the offensive membership criteria. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors v. State, 780 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1989).

Per se antitrust violation. Developer's requirement that only approved builders may construct homes on lots is not a per se antitrust violation where unapproved builder failed to establish a substantial amount of commerce within the tied market had been foreclosed. McCormick v. Bradley, 870 P.2d 599 (Colo. App. 1993).

Rule of reason required the trial court to weigh the pro-competitive and anti-competitive effects of the two membership criteria. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors v. State, 780 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1989); McCormick v. Bradley, 870 P.2d 599 (Colo. App. 1993).

Test applied in McCormick v. Bradley, 870 P.2d 599 (Colo. App. 1993).

In terms of evidentiary production, no bright line is available to distinguish per se from rule of reason analysis. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors v. State, 780 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1989).

Where court applied rule of reason analysis to facts of case and concluded that anticompetitive effects of certain criteria outweighed any pro-competitive results their adoption might have engendered, in adopting these two membership criteria the violator improperly refused to deal with competitors and that such group boycott violated this section. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors v. State, 780 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1989).

Criminal statutes must be construed strictly. Q-T Mkts., Inc. v. Fleming Cos., 394 F. Supp. 1102 (D. Colo. 1975).

Installation of carpeting for money is "trade or commerce" within the meaning of this section. That the installation involves the exchange of a service for money, rather than the exchange of an article or commodity, is a distinction without antitrust significance. People v. North Ave. Furn. & Appliance, Inc., 645 P.2d 1291 (Colo. 1982).

6-4-107. Mergers - acquisitions. (1) It is unlawful for any person engaged in trade or commerce to acquire, directly or indirectly, the whole or any part of the stock or other share capital, or to acquire the whole or any part of the assets, of another person engaged in trade or commerce where the effect of such acquisition may be to substantially lessen competition or may tend to create a monopoly.

(2) Nothing in this section shall prohibit any person from acquiring stock of another person solely for investment purposes, so long as such acquisition of stock is not used, by voting or otherwise, to bring about, or to attempt to bring about, the substantial lessening of competition; nor shall anything in this section prohibit any person from causing the formation of subsidiary corporations or from owning and holding all or any part of the stock of such subsidiary corporation.

(3) The attorney general shall not challenge any merger or acquisition under the provisions of this section which has been reviewed by any federal department, agency, or commission under section 7A of the federal "Clayton Act" and for which all applicable waiting periods have expired or have been terminated without a challenge to such merger or acquisition by that department, agency, or commission.

(4) The attorney general shall not challenge the merger or acquisition of any bank or bank holding company by or with any other bank or bank holding company that is subject to the provisions of any of the federal banking laws, except as specifically provided in those laws.

6-4-108. Exemptions. (1) The labor of a human being is not a commodity, service, or article of trade or commerce.

(2) Nothing contained in this article shall be construed to forbid the existence and operation of labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations, instituted for purposes of mutual help, or engaged in making collective sales or marketing for its members or shareholders, and not having capital stock or conducted for profit, or to forbid or restrain individual members of such organizations from lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof.

(3) A professional review committee constituted and conducting its reviews and activities in accordance with the provisions of part 1 of article 36.5 of title 12, C.R.S., or the members thereof, shall not be held nor construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade under this article.

(4) Any person, activity, or conduct exempt or immune under the laws of this state or exempt or immune from the provisions of the federal antitrust laws shall be exempt or immune from the provisions of this article without regard to any monetary threshold imposed by federal law; except that nothing in this article shall be deemed to modify the specific provisions of part 4 of article 4 of title 10, C.R.S.

(5) Nothing in this article shall prohibit or be construed to prohibit:

(a) The formation of a cooperative health care agreement that has been approved in whole or in part in accordance with the provisions of part 5 of article 1 of title 25.5, C.R.S.;

(b) Any conduct or activity reasonably necessary and reasonably foreseeable to implement a board-approved cooperative health care agreement or a decision or order issued by the cooperative health care agreements board pursuant to part 5 of article 1 of title 25.5, C.R.S.;

(c) The negotiation of or entering into any cooperative health care agreement which is filed with the cooperative health care agreements board; or

(d) Community planning, discussions, or negotiations intended in good faith to culminate in a cooperative health care agreement to be filed with the cooperative health care agreements board. Such agreements, conduct, or activities shall not be held or construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade under this article.

(6) Nothing in this article shall prohibit or be construed to prohibit the formation and operation of health care coverage cooperatives or provider networks pursuant to part 3 of article 18 of this title or part 10 of article 16 of title 10, C.R.S.

6-4-110. Civil discovery request. (1) When the attorney general has reasonable cause to believe that any person has engaged in or is engaging in a violation of any provision of this article or of any provision of the federal antitrust statutes that may be enforced by the attorney general, the attorney general may:

(a) Request such person to file a statement or report in writing, under oath or otherwise, on forms prescribed by the attorney general, or to answer in writing, under oath or otherwise, any questions propounded by the attorney general, as to all facts and circumstances reasonably related to the alleged violation and to provide any other data and information the attorney general reasonably deems to be necessary;

(b) Issue subpoenas to require the attendance of witnesses or the production of relevant documents, administer oaths, conduct hearings in aid of an investigation or inquiry, and prescribe such forms and promulgate such rules as may reasonably be deemed to be necessary to administer the provisions of this section; and

(c) Make true copies, at the expense of the attorney general, of any documents examined pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (1), which copies may be offered into evidence in lieu of the originals thereof in any civil action brought pursuant to this article. The person producing the documents may require that the attorney general make copies of the documents. If the attorney general determines the use of originals is necessary, the attorney general shall pay to have copies of those documents made for use by the person producing the documents.

(2) Service of any request or subpoena shall be made in the manner prescribed by law.

(3) Any written response, testimony, or documents obtained by the attorney general pursuant to this section, or any information derived directly or indirectly from such written response, testimony, or documents, shall not be admissible in evidence in any criminal prosecution against the person providing the written response, testimony, or documents. The provisions of this subsection (3) shall not be construed to prevent any law enforcement officer, having an independent basis therefor, from producing or obtaining the same or similar facts, information, or evidence for use in any criminal prosecution.

(4) Nothing in this section shall prohibit the attorney general from disclosing information obtained pursuant to this section to any other law enforcement agency or department of any governmental or public entity of this or any other state or to the federal government if such other law enforcement agency or department executes an agreement that such information will remain confidential and will not be used in any criminal prosecution against the person providing the written response, testimony, or documents.

(5) If any person fails to appear or fails to cooperate with any investigation or inquiry pursuant to a request or subpoena issued pursuant to this section, the attorney general may apply to any district court for an appropriate order to effect the purposes of this section. The application shall state that there is reasonable cause to believe that the order applied for is necessary to investigate, prosecute, or terminate a violation of this article. If the court is satisfied that reasonable cause exists, the court may:

(a) Require the attendance of, or the production of documents by, such person, or both;

(b) Assess a civil penalty of up to five thousand dollars for such failure to appear and answer questions, written or otherwise, or such failure to produce documents unless the court finds that the failure to appear, to answer questions, or to produce documents was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an assessment of a civil penalty unjust;

(c) Award the attorney general reasonable costs and attorney fees in making this application unless the court finds that the failure to appear, to answer questions, or to produce documents was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of costs and attorney fees unjust;

(d) Enter any protective order as provided for in the Colorado rules of civil procedure; and

(e) Grant such other or further relief as may be necessary to obtain compliance by such person.

6-4-111. Enforcement by the attorney general. (1) The attorney general shall have the authority to institute actions or proceedings to prevent or restrain violations of this article.

(2) The attorney general may bring a civil action on behalf of any governmental or public entity, with the written consent of such entity, injured, either directly or indirectly, in its business or property by reason of any violation of this article and, if successful, shall recover any actual damages sustained by such entity. If the violation alleged and proved is determined by the court to be a per se violation of this article, the attorney general may recover three times the actual damages sustained by such entity.

(3) (a) The attorney general may bring a civil action as parens patriae on behalf of natural persons residing within the state injured in their business or property by reason of any violation of this article and, if successful, shall recover any actual damages sustained by such natural persons. If the violation alleged and proved is determined by the court to be a per se violation of this article, the attorney general may recover three times the actual damages sustained by such natural persons.

(b) In any parens patriae action brought pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (3), the attorney general shall cause notice to be given to the proposed parens group by publication or as otherwise directed by the court, and all proposed parens group members shall have the right to elect to have their particular claim excluded from that proceeding. No dismissal or compromise settlement of an action brought by the attorney general as parens patriae shall be entered without the approval of the court and notice to all proposed parens group members.

(c) In any parens patriae action in which actual or treble damages are recovered, the court, in its discretion, may determine that the amount of damages recovered is too small to make a refund to parens group members practicable. In that event, the court may direct such damages to be paid to the general fund of the state or to some other governmental or public entity as the court deems appropriate or may require that damages be paid as rebates or price reductions to future consumers.

(4) In any action brought pursuant to this section, the attorney general, if successful, shall be entitled to recover the costs of investigation, expert fees, costs of the action, and reasonable attorney fees.

6-4-112. Civil penalties. (1) The attorney general may bring a civil action on behalf of the state to seek the imposition of a civil penalty for any violation of this article. The court, upon finding a violation of this article, shall impose a civil penalty to be paid to the general fund of the state in an amount not to exceed two hundred fifty thousand dollars for each such violation; except that the election by the attorney general to seek a civil penalty shall preclude the attorney general from filing criminal charges against the person assessed a civil penalty based upon the same conduct or from pursuing an action against such person for damages pursuant to section 6-4-111 (2) and (3).

(2) In determining the amount of a civil penalty, the court shall consider, among other things: The nature and extent of the violation; the number of consumers affected by the violation; whether the violation was an isolated incident or a continuous pattern and practice of behavior; whether the violation was the result of willful conduct; whether the defendant took affirmative steps to conceal such violations; and whether, given the size and wealth of the defendant, the civil penalty will be an effective deterrent against future violations.

6-4-114. Enforcement - civil damages. (1) Any person injured in its business or property by reason of any violation of this article may sue therefor and, if successful, shall recover any actual damages sustained by such person. If the violation alleged and proved is determined by the court to be a per se violation of this article, such person may recover three times the actual damages sustained by such person.

(2) In any action brought pursuant to this section, the court, in its discretion, may award the prevailing party its expert fees, the costs of the action, and reasonable attorney fees.

(3) No damages, costs, expert fees, costs of investigation, civil penalties, or attorney fees may be recovered from a governmental or public entity, or from any official, agent, or employee thereof acting in an official capacity, or from any person based on any official action directed by such governmental or public entity.

End users of software lacked standing to pursue a class action claim under this section. Software was obtained by end user class members from original equipment manufacturers and retailers rather than from the software manufacturer and was licensed through an end user licensing agreement. The licensing agreement was the functional equivalent of a sale, and the end users, though licensees, were therefore essentially indirect purchasers of the software precluded from pursuing a claim under Illinois Brick Co. v. Illinois, 431 U.S. 720, 97 S. Ct. 2061, 52 L.Ed.2d 707 (1977). Pomerantz v. Microsoft Corp., 50 P.3d 929 (Colo. App. 2002).

The end user licensing agreements did not create functional economic unity between software manufacturer and original equipment manufacturers and retailers, and the end users, therefore, were not direct purchasers of software. Pomerantz v. Microsoft Corp., 50 P.3d 929 (Colo. App. 2002).

(2) Any natural person who violates section 6-4-104, 6-4-105, or 6-4-106 commits a class 5 felony and shall be punished as provided in section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S.

(3) Any person, other than a natural person and a governmental or public entity, that violates section 6-4-104, 6-4-105, or 6-4-106 is guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one million dollars.

ARTICLE 6

Unsolicited Goods

6-6-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Unsolicited goods" means contractual obligations or other tangible or intangible property or services delivered to a person who has not ordered, solicited, or agreed to purchase them, but shall not include tangible or intangible goods or services which are misdirected, misdelivered, or offered in good faith in substitution for goods solicited by the recipient.

Source: L. 75: Entire article added, p. 262, § 1, effective July 14. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 1574, § 6, effective July 1.

6-6-102. Obligation of recipient. (1) Unless otherwise agreed, where unsolicited goods are delivered to a person, he has a right to refuse to accept delivery of the goods and is not bound to return such goods to the sender.

(2) If such unsolicited goods are either addressed to or intended for the recipient, they shall be deemed a gift to the recipient, who may use them or dispose of them in any manner he sees fit without any obligation to the sender.

Source: L. 75: Entire article added, p. 262, § 1, effective July 14.

6-6-103. Collections prohibited - penalty. (1) No sender of any unsolicited goods shall mail or otherwise send to any recipient of such unsolicited goods a bill for such unsolicited goods or any dunning communications.

(2) (a) The sender of a magazine or other periodical shall cancel a subscription if any invoice is returned by the recipient marked "cancel". Cancellation shall also occur when the recipient gives written notice of cancellation to the sender at the sender's address or at the address of the subscription department printed in the periodical, or, if no such department is listed, at the general business address of the periodical.

(b) Notice of cancellation may be given by regular mail, and is effective on the date received by the sender. Notice of cancellation need not take any particular form and is sufficient if it indicates by any form of written expression that the recipient wishes to terminate the subscription. Within sixty days after notice of cancellation for prepaid subscriptions, the sender shall refund to the recipient any amount paid for the subscription less the amount owed by the recipient for any periodicals, together with the postage thereon, if postage has been charged separately, received before the effective date of the notice of cancellation.

(c) For purposes of this subsection (2), "sender" means the publisher of a periodical, any person acting as the agent of such publisher, and any person purporting to act as the agent of such publisher, and a seller of the periodical.

(3) Violation of this section shall constitute a class 2 petty offense, and, upon conviction thereof, the violator shall be punished by a fine of not more than two hundred fifty dollars. Violation of this section shall also constitute a deceptive trade practice in violation of the "Colorado Consumer Protection Act", article 1 of this title, and shall be subject to remedies or penalties, or both, pursuant thereto.

ARTICLE 6.5

Soil and Hazard Analyses of Residential Construction

6-6.5-101. Disclosure to purchaser - penalty. (1) At least fourteen days prior to closing the sale of any new residence for human habitation, every developer or builder or their representatives shall provide the purchaser with a copy of a summary report of the analysis and the site recommendations. For sites in which significant potential for expansive soils is recognized, the builder or his representative shall supply each buyer with a copy of a publication detailing the problems associated with such soils, the building methods to address these problems during construction, and suggestions for care and maintenance to address such problems.

(2) In addition to any other liability or penalty, any builder or developer failing to provide the report or publication required by subsection (1) of this section shall be subject to a civil penalty of five hundred dollars payable to the purchaser.

(3) The requirements of this section shall not apply to any individual constructing a residential structure for his own residence.

ENERGY CONSERVATION

ARTICLE 7

Residential Building Energy Conservation

6-7-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Residential Building Energy Conservation Act of 1977".

6-7-102. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that:

(a) The energy resources of this state and the nation are essential to the preservation of the public health, welfare, and safety and to the maintenance of a healthy economy;

(b) The conservation and efficient use of said energy resources are necessary if the quality of life in this state is to be maintained and continued;

(c) The purpose of this article is to provide minimum uniform statewide insulation standards to achieve energy conservation in the construction and renovation of residential buildings and to encourage energy conservation by other means in the construction and renovation of residential buildings, recognizing that such energy conservation by insulation or other means must be life cycle cost-effective in order to minimize the adverse impact on residential life-styles and to continue to strive to make reasonably priced housing available to all residents of this state;

(d) The general assembly recognizes the technological improvements developed by the home-building industry in connection with energy conservation for residential buildings and wishes to encourage continued technological improvement by the home-building industry in order to exceed the insulation energy conservation standards contained in this article;

(e) It is the further purpose to establish a process which will result in the development of residential energy conserving performance standards by September 1, 1977. Such standards shall consider all uses of energy generated by fossil fuels, used within a dwelling, including energy used for lighting, cooking, appliances, maintenance of air temperature, and heating water and the energy lost through the building envelope and exhaust pipes. It is consistent with public policy to encourage the rehabilitation, preservation, and restoration of buildings built before September 1, 1977.

6-7-103. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Heating degree day" means a unit, based upon temperature difference and time, used in estimating fuel consumption and specifying nominal heating load of a building in winter. For any one day, when the mean temperature is less than sixty-five degrees Fahrenheit, there exist as many heating degree days as there are Fahrenheit degrees difference in temperature between the mean temperature for the day and sixty-five degrees Fahrenheit.

(2) "Local government" means a county or municipality and may be used to refer to the governing body thereof or the area under the jurisdiction of said governing body.

(3) "Municipality" means any home rule city, town, or city and county, statutory city or town, territorial charter city, or municipal corporation which incorporated pursuant to territorial or general incorporation law and which has not reorganized.

(4) "Overall thermal transmittance"(U_0) means the overall average heat transmission of a gross area of the exterior building envelope, expressed in British thermal units per hour per square foot per degree Fahrenheit. The U_0 value applies to the combined effect of the time rate of heat flows through the various parallel paths, such as windows, doors, and opaque construction areas, comprising the gross area of one or more exterior building components, such as walls, floors, or roofs or ceilings.

(5) "Renovation" means any additions, alterations, or repairs to an existing building. When additions, alterations, or repairs exceed fifty percent of the value of an existing building, such building shall be made to conform to the renovation standards promulgated by the board for energy efficient building standards. The renovation standards promulgated shall recognize the individuality of each renovation project. Any additions shall conform to the energy conservation requirements for new buildings as they relate to the new construction only.

(6) "Residential building" includes all one- and two-family dwellings or multifamily dwellings not to exceed three stories above grade.

(7) "R-value" (R=1/U) means the reciprocal of the average overall coefficient of heat transmission in BTUs (British thermal units) per hour per square foot per degree Fahrenheit. The term is generally applied to usual combinations of insulation materials, as generally recognized and accepted in the residential building construction industry.

(8) "Thermal transmittance" ((U) (U = 1/R)) means the overall coefficient of heat transmission, air to air, expressed in British thermal units per hour per square foot per degree Fahrenheit. It is the time rate of heat flow. The U value applies to combinations of different materials used in series along the heat flow path, single materials that comprise a building section, cavity air spaces, and surfaces air films on both sides of a building element.

(9) "Value" means the estimated cost to replace the building in kind, based on current replacement costs, as determined by the local building official.

6-7-104. Exemptions from this article. The standards set forth in this article shall not apply to the design and construction or renovation of private garages, carports, sheds, agricultural buildings, tanks, factory-constructed housing, towers, and those buildings which have been designated as historic by the governing body of a county or municipality or which have been included on the state register of historic properties pursuant to article 80.1 of title 24, C.R.S., or the national register of historic places maintained pursuant to 16 U.S.C. sec. 470a.

6-7-105. Insulation and thermal performance standards and energy conserving alternatives. (1) (a) The following design parameters shall be used for calculations required under this section. Computations submitted by a licensed architect or engineer, contractors, builders, and owners shall be considered as acceptable when calculated by acceptable engineering procedures. Values for table 1 are to be selected from standard RS21 of the Colorado energy conservation standards (design temperatures for Colorado cities and towns, supplement to climate data for air conditioning design, ASHRAE Rocky Mountain region, April, 1978).

Location ______________________________

Winter design dry-bulb ______________________________ °F

Degree days heating ______________________________

(b) Minimum thermal performance standards for residential buildings on which construction commences on or after November 1, 1979, shall conform to one of the alternatives provided in subsections (2), (3), and (4) of this section. Renovation that commences on or after November 1, 1979, shall conform to one of the alternatives provided in subsections (2), (3), and (4) of this section, or renovation standards promulgated by the board for energy efficient building standards.

(2) (a) Any separate envelope component of a residential building that is heated shall not exceed the combined thermal transmittance value (U_0) derived from equation 1 using values in table 2. Values for the purposes of table 2 shall be determined by using the graphs (figures 1, 2, and 5) contained in the Colorado energy conservation standards. The combined thermal transmittance (U_r) for roofs or ceilings shall not exceed 0.05 BTU/H FT^2 °F for geographic areas with eight thousand or less Fahrenheit heating degree days and shall not exceed 0.04 BTU/H FT^2 °F for geographic areas with more than eight thousand Fahrenheit heating degree days. Roof or ceiling assemblies in which the finished interior surface is the underside of the roof deck may have a maximum U_r value of 0.08 BTU/H FT^2 °F. Equation 1 shall be used to determine acceptable combinations to meet the required U_0 values.

Element	Required value
Walls	U_w ______________
Roof/ceiling	U_r ______________
Floors over unheated spaces	U_f ______________
Heated slab on grade	R ______________

(b) If all exposed concrete walls average less than two feet above grade, those walls are exempt from the calculations for U_w and insulation.

(c) Heating equipment shall be sized using climate data from table 1 in subsection (1) of this section.

(3) (a) If any segment (wall, floor, roof) of the exterior envelope does not comply with the standards prescribed in subsection (2) of this section, the thermal transmittance value (U_0) of any other segment (wall, floor, roof) may be decreased so that the resulting thermal transmittance value (U_0) of the envelope complies as if the building had been designed in compliance with subsection (2) of this section. For this purpose, reduction of the thermal transmittance value of any of the other exterior components of the envelopes may be used to achieve compliance.

Equation 1

(b) Use of the equation provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3) requires two sets of calculations. The first calculation utilizes the U_0 values obtained from subsection (2) of this section and the actual areas of the proposed residential design. The second calculation utilizes the actual U_0 values and the actual areas of the proposed residential design.

(4) Computations submitted indicating that the total fossil fuel energy required in a residential building, through design or otherwise, equals or is less than the total fossil fuel energy used if the dwelling is built or renovated according to standards contained in subsections (1) and (2) of this section shall be considered an acceptable alternative. The total fossil fuel energy required shall be computed as the annual estimated BTUs necessary for the proposed residential building.

(5) Repealed.

6-7-106. Building permits. (1) No building permit shall be issued for the construction or renovation of any residential buildings in any area under the jurisdiction of a local government on or after October 1, 1977, unless such construction or renovation will conform to the provisions of this article. The local building inspector shall inspect all places not inspected by the division of housing pursuant to part 7 of article 32 of title 24, C.R.S., to determine whether such places are in compliance with the insulation standards required by this article.

(2) Nothing in this article shall be construed to restrict or limit the authority of a county or municipality to adopt and enforce standards for efficient construction and renovation which are no less stringent than the standards contained in section 6-7-105. Any county or municipality adopting such standards may accept computations submitted by a licensed architect or licensed engineer that the design of the proposed building meets or exceeds the locally adopted energy efficiency standards.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Assignment of Contractual Rights in Colorado", see 5 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 30 (1932). For article, "Validity of the Colorado Assignment Act", see 18 Dicta 274 (1941). For article, "One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals", see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 66 (1963).

Annotator's note. Cases material to § 6-10-101 et seq. decided prior to its earliest source, L. 1897, p. 94, § 1 et seq., have been included in the annotations to this section.

While state insolvency laws are invalid, states may enact statutes providing for the voluntary assignment of debts for the benefit of creditors. In re Carlson's for Music, Inc. v. Gould, 176 Colo. 172, 489 P.2d 1038 (1971).

This article is full and complete within itself, as to all matters pertaining to assignments, and the general law concerning conveyances has no application. Spangler v. Sanborn, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 P. 905 (1895).

For cases decided prior to the passage of the general assignment statute of 1885, see Ray v. Raynolds, 8 Colo. 467, 9 P. 15 (1885); Cornforth v. Maguire, 12 Colo. 432, 21 P. 191 (1889).

II. PURPOSE.

The purpose of this article is to enable an insolvent debtor by conveying all his property to an assignee for the benefit of his creditors to be discharged from his debts. Clark v. Bright, 30 Colo. 199, 69 P. 506 (1902).

Hence, the assignment article is, in effect, a bankruptcy act. Clark v. Bright, 30 Colo. 199, 69 P. 506 (1902).

Provisions acceptable in relation to federal bankruptcy act. Provisions of this article by which debtors may voluntarily assign their assets for the benefit of their creditors, but without discharge of the debts, are perfectly acceptable in relation to the federal bankruptcy act. In re Carlson's for Music, Inc. v. Gould, 176 Colo. 172, 489 P.2d 1038 (1971).

Provisions providing for discharge not acceptable, the provisions in this article providing for discharge of an assignor have been suspended by the federal bankruptcy act. In re Carlson's for Music, Inc. v. Gould, 176 Colo. 172, 489 P.2d 1038 (1971).

The act does not compel a debtor to relinquish possession or control of his property to an assignee or trustee for the benefit of his creditors when he becomes unable to pay his debts. Hayden v. Wellington, 63 F. 6 (8th Cir. 1894).

The insolvent laws of Colorado are of a purely voluntary character; they do not constrain persons to execute an assignment in the event of insolvency. Schindelholz v. Cullum, 55 F. 885 (8th Cir. 1893); Kellogg v. Thropp, 4 Colo. App. 470, 36 P. 447 (1893).

A compulsory assignment for the benefit of creditors is unknown. Kellogg v. Thropp, 4 Colo. App. 470, 36 P. 447 (1893).

This article gives one permission to make a transfer of this nature, with certain prescribed formalities, and it provides for the due administration of the estate when it has been thus assigned. Hayden v. Wellington, 63 F. 6 (8th Cir. 1894).

III. RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.

This article is in derogation of the common law. Damaskus v. McCarty-Johnson Heating & Eng'r Co., 88 Colo. 279, 295 P. 490 (1931); Markoff v. Barenberg, 149 Colo. 311, 368 P.2d 964 (1962).

It must be strictly construed. Damaskus v. McCarty-Johnson Heating & Eng'r Co., 88 Colo. 279, 295 P. 490 (1931).

IV. APPLICATION.

Assignments made for the benefit of creditors must strictly comply with all of the required details of this article before creditors of the assignor are bound thereby. Markoff v. Barenberg, 149 Colo. 311, 368 P.2d 964 (1962).

Article must be strictly pursued. The statutory law of assignments is remedial, in derogation of the rights of creditors, and must, like any other statutory remedy, be strictly pursued. Burchinell v. Mosconi, 4 Colo. App. 401, 36 P. 307 (1894).

Its provisions are mandatory. Burchinell v. Mosconi, 4 Colo. App. 401, 36 P. 307 (1894); Damaskus v. McCarty-Johnson Heating & Eng'r Co., 88 Colo. 279, 295 P. 490 (1931).

Any important departure avoids and vitiates the whole proceeding. Burchinell v. Mosconi, 4 Colo. App. 401, 36 P. 307 (1894).

However, in order to vitiate an assignment, it must be found lacking in one of the essentials. Hunter v. Ferguson, 3 Colo. App. 287, 33 P. 82 (1893).

V. FAILURE TO COMPLY.

Failure of the debtor to comply with this article constitutes a common law, and not a statutory, assignment. McKelvy v. Striker, 108 Colo. 320, 116 P.2d 921 (1941).

Assignment may be valid as common-law assignment. An assignment for the benefit of creditors, although insufficient under this article, may be valid as a common-law assignment. Damaskus v. McCarty-Johnson Heating & Eng'r Co., 88 Colo. 279, 295 P. 490 (1931).

Common-law assignments are valid, independent of statutory assignments. McKelvy v. Striker, 108 Colo. 320, 116 P.2d 921 (1941).

Since no mention is made in this article of common-law assignments and nothing therein contained either specifically or by implication is susceptible to the construction that its sections were intended to be an exclusive substitute for common-law assignments. Damaskus v. McCarty-Johnson Heating & Eng'r Co., 88 Colo. 279, 295 P. 490 (1931).

6-10-102. General assignment. Any person may make a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors by deed duly acknowledged. When filed for record in the office of the clerk and recorder of the county where the assignor resides or, if a nonresident, where his principal place of business is in this state, such deed shall vest in the assignee in trust for the use and benefit of such creditors all the property of the assignor, excepting only such as is by law not subject to levy and sale under execution, subject, however, to all valid and subsisting liens.

ANNOTATION

I. General Consideration.
II. Requisites and Form.
III. Title of Assignee.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Annotator's note. Cases material to § 6-10-102 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 1897, p. 94, § 2, have been included in the annotations to § 6-10-102.

A general assignment is an act of bankruptcy. A general assignment, filed and recorded in pursuance of the statutes of Colorado, falls far within the established rule that the general assignment declared by the bankruptcy act to constitute an act of bankruptcy embraces any conveyance at common law or pursuant to statute by which the assignor intends to make and does make an absolute appropriation of his property not exempt from levy to pay all his debts, although there may be some defect in the conveyance or some failure to comply with some law or statute in the proceeding he takes to effectuate his intention which does not prevent the actual appropriation of his property for the benefit of his creditors. Moore v. Yampa Mercantile Co., 287 F. 629 (8th Cir. 1923).

There is neither in terms nor by implication any duty cast upon an insolvent to dispose of his property by a general assignment. May v. Tenney, 148 U.S. 60, 13 S. Ct. 491, 37 L. Ed. 368 (1893).

II. REQUISITES AND FORM.

An assignment not made in accordance with this section is only a common-law assignment. McMinn v. Harrison, 93 Colo. 5, 23 P.2d 944 (1933).

An instrument that does not purport to be a transfer of all the grantor's property, but only of certain described items, together with incidentals used in connection with such, is, on its face no general assignment. May v. Tenney, 148 U.S. 60, 13 S. Ct. 491, 37 L. Ed. 368 (1893).

When the deed in general terms purports to convey all the property and afterwards enumerates and designates the property assigned, such special designation controls the general words, makes the assignment special instead of general, and renders the deed inoperative and void. Palmer v. McCarthy, 2 Colo. App. 422, 31 P. 241 (1892).

Where there are in the deed of conveyance no words evidencing either the desire or intention to convey all the property of the assignor, the only conclusion that can be legally deduced from the language used is that the assignment is to be special of the property enumerated. Palmer v. McCarthy, 2 Colo. App. 422, 31 P. 241 (1892).

Moreover, the fact that a debtor transfers all of his property to secure the payment of particular debts does not constitute an assignment for the benefit of creditors generally. Poundstone v. Holt, 5 Colo. App. 66, 37 P. 35 (1894).

Deed may refer to inventory for particular description of property. Where, according to the express language of the instrument, reference to the inventory is for a more full and particular description and not by way of limitation, then, it is the manifest and clear intention of the parties to convey all the property which they owned which is not exempt from execution, and this has always been held sufficient. Graham Paper Co. v. Sanderson, 8 Colo. App. 427, 47 P. 904 (1896).

III. TITLE OF ASSIGNEE.

Section applies whether assignor is solvent or insolvent. This provision regulating the administration of trusts created by voluntary assignments for the benefit of creditors applies whether the assignor is solvent or insolvent. In re Carlson's for Music, Inc. v. Gould, 176 Colo. 172, 489 P.2d 1038 (1971).

Such an assignment implies a trust and contemplates the intervention of a trustee. May v. Tenney, 148 U.S. 60, 13 S. Ct. 491, 37 L. Ed. 368 (1893).

The intent of this section appears to be to make the assignee not the mere representative of the assignor but the trustee of the assignor and the creditors for the purpose of marshaling the assets of the assignor for pro rata distribution among the creditors, returning the surplus, if any, to the assignor. Clark v. Bright, 30 Colo. 199, 69 P. 506 (1902).

Hence, the assignee becomes vested with right and title to the estate of the assignors for the purpose of paying the debts of the assignors in full, if sufficient therefor; if not, then ratably, except only as to the preference created by the said legislative enactment. And the assignee becomes charged with the duty of collecting the personal assets, wherever they might be found, and of distributing the proceeds of the entire estate among the creditors according to the provisions of this enactment. Ray v. Hiller, 11 Colo. 445, 18 P. 622 (1888).

Furthermore, it is by the language of the deed that the title of the assignee must be determined, without reference either to the inventory or the list of creditors. Falk v. Liebes, 6 Colo. App. 473, 42 P. 46 (1895).

If all requisites are not met assignee takes no title. If a deed of assignment fails in the essential particular specified by this section the want cannot be supplied by judicial decision; the deed would not invest the assignee with any title, and creditors could proceed against the debtor in the same manner and with the same effect as if no assignment had been attempted. Kellogg v. Thropp, 4 Colo. App. 470, 36 P. 447 (1894).

Property vests in assignee only when instrument is filed. The plain and necessary inference from the provision of this section that the instrument "when filed, etc. shall vest" is that when not filed it shall not vest. Kinney v. Yoelin Bros. Mercantile Co., 76 Colo. 136, 230 P. 127 (1924).

This means a filing for record in the proper county. Spangler v. Sanborn, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 P. 905 (1895).

Nevertheless, this section does not make the record of the deed of assignment constructive notice to creditors, and the fact that notice is specifically provided for elsewhere, (as in § 6-10-108), is evidence that it was not intended to be such. Kinney v. Yoelin Bros. Mercantile Co., 76 Colo. 136, 230 P. 127 (1924).

Thus, title does not pass if instrument is not recorded. A power of attorney given by a debtor to an assignee for the benefit of creditors does not pass title as against creditors where it is not recorded in accordance with this section. Kinney v. Yoelin Bros. Mercantile Co., 76 Colo. 136, 230 P. 127 (1924).

However, a deed of assignment does not destroy valid antecedent liens upon the assignor's property, nor the right of the holder to enforce them. Nat'l Bank of Commerce v. Graham, 16 Colo. App. 498, 66 P. 684 (1901).

Since the assignee takes the property subject to all subsisting valid liens. Nat'l Bank of Commerce v. Graham, 16 Colo. App. 498, 66 P. 684 (1901).

Where a corporation makes a general assignment for the benefit of its creditors and a receiver, later appointed, files a motion in the assignment proceedings asking the dismissal of the assignment proceedings and an order to compel the assignee to turn over to the receiver the property of the corporation, the title of the assignee to the property cannot be determined in such a proceeding. Flint v. Powell, 10 Colo. App. 66, 50 P. 45 (1897).

6-10-103. Inventory - list of creditors. The assignor shall render to such assignee within four days from the date of said assignment an inventory under oath, of his property, to the best of his knowledge, with the estimated value thereof, and also a list of his creditors, giving their names, residence and post-office address, if known, and the amount of their respective demands. Such inventory shall not be conclusive of the amount of the assignor's estate nor shall the omission of any property from such inventory defeat the assignment or conveyance of the same.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Cases material to § 6-10-103 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 1897, p. 94, § 3, have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section requires a schedule under oath, a full and complete schedule, so far as the party has power to make it. Burchinell v. Mosconi, 4 Colo. App. 401, 36 P. 307 (1894).

Anything short of this is not compliance and avoids the assignment. Burchinell v. Mosconi, 4 Colo. App. 401, 36 P. 307 (1894).

The provisions of this section cannot be dispensed with. Palmer v. McCarthy, 2 Colo. App. 422, 31 P. 241 (1892).

So a material failure to comply with them or a serious departure vitiates the whole proceeding. Palmer v. McCarthy, 2 Colo. App. 422, 31 P. 241 (1892).

For without the inventory nothing passes. The inventory required by law, designates and defines the conveyance by showing the amount, quantity, and specific character of each and every part of the estate conveyed. Without it, the words of conveyance being so general, nothing passes, for there can be no identification; hence, the wisdom and necessity of a sworn inventory as required by this section, and of a strict compliance with it. Palmer v. McCarthy, 2 Colo. App. 422, 31 P. 241 (1892).

Under this section it is only requisite that the description be sufficient when aided by parol proof to ascertain what is granted. Graham Paper Co. v. Sanderson, 8 Colo. App. 427, 47 P. 904 (1896).

This section does not require the list of creditors to be verified. Falk v. Liebes, 6 Colo. App. 473, 42 P. 46 (1895).

Hence, an affidavit of which the inventory is a part, subscribed by the party, and the certificate of an officer that an oath was administered is an exact compliance with this section. Falk v. Liebes, 6 Colo. App. 473, 42 P. 46 (1895).

Formerly general description in assignment was limited and controlled by schedule attached. See Burchinell v. Mosconi, 4 Colo. App. 401, 36 P. 307 (1894).

Under the old assignment act of 1885 the assignor was bound to attach an inventory to his deed of assignment which should contain a description of the property which he sought to convey; in that case the deed itself declared that all the property which was conveyed was described in the schedule which was attached. Graham Paper Co. v. Sanderson, 8 Colo. App. 427, 47 P. 904 (1896).

Thus, the assignor was required to annex to his deed of assignment an inventory under oath of his estate; such inventory became a part and parcel of the conveyance. Burchinell v. Mosconi, 4 Colo. App. 401, 36 P. 307 (1894).

6-10-104. Assignment for all creditors. No such deed of general assignment of property by an insolvent, or in contemplation of insolvency, for the benefit of creditors, shall be valid, unless by its terms it is made for the benefit of all his creditors in proportion to the amount of their respective claims.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Cases material to § 6-10-104 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 1897, p. 95, § 4, have been included in the annotations to this section.

The rule under this section is not that the preferences fail and the assignment stands, but that the assignment itself fails unless it be in terms free from preferences. May v. Tenney, 148 U.S. 60, 13 S. Ct. 491, 37 L. Ed. 368 (1893).

At common law there was no restriction upon the right of a debtor to prefer creditors. Kellogg v. Thropp, 4 Colo. App. 470, 36 P. 447 (1894).

Subject to the statutory provisions governing general assignments, this common-law right remains unimpaired in this state. Kellogg v. Thropp, 4 Colo. App. 470, 36 P. 447 (1894).

Thus, right to prefer creditors remains unimpaired if debtor retains dominion over property. There is nothing in this section from which it can be implied that it was the purpose of the general assembly to prevent a debtor, insolvent or not, from securing or paying one of his creditors in preference to another while he retains dominion over his property, except as he undertakes to do so in a deed of general assignment executed pursuant to the statute. Kellogg v. Thropp, 4 Colo. App. 470, 36 P. 447 (1894).

Lawful preferences working no prejudice to creditors are allowed. Where one secures a lawful preference by its superior diligence before a bill of sale in its favor is executed, no creditor of the debtor is prejudiced by the conveyance, inasmuch as such a conveyance makes the same disposition of the proceeds of the attached property which the law would have made if the attachment suit had been regularly prosecuted to final judgment. At common law the debtor had an undoubted right to enter into such an arrangement with his creditor, and there is no sufficient reason why the assignment act should receive a construction which will interdict such arrangements, if they are entered into in good faith and are not conceived with a view of evading the provisions of the assignment law. Hayden v. Wellington, 63 F. 6 (8th Cir. 1894).

Moreover, a secured creditor having credited upon his debt the proceeds of his security has a right to participate with other creditors and upon an equal footing with them in the assets realized from the assignment to the extent of the unpaid residue of his debt. Nat'l Bank of Commerce v. Graham, 16 Colo. App. 498, 66 P. 684 (1901).

The purpose of this section is not to discourage or restrain the making of general assignments, but to inhibit partiality therein toward favored creditors. Campbell v. Colo. Coal & Iron Co., 9 Colo. 60, 10 P. 248 (1885).

The provisions of this section that are regulatory of voluntary assignments serve to protect creditors against each other and go to assure equality of distribution unaffected by any requirement or condition in respect of discharge. In re Carlson's for Music, Inc. v. Gould, 176 Colo. 172, 489 P.2d 1038 (1971).

Thus, ratable participation must be provided for. When one voluntarily undertakes by deed of assignment to avail himself of the statute, he must make express provision for the ratable participation by his creditors in its benefits, or the deed is void. Kellogg v. Thropp, 4 Colo. App. 470, 36 P. 447 (1893).

An instrument which, in form an irrevocable power of attorney and obviously intended to operate as an assignment for the benefit of all creditors equally and without preference is, at least when possession is taken thereunder, a common-law assignment for the benefit of creditors. McMinn v. Harrison, 93 Colo. 5, 23 P.2d 944 (1933).

When a deed of assignment is not made for the benefit of all creditors, and some of them are expressly and by intention excluded from its benefits, the deed cannot be upheld. Stevens v. Mosconi, 5 Colo. App. 484, 39 P. 348 (1895).

So a conveyance, unquestionably a general assignment, in form which contemplates the payment only two creditors is not only not for the benefit of all creditors, but avowedly for the benefit of the two, and would, therefore, have to be adjudged a void instrument. May v. Tenney, 148 U.S. 60, 13 S. Ct. 491, 37 L. Ed. 368 (1893).

Such an assignment, whether so intended or not, is fraudulent under this section as not being for the benefit of all the creditors if it makes those who are named and scheduled preferred creditors. Burchinell v. Mosconi, 4 Colo. App. 401, 36 P. 307 (1894).

Fraud and illegality must be pleaded in court below. Where it is alleged that an assignment in favor of certain creditors to the exclusion of others is in violation of this section but no fraud or illegality in the assignment is pleaded nor is any such question in any manner raised in the court below, it need not be determined on appeal whether such a defense can or cannot be successfully interposed. Marsh v. Cramer, 16 Colo. 331, 27 P. 169 (1891).

Furthermore, a preference by separate transaction shows intent to violate section. The fact that a preference is not provided for in an assignment itself, but by an arrangement or transfer outside of it and contemporaneous with it, shows the intent to evade and violate this section. Doggett, Bassett & Hills Co. v. Herman, 16 F. 812 (1883).

Where the preference is by actual delivery to the preferred creditors for the purpose of keeping it from passing to the assignee, the purpose of this section, which is equality among creditors, is defeated, and the courts are deprived of the means of enforcing its provisions. Doggett, Bassett & Hills Co. v. Herman, 16 F. 812 (1883).

Section does not invalidate bill of sale paying only part of debts if assignment act not relied upon. A bill of sale is not rendered invalid by the provisions of this section although it operates to transfer all of the debtor's property to a third party for the purpose of paying a portion only of his debts where it is apparent that the debtor did not intend to proceed under the assignment act or to take advantage of any of its provisions. Hayden v. Wellington, 63 F. 6 (8th Cir. 1894).

This section is not construed as prohibiting or interfering with the making of partial assignments; so far as the statute is concerned, such assignments are perfectly valid. Campbell v. Colo. Coal & Iron Co., 9 Colo. 60, 10 P. 248 (1885).

This section contains no provisions which can be held to preclude a citizen of this state from attaching the property of another citizen of the state, either at home or in a foreign jurisdiction, merely because the latter has become insolvent, and because such attachment may result in a preference. Schindelholz v. Cullum, 55 F. 885 (8th Cir. 1893).

Under the legislative enactment of 1881, had there been any attempt by the assignment to prefer creditors, such attempt would have been without effect to either prefer creditors, or to vitiate the deed, so as to defeat a ratable distribution of the proceeds of the entire estate among all the creditors. Campbell v. Colo. Coal & Iron Co., 9 Colo. 60, 10 P. 248 (1885); Ray v. Hiller, 11 Colo. 445, 18 P. 622 (1888).

Under the early statute, it was held that the fact that an insolvent debtor clearly attempted to evade this section by preferring certain creditors in separate transfers or instruments conveying portions of his property at or about the time he made a general assignment, if such fact was established, may be a reason for avoiding the preferences so given in a suit by or on behalf of injured creditors; but it was not a reason for declaring the assignment itself invalid. The assignment, this being the only objection thereto, might well be permitted to stand, and the property included be distributed ratably by the assignee among the creditors. Campbell v. Colo. Coal & Iron Co., 9 Colo. 60, 10 P. 248 (1885).

For early cases as to preferences, see Salsbury v. Ellison, 7 Colo. 167, 2 P. 906 (1883); Salsbury v. Ellison, 8 Colo. 157, 6 P. 217 (1884).

6-10-105. Assent of creditors presumed. When an assignment of property for the benefit of all the creditors of the assignor is made, the assent of the creditors shall be presumed.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Cases material to § 6-10-105 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 1897, p. 95, § 5, have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is simply declaratory of preexisting law. Spangler v. Sanborn, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 P. 905 (1895).

Without it there would be the same presumption of the assent of the creditors. Spangler v. Sanborn, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 P. 905 (1895).

The presumption of assent contemplated in this section obtains only in cases where no affirmative act on the part of the creditor evidences an intention to repudiate, or not to assent to, the assignment. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

It is a prima facie presumption merely that may be overcome by evidence to the contrary. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

So it is not compulsory upon a creditor to assent to an assignment made for his benefit in common with other creditors. Beifeld v. Martin, 4 Colo. App. 578, 37 P. 32 (1894).

His right to a proportionate share of the assets depends upon such assent. Beifeld v. Martin, 4 Colo. App. 578, 37 P. 32 (1894).

Creditor's refusal to assent may be inferred if he has knowledge of assignment. The right of any creditor to participate in the benefits of the assignment depends upon his assent to such assignment, and his refusal to assent thereto may be inferred from his acts, but such inference can be drawn only from acts of the creditor done with the knowledge that an assignment had been made, or at least that it was in contemplation. Nat'l Bank of Commerce v. Graham, 16 Colo. App. 498, 66 P. 684 (1901).

Where one has no actual knowledge or notice of the execution of a deed of assignment, even though the deed is filed for record, it follows that one has no constructive notice of the execution of such deed. Nat'l Bank of Commerce v. Graham, 16 Colo. App. 498, 66 P. 684 (1901).

Moreover, this section does not prevent creditors from bringing action against the debtor or require those seeking to participate in the distribution of the estate to stipulate for his discharge. In re Carlson's for Music, Inc. v. Gould, 176 Colo. 172, 489 P.2d 1038 (1971).

6-10-106. Inventory filed where - bond. The assignee shall file with the clerk of the district court of the county in which such deed of assignment is recorded a true and complete inventory and valuation of the property of the said assignor, under oath, so far as the same has come to his knowledge, within a period not to exceed six days from the date of the filing of the deed of assignment; and shall make and file a bond to the state of Colorado, for the use of the creditors in double the amount of the inventory and valuation, with sureties to be approved by such clerk for the faithful performance of said trust and for a full and complete accounting for and of all property that may come into his hands as such assignee. Such assignee has no authority to sell or dispose of, or convert to the purposes of the trust any part of such estate, until he has complied with the provisions of this section.

ANNOTATION

The assignee after filing his bond, etc., as required by this section thereupon becomes an officer of the court. Flint v. Powell, 10 Colo. App. 66, 50 P. 45 (1897).

When the assignee does not file the inventory he is not an assignee and the deed to him is void. Kinney v. Yoelin Bros. Mercantile Co., 76 Colo. 136, 230 P. 127 (1924).

The assignee then becomes a mere agent with authority to sell, and his possession and acts are the possession and acts of his principal. Kinney v. Yoelin Bros. Mercantile Co., 76 Colo. 136, 230 P. 127 (1924).

Nonetheless, assignment is act of bankruptcy though assignee does not qualify. The fact that an assignee never qualified under the assignment or gave a bond as required by this section does not prevent the general assignment from being an act of bankruptcy. Moore v. Yampa Mercantile Co., 287 F. 629 (8th Cir. 1923).

6-10-107. Assignee an officer of court. An assignee named and qualified under this article shall be deemed to be an officer of court. Any interference with the assignee in the discharge of his duties is contempt of court, and no suit against the assignee in relation to or concerning the property assigned shall be instituted against the assignee without first obtaining permission of the court within and for the county in which the assignment is made.

ANNOTATION

An assignee is an officer of the court and responsible for an accounting to the court, the debtors, and the debtor's creditors. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

Subject to court supervision. The assignee is, in respect of the property in his hands, at all times subject to the order and supervision of the court or its judge. Taub v. McClelland-Colt Comm'n Co., 10 Colo. App. 190, 51 P. 168 (1897).

When and how an assignee may be proceeded against in relation to the property or its proceeds is in the discretion of the court, and there can be no interference with that discretion unless in case of its abuse. Taub v. McClelland-Colt Comm'n Co., 10 Colo. App. 190, 51 P. 168 (1897).

And where a creditor seizes property which a debtor has assigned to the court, the proper remedy is a citation for contempt under this section. In re Carlson's for Music, Inc. v. Gould, 176 Colo. 172, 489 P.2d 1038 (1971).

6-10-108. Notice of assignment of realty. Where real property or any interest therein is by deed conveyed to the assignee, the assignee shall forthwith file with the clerk and recorder of each county where the real estate is situated a notice of the assignment, containing the names of the assignor and assignee, the date of the deed of assignment, when and where recorded, and a description of the property in that county affected thereby, and the same shall be constructive notice to a purchaser or encumbrancer of the transfer of the property in said county, described in such notice.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Cases material to § 6-10-108 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 1897, p. 96, § 8, have been included in the annotations to this section.

The method prescribed by this section must be pursued. Spangler v. Sanborn, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 P. 905 (1895).

In the absence of the statutory notice, bona fide purchasers and encumbrancers will be protected. Spangler v. Sanborn, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 P. 905 (1895).

Otherwise, title would vest upon delivery. The deed of the assignor, like the deed of any grantor, conveys the legal title to the property and would, but for this section, vest such title in the assignee upon its delivery. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

This section in making its record essential to vest title, as well as to constitute constructive notice, gives it the same, and no more, force than any other deed would have when recorded in the county wherein the real estate is situated. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

Hence, property situated in other counties, notwithstanding the title is vested in the assignee, is subject to sale and encumbrance until the notice prescribed is filed with the clerk and recorder of such counties. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

It conclusively follows, therefore, that the mere vesting of title in the assignee as to such property does not, ipso facto, place it in custodia legis. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

The word "encumbrancer" is employed in this section in its broad and general sense and embraces every class of encumbrancers and every class of encumbrances. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

Whether by contract or by statute. The encumbrance may be created by contract or it may be acquired in pursuance of some statute. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

Thus, a lien or charge upon land, which binds it for the payment of a debt, is an encumbrance, and the holder of the lien is an encumbrancer. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

Equal to mortgage. The lien of an attaching creditor is an encumbrance equally with a mortgage. Thatcher v. Valentine, 22 Colo. 201, 43 P. 1031 (1896).

6-10-109. Priority of claims - notice. The assignee shall forthwith give notice of such assignment by publication for four weeks in some newspaper in the county, if any, and if none, then in the nearest county thereto. The assignee shall also forthwith send a notice by mail to each creditor of whom he shall be informed, directed to his usual place of residence, stating the estimate of the aggregate value of all the property of the assignor, the estimate of the amount of his liabilities, and notifying each creditor to present his claim, under oath, to the assignee within three months from the mailing of such notice. It is the duty of each creditor to present his claim in the manner and within the time mentioned in the notice. Claims filed within the first three months shall have priority over those filed thereafter, unless a creditor can show, to the satisfaction of the court, that he never received the notice. Proof of notice by mail shall be made by affidavit by the assignee giving a list of creditors and the name of the post office where notice was sent within ten days after the mailing of the same. Proof of the notice by publication shall be made by affidavit of the printer or publisher within ten days after the last publication or no fees shall be allowed the assignee for such notice by mail or publication.

ANNOTATION

An assignee is an officer of the court and responsible for an accounting to the court, the debtors, and the debtor's creditors. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

However, creditor presumed to see notice. The published notice of the assignment may never fall under a particular creditor's observation, and he may therefore be without actual information of the fact; but the presumption is otherwise, and upon this presumption or constructive notice, the presumption of assent under § 6-10-105 is based. Spangler v. Sanborn, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 P. 905 (1896).

Where it is obviously impossible that the required notice should have been given between the time of filing the deed for record and at the time of the levy of an attachment, with an attaching creditor having no knowledge or notice of the assignment, there is then, on his part, no assent in fact, and nothing from which the law would presume his assent. His levy is therefore not attended by the impediment of a presumptive assent, and is not invalidated by anything contained in § 6-10-105. Spangler v. Sanborn, 7 Colo. App. 102, 43 P. 905 (1896).

6-10-110. Report of assignee. At the expiration of three months from the time of the first publication and the mailing of notice, the assignee shall report and file with the clerk of the court a true and complete list, under oath, of all the creditors of the assignor who have filed their claims, the place of their residence, the amount claimed, and the amount and value, if any, of any security held by any such creditor. He shall also file a statement of all his proceedings with reference to the trust, showing what money has come into his hands and all the disbursements thereof.

ANNOTATION

An assignee is an officer of the court and responsible for an accounting to the court, the debtors, and the debtor's creditors. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

An assignee perpetrates a fraud by filing false documents upon the court. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

6-10-111. Exceptions to claims - hearing. Any person interested may appear before a dividend is made and file with the clerk any exceptions to the claim or demand of any creditor. The clerk shall immediately cause notice thereof to be given to the creditor which shall be served and returned as in the case of a summons. Within the time allowed to answer in an action at law, the creditor shall file his reply. The court shall designate the time for the hearing, and shall at such time hear the allegations and proof offered and shall render a just judgment thereon.

6-10-112. Judgment - fee of assignee. If no exception is made to a claim filed or if the claim has been favorably adjudicated, the court shall enter judgment in favor of the creditor and against the assignor for the amount claimed and found due, and order the assignee to make from time to time fair and equal dividends among the creditors, of the assets in his hands, in proportion to their respective claims, and as soon as may be, to render a full account of said trust to the court. The court may allow such compensation or commissions, following as nearly as possible the compensation allowed executors for like services, as may be just and right.

ANNOTATION

An assignee violates his duties to the debtor and to the creditors of the debtor by charging the debtor service fees far in excess of those authorized by statute. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

6-10-113. Application of unclaimed dividends. The dividends of any unsettled assignment which remain unclaimed for such time as specified in this article after the final dividend has been decided, upon the application of one or more creditors of such assignor, shall be paid by the assignee under direction of the court to the known creditors of the assignor after giving notice to the creditors that a final distribution of all unclaimed dividends is to be made.

6-10-114. Notice of distribution. Such notice shall be by advertisement in two or more local newspapers of general circulation and by written or printed notices mailed to the latest address of each creditor. The notice shall state that upon a certain day, not less than three months from the date of the notice, a final distribution of all the unclaimed dividends will be made to all creditors as can be found who have filed their respective claims with the assignee within the time specified by the notice for the filing of such claims. When the time for filing these claims has expired, the court, after deducting expenses of distribution, shall order the amount of the unclaimed dividends to be distributed pro rata among those creditors who have filed their claims for a share in the distribution of any unclaimed dividends in accordance with the provisions of this article.

6-10-115. Distribution of unclaimed dividends. Dividends remaining unclaimed for one year or longer after the final dividend has been declared by any assignee shall be distributed, under direction of the court, to the creditors whose claims have not been paid in full as provided in this article. If more than enough funds are on hand to pay these creditors in full, the balance shall be paid to the assignor.

6-10-116. Assignee under supervision of court. The assignee shall be subject to the order and supervision of the court at all times, and, by citation or attachment, may be compelled, from time to time, to file reports of his proceedings and the situation and condition of the trust and to proceed in the faithful execution of the duties required by this article, to keep correct books of account open to the inspection of the court or any person or his attorney interested in said estate. All conveyances of real estate and all sales of personal property by the assignee, not in the usual course of business, as conducted by the assignor, shall be approved by the court before such sale shall be valid.

ANNOTATION

An assignee is an officer of the court and responsible for an accounting to the court, the debtors, and the debtor's creditors. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

6-10-117. Assignee appointed by court - when. If the assignee named in the deed fails or neglects to file an inventory and valuation and give bond for the period of ten days after the making of any assignment, or if he dies before the closing of his trust, or is removed from the execution of the trust, the court upon the application of any person interested may appoint an assignee to execute such trust. Such appointee, when he has qualified as provided in this article, shall have all the rights, powers, and authority and be subject to the same restrictions and obligations as an original assignee.

ANNOTATION

An assignment does not by the refusal of the assignee to qualify fail to take effect or to vest the title to the property in trust in the assignee, placing that property and title within the jurisdiction of the state court to be administered by its subsequent appointee. Moore v. Yampa Mercantile Co., 287 F. 629 (8th Cir. 1923).

6-10-118. Removal of assignee by court. The court may remove the assignee for neglect in the execution of the trust, for fraud, for misapplying the trust, or wasting the estate, for failure to comply with the provisions of this article, or to obey the orders of, or to submit to the supervision of the court, or for any other good cause shown. The assignee may also be removed upon the petition of the majority in number and value of the creditors, unless the court is satisfied that such removal would not be for the best interest of the trust estate.

6-10-119. Powers of assignee. The assignee has all the rights, power, and authority of the assignor necessary to fully execute such trust, to demand and sue for any property belonging to such estate, and to execute valid receipts; and, by deed duly acknowledged by him, in his own name as assignee, may convey any of the estate, real and personal, subject to approval as stated in section 6-10-116. Where the assignee has been appointed by the court in place of an assignee removed, it shall be his duty to compel by suit, or the peremptory order of the court, the delivery of the trust estate and the property, or the value thereof, that has been wasted or misapplied by the previous assignee.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Cases material to § 6-10-119 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 1897, p. 98, § 16, have been included in the annotations to this section.

The assignee stands in the shoes of his assignor, and whatever claim in respect to the property one might have against the latter, can also be asserted against the former. Taub v.

McClelland-Colt Comm'n Co., 10 Colo. App. 190, 51 P. 168 (1897).

The authority of the assignee is derived from the statute and not from the instrument of assignment. Falk v. Liebes, 6 Colo. App. 473, 42 P. 46 (1895).

Therefore, the powers which an assignor may assume to grant by his deed are without effect; if they are in accord with those conferred by the statute, they are superfluous, if not, they are void. Falk v. Liebes, 6 Colo. App. 473, 42 P. 46 (1895).

Whenever an estate passes to an assignee for distribution among creditors, the assignee is not obligated to accept assets which will prove onerous to the estate and a burden rather than an asset. Hill v. Graham, 11 Colo. App. 536, 53 P. 1060 (1898).

Creditors may compel assignee to pursue course, as to property, for best interest of all. If the assignee should attempt to accept assets which would prove a burden rather than an advantage, the creditors would not be without remedy and they might apply to the court having original jurisdiction in the matter to compel him to take the course which was for the best interests of the creditors generally. Hill v. Graham, 11 Colo. App. 536, 53 P. 1060 (1898).

The assignee is the only person after the assignment who can attack the validity of a chattel mortgage. Clark v. Bright, 30 Colo. 199, 69 P. 506 (1902).

At common law an assignee took only that interest which the debtor had at the time of the assignment. From this it follows that property previously conveyed, though in fraud of creditors, did not pass, and the creditors, not the assignee, were the ones to sue to set it aside. Wells v. Schuster-Hax Nat'l Bank, 23 Colo. 534, 48 P. 809 (1897).

6-10-120. Insufficient sureties. If it is shown to the court at any time that the sureties on the assignee's bond are not sufficient, the court may order sufficient sureties to be given, and may compel obedience thereto by removal or otherwise.

6-10-121. Additional security - when. The assignee, from time to time, shall file with the clerk of the court an inventory and valuation of any additional property which may come into his hands after the first inventory; and the judge, or, in his absence, the clerk, may thereupon require the assignee to give additional security.

6-10-122. Appearance compelled - when. The court, upon the application of the assignee, or of any creditor, may compel the appearance in person of the debtor, or any other witness, before the court, or a commissioner appointed by the court, at any time designated, to answer under oath such matters as may be inquired of him. Such debtor or other witness may then be fully examined under oath as to the amount and situation of his property, the payments and conveyances made by him, and the names and places of residence of creditors and the amounts due to each. The court, upon like application, may compel the debtor to deliver to the assignee any property or estate embraced in the assignment.

6-10-123. Misappropriation by debtor. No assignment shall be invalid because of misappropriation of the property of the debtor by him prior to the assignment, but the assignee may recover such property, if so misappropriated in fraud of this article. Nothing in this article shall invalidate any conveyance or mortgage of property, real or personal, by the debtor before the assignment, made in good faith, for a valid and valuable consideration.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Cases material to § 6-10-123 decided prior to its earliest source, L. 1897, p. 100, § 20, have been included in the annotations to this section.

Where property has been misappropriated the right of action, if any, inures to the assignee who might bring such suit to recover it as circumstances warranted. Bailey v. Am. Nat'l Bank, 12 Colo. App. 66, 54 P. 912 (1898).

To vitiate an assignment under this section there must be fraudulent intention followed by irregular and fraudulent disposition of the property or a failure to convey all. In other words, there must be either a reservation of property or such a disposition of it that the proceeds will inure in some way to the benefit of the assignor. Hunter v. Ferguson, 3 Colo. App. 287, 33 P. 82 (1893).

However, a general assignment by a debtor of all his property for the benefit of all his creditors is not a fraudulent disposition of property furnishing ground for an attachment when it is made honestly and bona fide. Hunter v. Ferguson, 3 Colo. App. 287, 33 P. 82 (1893).

Any debtor, whether insolvent or otherwise, so long as he remains in possession of his property with full power of disposition, may mortgage and incumber his property for the benefit of his creditors even though the result may be that some creditors thereby obtain a preference as against the general creditors of the insolvent. Bailey v. Am. Nat'l Bank, 12 Colo. App. 66, 54 P. 912 (1898).

Moreover, this section plainly recognizes the right of a debtor to prefer by payment or security, and clearly affirms the right of a debtor to do with his property as he pleases except as in terms restrained by statute. May v. Tenney, 148 U.S. 60, 13 S. Ct. 491, 37 L. Ed. 368 (1893).

6-10-124. Debts not due - interest. Debts not due may be claimed, but if the same are not bearing interest, a suitable rebate shall be made. Interest shall be computed to the date of the assignment and not afterwards.

6-10-125. Creditors may appoint an attorney. The majority in number and value of the creditors may appoint, in writing, an attorney-at-law to represent the estate before the court. The attorney, if appointed, shall examine all reports and inventories and books of the assignee and inquire fully as to the conduct of the assignee in the discharge of his trust. He may appear for the assignee in all suits in behalf of the assignee in securing, preserving, or defending the estate, but shall appear in behalf of the creditors in all suits, examinations, or inquiries as to the accounts or the conduct of the assignee concerning the estate. The court may allow such compensation to the attorney as may be just and reasonable.

6-10-126. Waiver of proceedings by parties. At any time after an assignment has been made, the assignor, the creditors, and the assignee of such assignor may agree in writing that all proceedings to be had before the court under the provisions of this article, may be waived. Upon the filing of such agreement with the clerk of the proper court, the court shall cease to have any further jurisdiction over such assignment and the proceedings thereunder, and the assignee shall no longer be held accountable to the court. The creditors and the assignee, with the consent of the assignor, in writing, may make such disposition of the assigned estate and arrangements in reference thereto as to them shall seem proper in the premises.

ANNOTATION

The exception in a deed of property exempt by law from execution is permitted under this section. Falk v. Liebes, 6 Colo. App. 473, 42 P. 46 (1895) (decided prior to earliest source of this section, L. 1897, p. 101, § 26).

6-10-130. Preferred claims. The valid claims of servants, laborers, and employees of the assignor, for wages earned during the six months immediately preceding the date of the assignment, not to exceed fifty dollars, to any one person then unpaid, which claims are still held by the person who earned them, and all taxes assessed under the laws of this state, or of the United States, are preferred claims and shall be paid in full prior to the payment of the dividends in favor of other creditors.

6-10-132. Foreclosure of mortgage on property. No mortgage, deed of trust, or other security, real or personal, securing the payment of claims against the assigned estate shall be foreclosed within one year from the making of the assignment except upon order of court. No such mortgage, deed of trust, or other security shall be foreclosed except by suit, unless the claim secured is first proved and allowed by such court. When such claim is so proved and allowed, the court may order a foreclosure of the mortgage, deed of trust, or other security within one year from the making of the assignment. The lien of the mortgage, trust deed, or other security affected by this article shall not be impaired by the suspension of the remedy provided in this section.

6-10-153. Property under jurisdiction of court. In all assignments for the benefit of creditors made in this state, the district court in and for the county in which such deed of assignment is recorded as now provided by law has full power and complete jurisdiction over all the property, real, personal, and mixed, conveyed by such assignment from the date of the making of the same. The court may make any order in reference to any part or all of the property embraced in the estate and the disposition thereof by the assignee which to the court seems just and equitable, and all such orders shall be legal and binding upon the assignor, the assignee, and creditors of the estate whether or not any notice is given of the application therefor or the order so made; except that the court may in its discretion require notice of such an application so made to be given in reference to any matter that may come before it for hearing, and in such case it shall direct, by an order, the form and manner of giving such notice so required by it.

ANNOTATION

Matters are within control of court. Claims are filed and are allowed or exceptions are taken, and the validity or invalidity of claims as between the assignees and claimants, or as between creditors, the payment of dividends, and all other matters relating to the winding up of such estates are entirely under the control and direction of the court like any other litigation. Hill v. Graham, 11 Colo. App. 536, 53 P. 1060 (1898).

Court cannot except valuable parts of debtor's property. Where a grantor deliberately conveys his property without exception or reservation for the benefit of his creditors, it is not the province of the court to except therefrom valuable parts of his property. Moore v. Yampa Mercantile Co., 287 F. 629 (8th Cir. 1923).

One who interferes with property without permission of the court in whose custody it is is guilty of contempt. In re Carlson's for Music, Inc. v. Gould, 176 Colo. 172, 489 P.2d 1038 (1971).

6-10-154. Disposition of property when no market. When any difficulty is encountered by the assignee in converting the assigned property of any assignment, or any part thereof, into cash on account of there being no sufficient market therefor, or for any other good reason, the court may direct by such order as described in section 6-10-153 the distribution of such property in kind among the creditors electing to take property. Creditors not electing to take property shall be paid an equal pro rata in cash, fixing by appraisement or sworn evidence in courts such price or value upon each piece, parcel, or item of property as shall make it bear and pay its proportion of the entire indebtedness of the estate, and as shall be just and equitable between the assignor and the creditors and all persons interested in the assigned estate. When the court authorizes the assignee to exchange such property in payment of the proved indebtedness of the estate at the prices so fixed, and when, in the opinion of the court, the best interests of the estate are promoted thereby, it may order the assignee to first offer such property at public auction; and, in that case, it shall provide by its order the kind and form of notice to be given of such sale. The assignee at such sale shall offer and sell the property to the highest and best bidder therefor in proved accounts against the estate, and he shall not accept any bid lower than the price fixed by the court on the property so offered.

ENFORCEMENT OF NONDRAMATIC MUSIC COPYRIGHTS

ARTICLE 13

Enforcement of Music Copyrights

6-13-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Copyright owner" means the owner of a copyright of a nondramatic musical or similar work recognized and enforceable under the copyright laws of the United States (17 U.S.C. sec. 101 et seq.). "Copyright owner" and "similar work" shall not include the owner of a copyright in a motion picture or audiovisual work, or in part of a motion picture or audiovisual work.

(2) "Nondramatic" means the public performance of a recorded, broadcast, or live musical work; except that "nondramatic" shall not mean the performance of a dramatic work including a play.

(3) "Performing rights society" means an association or corporation that licenses the public performance of nondramatic musical works on behalf of copyright owners such as the American society of composers, authors and publishers (ASCAP), Broadcast Music, Inc. (BMI), and SESAC, Inc.

(4) "Proprietor" means the owner of a retail establishment, including, but not limited to, a restaurant, bar, sports facility, or other place of business where nondramatic musical or similar copyrighted works may be performed, broadcast, or otherwise transmitted for the enjoyment of members of the general public.

(5) "Royalty" or "royalties" means the fees payable to a copyright owner or performing rights society for the public performance of nondramatic musical or other similar work.

6-13-102. Scope of article. (1) This article shall apply to a contract entered into between a performing rights society and a proprietor even if such society is licensed by the federal communications commission, and the rights, remedies, and prohibitions accorded by this article shall be in addition to any other right, remedy, or prohibition accorded by common law, federal law, or the laws of this state, and shall not be construed to deny, abrogate, or impair any such common law or statutory right, remedy, or prohibition.

(2) This article shall not apply to:

(a) A contract entered into between a performing rights society and a broadcaster licensed by the federal communications commission;

(b) Conduct described in sections 18-4-602, 18-4-603, and 18-4-604, C.R.S.

Source: L. 95: Entire article added, p. 1264, § 1, effective July 1.

6-13-103. Payment of royalties - contract requirements. (1) A copyright owner or performing rights society may enter into a contract requiring the payment of royalties by a proprietor if, at least seventy-two hours before the execution of such contract, the following information is provided to the proprietor, in writing:

(a) A description of the rules and terms of royalties required to be paid under the contract;

(b) A schedule of the rates and a description of the terms of royalties required to be paid under agreements executed by the copyright owner or performing rights society;

(c) In the case of a performing rights society, information concerning how to obtain a current list of the copyright owners represented by that society and the works licensed under the contract. Such list shall be made available within fourteen days by electronic means. A proprietor shall not be charged an amount in excess of the actual cost incurred by the performing rights society for providing such list.

(d) Notice, in a form prescribed by the attorney general, that the proprietor is entitled to the information contained in paragraphs (a), (b), and (c) of this subsection (1), and that the failure to provide such information shall make the performing rights society subject to the penalty provisions in section 6-13-104.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, a proprietor may, in its sole discretion and without coercion or undue influence, execute a contract for the payment of royalties before the expiration of the seventy-two hour review period.

(3) A proprietor shall have the right to rescind a contract for the payment of royalties for a period of seventy-two hours after execution of such contract.

(4) A contract for the payment of the royalties by a proprietor to a copyright owner or society shall:

(a) Be in writing;

(b) Be signed by the parties;

(c) Include at least the following information:

(I) The proprietor's name and business address and the name and location of each place of business to which the contract applies;

(II) The name and address of the performing rights society authorized to act on behalf of a copyright owner;

(III) The duration of the contract, which shall not exceed one year, but which may be automatically extended for additional terms which do not exceed one year, unless otherwise mutually agreed upon;

(IV) The schedule of rates and terms of royalties to be collected under the contract, including any sliding scale or schedule for any increase or decrease of such rates for the duration of the contract;

(V) Notice of the seventy-two-hour rescission period described in subsection (3) of this section.

(5) A copyright owner, performing rights society, or an agent or employee of a copyright owner or performing rights society shall not:

(a) Enter onto the premises of a proprietor's business for the purpose of discussing with the proprietor or the employees of the proprietor a contract for the payment of royalties or the use of copyrighted works without first identifying himself or herself to the proprietor or the employees of the proprietor and making known the purpose of the visit;

(b) Collect or attempt to collect a royalty payment or other fee pursuant to a contract that does not meet the requirements of this section;

(c) Engage in any coercive conduct or unfair or deceptive act or practice that is substantially disruptive of a proprietor's business;

(d) Use or attempt to use any unfair or deceptive act or practice in negotiating with a proprietor.

(6) Nothing in this article shall be construed to prohibit a performing rights society from conducting investigations to determine the existence of music use by a proprietor or informing a proprietor of the proprietor's obligations under the copyright laws of the United States (17 U.S.C. sec. 101 et seq.).

Source: L. 95: Entire article added, p. 1264, § 1, effective July 1.

6-13-104. Violations - penalties. (1) A proprietor may bring an action in a court of competent jurisdiction or assert a counterclaim against a copyright owner or performing rights society to enjoin a violation of this article and recover any damages sustained as a result of such violation.

(2) The prevailing party in any action brought under this article shall be awarded reasonable attorney fees. If the prevailing party is a proprietor, such proprietor may also recover the reasonable costs of such action and treble damages, but in no event shall such proprietor be awarded less than one thousand dollars.

(3) A proprietor shall not bring a counterclaim against any party except the original complainant, and if such complainant is a performing rights society, a counterclaim shall not be brought against any copyright owner in his or her individual capacity.

CONSIGNMENTS OF ART

ARTICLE 15

Consignment of Works of Fine Art

6-15-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Art dealer" means a person engaged in the business of selling works of fine art, other than a person exclusively engaged in the business of selling goods at public auction.

(2) "Artist" means the creator of a work of fine art.

(3) "On consignment" means that no title to or estate in the goods or right to possession thereof superior to that of the consignor vests in the consignee, notwithstanding the consignee's power or authority to transfer and convey all of the right, title, and interest of the consignor, in and to such goods to a third person.

(4) "Work of fine art" or "work" means:

(a) A work of visual art such as a painting, sculpture, drawing, mosaic, or photograph;

(b) A work of calligraphy;

(c) A work of graphic art such as an etching, a lithograph, an offset print, a silk screen, or any other work of similar nature;

(d) A craft work in materials, including but not limited to clay, textile, fiber, wood, metal, plastic, or glass;

(e) A work in mixed media such as collage or any combination of the art media set forth in this subsection (4).

Source: L. 82: Entire article added, p. 229, § 1, effective March 25.

6-15-102. Art dealers and artists - consignment of works of fine art. (1) Notwithstanding any custom, practice, or usage of the trade and any of the provisions of section 4-2-326, C.R.S., to the contrary, whenever an artist delivers or causes to be delivered a work of fine art of his own creation to an art dealer for the purpose of exhibition or sale on a commission, fee, or other basis of compensation, the delivery to and acceptance thereof by the art dealer is deemed to place the work on consignment and:

(a) Such art dealer shall thereafter, with respect to the work, be deemed to be the agent of such artist;

(b) Such work is trust property in the hands of the consignee for the benefit of the consignor; and

(c) Any proceeds from the sale of the work are trust funds in the hands of the consignee for the benefit of the consignor.

(2) Notwithstanding the subsequent purchase of a work of fine art by the consignee directly or indirectly for his own account, the work initially received on consignment shall be deemed to remain trust property until the price is paid in full to the consignor. If such work is thereafter resold to a bona fide third party before the consignor has been paid in full, the proceeds of the resale are trust funds in the hands of the consignee for the benefit of the consignor to the extent necessary to pay any balance still due to the consignor, and such trusteeship shall continue until the fiduciary obligation of the consignee with respect to such transaction is discharged in full.

(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of the "Uniform Commercial Code - Sales", no such trust property or trust funds shall be subject to or subordinate to any claims, liens, or security interests of the consignee's creditors.

(4) An art dealer is strictly liable for the loss of or damage to a work of fine art while it is in his possession. The value of the work of fine art is, for the purposes of this subsection (4), the value established in a written agreement between the artist and the art dealer prior to the loss or damage of the work.

Cross references: For the provisions in the "Uniform Commercial Code" concerning sales, see article 2 of title 4.

6-15-103. Penalties. A violation by an art dealer of any of the provisions of this article shall render the art dealer liable for damages to the artist in an amount equal to fifty dollars plus the actual damages sustained by the artist, including incidental and consequential damages. In such an action reasonable attorney fees and court costs shall be paid to the prevailing party.

Source: L. 82: Entire article added, p. 230, § 1, effective March 25.

6-15-104. Applicability. (1) This article shall not apply to any contract or arrangement in existence prior to March 25, 1982, nor to any extensions or renewals thereof; except that the parties to such contract or arrangement may thereafter elect to be governed by the provisions of this article.

(2) Any provision, whether oral or written, in or pertaining to the placing of a work of fine art on consignment whereby any provision of this article is waived shall be deemed to be against public policy and shall be void.

CHARITABLE SOLICITATIONS

ARTICLE 16

Colorado Charitable Solicitations Act

6-16-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Charitable Solicitations Act".

Source: L. 88: Entire article added, p. 350, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "A Survey of the Law of Colorado Nonprofit Entities", see 27 Colo. Law. 5 (April 1998).

6-16-102. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds that fraudulent charitable solicitations are a widespread practice in this state that results in millions of dollars of losses to contributors and legitimate charities each year. Legitimate charities are harmed by such fraud because the money available for contributions continually is being siphoned off by fraudulent charities, and the goodwill and confidence of contributors continually is being undermined by the practices of unscrupulous solicitors. The general assembly further finds that legitimate charities provide many public benefits and that charitable donations are a direct result of public trust in charities. The general assembly therefore finds that the provisions of this article, including those involving pertinent information to be filed in a timely manner by charitable organizations and disclosures to be made by paid solicitors, are necessary to protect the public's interest in making informed choices as to which charitable causes should be supported. Furthermore, these provisions are intended to help the secretary of state investigate allegations of wrongdoing in charities, without having a chilling effect on donors who wish to give anonymously or requiring public disclosure of confidential information about charities.

6-16-103. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Charitable organization" means any person who is or holds himself out to be established for any benevolent, educational, philanthropic, humane, scientific, patriotic, social welfare or advocacy, public health, environmental conservation, civic, or other eleemosynary purpose, any person who operates for the benefit of the objectives of law enforcement officers, firefighters, other persons who protect the public safety, or veterans, or any person who in any manner employs a charitable appeal or an appeal which suggests that there is a charitable purpose as the basis for any solicitation. "Charitable organization" does not include the department of revenue collecting voluntary contributions for organ and tissue donations under the provisions of sections 42-2-107 (4) (b) (V) and 42-2-118 (1) (a) (II), C.R.S.

(2) "Charitable purpose" means any benevolent, educational, philanthropic, humane, scientific, patriotic, social welfare or advocacy, public health, environmental conservation, civic, or other eleemosynary purpose, any objective of law enforcement officers, firefighters, other persons who protect the public safety, or veterans, or any objective of sponsoring the free or subsidized attendance of persons at any event.

(3) "Charitable sales promotion" means an advertising or sales campaign which is conducted by a commercial coventurer and which represents that the purchase or use of goods or services offered by the commercial coventurer will benefit, in whole or in part, a charitable organization or purpose.

(4) "Commercial coventurer" means a person who, for profit, is regularly and primarily engaged in trade or commerce other than in connection with soliciting for charitable organizations or purposes and who conducts a charitable sales promotion.

(5) "Contribution" means the grant, promise, or pledge of money, credit, property, financial assistance, or any other thing of value in response to a solicitation. "Contribution" does not include voluntary contributions for organ and tissue donations under the provisions of sections 42-2-107 (4) (b) (V) and 42-2-118 (1) (a) (II), C.R.S., and bona fide fees, dues, or assessments paid by members of a charitable organization if membership is not conferred primarily as consideration for making a contribution in response to a solicitation.

(6) Repealed.

(7) "Paid solicitor" means a person who, for monetary compensation, performs any service in which contributions will be solicited in this state by such compensated person or by any compensated person he or she employs, procures, or engages, directly or indirectly, to solicit for contributions. The following persons are not "paid solicitors":

(a) A person whose sole responsibility is to print or mail fund-raising literature;

(b) A lawyer, investment counselor, or banker who renders professional services to a charitable organization or advises a person to make a charitable contribution during the course of rendering such professional services or advice to the charitable organization or person;

(c) A bona fide volunteer;

(d) A director, officer, or compensated employee who is directly employed by a charitable organization which, at the time of the solicitation, had received a determination letter from the internal revenue service granting the organization tax-exempt status pursuant to 26 U.S.C. sec. 501 (c) (3), (c) (4), (c) (8), (c) (10), or (c) (19). For purposes of this paragraph (d), such a determination letter shall not have retroactive effect.

(e) Any employee of the department of revenue collecting voluntary contributions for organ and tissue donations under the provisions of sections 42-2-107 (4) (b) (V) and 42-2-118 (1) (a) (II), C.R.S.; or

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (e) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(e) Any employee of the department of revenue collecting voluntary contributions for organ and tissue donations under sections 42-2-107 (4) (b) (V) and 42-2-118 (1) (a) (II), C.R.S.;

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (e) is effective January 1, 2013.

(f) A person whose only responsibility in connection with a charitable contribution is to provide a merchant account to process credit card payments using the internet.

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (f) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(f) A person whose only responsibility in connection with a charitable contribution is to provide a merchant account to process credit card payments using the internet; or

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (f) is effective January 1, 2013.

(g) A person who prepares a grant application for a charitable organization or purpose, unless the person's compensation is computed on the basis of funds to be raised or actually raised as a result of the grant application.

Editor's note: Paragraph (g) is effective January 1, 2013.

(8) "Person" means an individual, a corporation, an association, a partnership, a trust, a foundation, or any other entity however organized or any group of individuals associated in fact but not a legal entity.

(9) Repealed.

(9.3) "Professional fundraising consultant" means any person, other than a bona fide officer or regular employee of a charitable organization, who is retained by a charitable organization for a fixed fee or rate under a written agreement to plan, manage, advise, consult, or prepare material for or with respect to the solicitation in this state of contributions for a charitable organization but who does not solicit contributions or employ, procure, or engage any compensated person to solicit contributions. No lawyer, investment counselor, or banker who renders professional services to a charitable organization or advises a person to make a charitable contribution during the course of rendering professional services to the person shall be deemed, as a result of such professional services or advice, to be a "professional fundraising consultant".

(9.5) "Records" means books, financial statements, papers, correspondence, memoranda, agreements, or other documents or records that the secretary of state deems relevant or material to an inquiry.

(10) "Solicit" or "solicitation" means to request, or the request for, directly or indirectly, money, credit, property, financial assistance, or any other thing of value on the plea or representation that such money, credit, property, financial assistance, or other thing of value, or any portion thereof, will be used for a charitable purpose or will benefit a charitable organization. The term "solicit" or "solicitation" shall include, but need not be limited to, the following methods of requesting or securing such money, credit, property, financial assistance, or other thing of value:

(a) Any oral or written request; or

(b) Any sale or attempted sale of or any offer to sell any advertisement, advertising space, book, card, tag, coupon, device, magazine, membership, merchandise, subscription, flower, ticket, candy, cookies, or other tangible item in which any appeal is made for any charitable organization or purpose, or for which the name of any charitable organization is used or referred to in any such appeal as an inducement or reason for making any such sale, or for which any statement is made that the proceeds or any portion thereof from such sale will be used for any charitable purpose or will benefit any charitable organization. A "solicitation" shall be deemed to have taken place whether or not the person making the "solicitation" receives any contribution.

(11) "Solicitation campaign" means a series of solicitations which are made by the same person and which are similar in content or are based on a similar pitch or sales approach, which series leads up to or is represented to lead up to an event or lasts or is intended to last for a definite period of time. If the series of solicitations lasts or is intended to last for an indefinite period of time or for more than one year, a "solicitation campaign" means all similar solicitations made by the same person occurring within a particular calendar year.

(11.5) "Suspend" means that a charitable organization, professional fund-raising consultant, or paid solicitor is prohibited from soliciting contributions, providing consulting services in connection with a solicitation campaign, or conducting a solicitation campaign in Colorado.

(12) "Volunteer" means a person who renders services to a charitable organization or for a charitable purpose and who neither receives nor is expressly or impliedly promised financial remuneration for said services.

Editor's note: Section 6 of chapter 133, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (7)(e) and (7)(f) and adding subsection (7)(g) applies to actions occurring on or after January 1, 2013.

6-16-104. Charitable organizations - initial registration - annual filing - fees. (1) Every charitable organization, except those exempted under subsection (6) of this section, that intends to solicit contributions in this state by any means or to have contributions solicited in this state on its behalf by any other person or entity or that participates in a charitable sales promotion shall, prior to engaging in any of these activities, file a registration statement with the secretary of state upon a form prescribed by the secretary of state. Each chapter, branch, or affiliate of a charitable organization that is required to file a registration statement under this section either shall file a separate registration statement or shall report the necessary information to its parent charitable organization, which then shall file a consolidated registration statement.

(2) The registration statement shall be signed and sworn to under oath by an officer of the charitable organization, which may include its chief fiscal officer, and shall contain the following information:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to subsection (2) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(2) The registration statement must be signed and sworn to under oath by an officer of the charitable organization, which may include its chief fiscal officer, and must contain the following information:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to subsection (2) is effective January 1, 2013.

(a) The name of the charitable organization, the purpose for which it is organized, and the name or names under which it intends to solicit contributions;

(b) The address and telephone number of the principal place of business of the charitable organization and the address and telephone number of any offices in this state, or, if the charitable organization does not maintain an office in this state, the name, address, and telephone number of the person that has custody of its financial records;

(c) The names and addresses of the officers, directors, trustees, and executive personnel of the charitable organization;

(d) The last day of the fiscal year of the charitable organization;

(e) The place and date when the charitable organization was legally established, the form of its organization, and its tax-exempt status;

(f) A financial report for the most recent fiscal year, upon a form prescribed by the secretary of state, or, in the discretion of the secretary of state, a copy of the charitable organization's federal form 990, with all schedules except schedules of donors, for the most recent fiscal year. If, at the time of the initial registration, the charitable organization does not have the required financial report or form 990 for the most recent fiscal year, the charitable organization shall submit a financial report or form 990 for the most recent fiscal year in which such information is available. An organization that was first legally established within the past year and thus does not have financial information or a form 990 for its most recent fiscal year shall provide to the secretary of state a financial report based on good faith estimates for its current fiscal year on a form prescribed by the secretary of state. Any organization that files a good faith estimate for its first fiscal year shall amend its initial registration statement to report actual financial information no later than the fifteenth day of the fifth month after the close of the organization's first fiscal year.

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (f) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(f) A financial report for the most recent fiscal year, upon a form prescribed by the secretary of state, or, in the discretion of the secretary of state, a copy of the charitable organization's federal form 990, with all schedules except schedules of donors, for the most recent fiscal year. If, at the time of the initial registration, the charitable organization does not have the required financial report or form 990 for the most recent fiscal year, the charitable organization shall submit a financial report or form 990 for the most recent fiscal year in which such information is available. An organization that was first legally established within the past year and thus does not have financial information or a form 990 for its most recent fiscal year shall provide to the secretary of state a financial report based on good faith estimates for its current fiscal year on a form prescribed by the secretary of state. Any organization that files a good faith estimate for its first fiscal year shall amend its initial registration statement to report actual financial information on or before the earlier of the fifteenth day of the eighth month after the close of the organization's first fiscal year or the date authorized for filing a form 990 with the internal revenue service.

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (f) is effective January 1, 2013.

(g) The names and addresses of any paid solicitors, professional fundraising consultants, and commercial coventurers who are acting or have agreed to act on behalf of the charitable organization. If the paid solicitor, professional fundraising consultant, or commercial coventurer is a partnership, corporation, limited liability company, or other legal entity, the charitable organization shall list only the name and address of the legal entity.

(3) The secretary of state may promulgate rules concerning the acceptance of a uniform multistate registration statement, such as a unified registration statement, in lieu of the registration statement described in subsection (2) of this section. As soon as practicable, the secretary of state shall take steps to cooperate in a joint state and federal electronic filing project involving state charity offices and the internal revenue service to enable and promote electronic filing of uniform multistate registration statements and federal annual information returns.

(4) The registration of a charitable organization shall be amended annually, on forms prescribed by the secretary of state, to reflect any changes of name, address, principals, corporate forms, tax status, and any other changes that materially affect the identity or business of the charitable organization. Annual amendments shall be filed at the same time as and together with any financial report required in subsection (5) of this section regardless of when the charitable organization filed its initial registration pursuant to subsection (1) of this section.

(5) Every charitable organization required to register under this section shall annually file with the secretary of state a financial report for the most recent fiscal year on a form prescribed by the secretary of state, or, in the discretion of the secretary of state, a copy of the charitable organization's federal form 990, with all schedules except schedules of donors, for the most recent fiscal year. Such financial report shall be filed on or before the fifteenth day of the fifth calendar month after the close of each fiscal year in which the charitable organization solicited in this state. A charitable organization that is unable to file a copy of its form 990 return or the secretary of state's financial form by the prescribed deadline may request an extension of the filing deadline from the secretary of state. All such requests shall be made and granted under terms, conditions, and procedures that are substantially similar to the terms, conditions, and procedures applicable to obtaining an extension of time to file a form 990 return from the internal revenue service. A charitable organization shall provide the secretary of state with its most recently completed form 990 return, or such financial information as the secretary of state may require, in a form prescribed by the secretary of state, during the extension period. An organization that was first legally established within the past year and thus does not have financial information or a form 990 for its most recent fiscal year shall provide to the secretary of state a financial report based on good faith estimates for its current fiscal year on a form prescribed by the secretary of state.

Editor's note: This version of subsection (5) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(5) Every charitable organization required to register under this section shall annually file with the secretary of state a financial report for the most recent fiscal year on a form prescribed by the secretary of state, or, in the discretion of the secretary of state, a copy of the charitable organization's federal form 990, with all schedules except schedules of donors, for the most recent fiscal year. The financial report must be filed on or before the earlier of the fifteenth day of the eighth calendar month after the close of each fiscal year in which the charitable organization solicited in this state or the date authorized for filing a form 990 with the internal revenue service. A charitable organization that is unable to file a copy of its form 990 return or the secretary of state's financial form by the prescribed deadline may request an extension of the filing deadline from the secretary of state. The secretary of state, upon receipt of an application to extend the filing deadline, may grant a three-month extension of time to file the financial report. All such requests must be in a form prescribed by the secretary of state and must include a statement describing in detail the reasons causing the delay in filing the financial report and an affirmation that the charitable organization has filed with the internal revenue service an application for a corresponding extension of time to file the organization's form 990. Upon request, the charitable organization shall provide the secretary of state with a copy of its application for extension of time to file with the internal revenue service in order to verify the date authorized for filing its form 990 with the internal revenue service.

Editor's note: This version of subsection (5) is effective January 1, 2013.

(6) The following shall not be required to file a registration statement:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to subsection (6) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(6) The following are not required to file a registration statement:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to subsection (6) is effective January 1, 2013.

(a) Persons that are exempt from filing a federal annual information return pursuant to 26 U.S.C. sec. 6033 (a) (2), (3) (A) (I), (3) (A) (III), or (3) (C) (i) or pursuant to 26 CFR 1.6033-2 (g) (1) (i) to (g) (1) (iv) or (g) (1) (vii);

(b) Political parties, candidates for federal or state office, and political action committees required to file financial information with federal or state elections commissions; and

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (b) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(b) Political parties, candidates for federal or state office, and political action committees required to file financial information with federal or state elections commissions;

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (b) is effective January 1, 2013.

(c) Charitable organizations that do not intend to and do not actually raise or receive gross revenue, excluding grants from governmental entities or from organizations exempt from federal taxation under section 501(c) (3) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended, in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars during a fiscal year or do not receive contributions from more than ten persons during a fiscal year. The exemption authorized in this paragraph (c) shall not apply to a charitable organization that has contracted with a paid solicitor to solicit contributions in this state for the organization.

(d) Persons exclusively making appeals for funds on behalf of a specific individual named in the solicitation, but only if all of the proceeds of the solicitation are given to or expended for the direct benefit of the specified individual.

Editor's note: Paragraph (d) is effective January 1, 2013.

(7) Filing fees for the annual registration of a charitable organization and for amendments thereto shall be established by the secretary of state in an amount that reflects the costs of the secretary of state in administering the provisions of this article. All such fees collected shall be deposited in the department of state cash fund created in section 24-21-104 (3) (b), C.R.S.

(8) The secretary of state shall examine each registration to determine whether the applicable requirements of this section are satisfied. The secretary of state shall notify the charitable organization within ten days after receipt of its application of any deficiencies therein, otherwise the registration shall be deemed approved as filed. The secretary of state shall issue each approved applicant a registration number.

(9) No charitable organization that is required to register under this chapter shall, prior to registration, solicit contributions in this state by any means, have contributions solicited in this state on its behalf by any other person or entity, or participate in a charitable sales promotion.

(10) All information filed pursuant to this section, except for residential addresses and telephone numbers of individuals and schedules of contributors listed on the federal form 990 or its equivalent, shall be considered public records for purposes of the public records law, part 2 of article 72 of title 24, C.R.S.

Editor's note: Section 6 of chapter 133, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending the introductory portion to subsection (2), subsections (2)(f) and (5), the introductory portion to subsection (6), and subsection (6)(b) and adding subsection (6)(d) applies to actions occurring on or after January 1, 2013.

6-16-104.3. Professional fundraising consultants - annual registration - fees. (1) No person shall act as a professional fundraising consultant without first complying with the requirements of this section.

(2) Every contract between a professional fundraising consultant and a charitable organization or sponsor shall be in writing and signed by an authorized official of the charitable organization. The professional fundraising consultant shall provide a copy of the contract to the charitable organization prior to the performance of any material services under the contract and shall make a copy of the contract available to the secretary of state upon request. The contract shall contain all of the following provisions:

(a) A statement of the charitable purpose for which the solicitation campaign is being conducted;

(b) A statement of the respective obligations of the professional fundraising consultant and the charitable organization;

(c) Whether the professional fundraising consultant will at any time have custody or control of contributions;

(d) A clear statement of the fees that will be paid to the professional fundraising consultant or, if the fees are to be calculated based on a percentage of contributions or other formula, a clear statement of the percentage or other formula; and

(e) The effective and termination dates of the contract.

(3) A professional fundraising consultant who at any time has or will have custody or control of contributions from a solicitation conducted on behalf of a charitable organization in this state shall also comply with the registration requirements of this section before performing any material services with respect to such solicitation.

(4) Applications for registration or renewal of registration shall be submitted on a form prescribed by the secretary of state, shall be signed under oath, and shall include the following information:

(a) The address and telephone number of the principal place of business of the applicant and the address and telephone number of any office located in this state if the principal place of business is located outside the state;

(a.5) The form of the applicant's business and, if the applicant is not an individual, the place and date when the applicant was incorporated or otherwise legally established;

(b) The name, address, and telephone number of the person that has custody of the applicant's financial records;

(c) If the applicant is not an individual, the names and addresses of the owners, officers, and executive personnel of the applicant;

(d) Whether the applicant or any of its owners, officers, directors, trustees, or employees have, within the immediately preceding five years, been convicted of, found guilty of, pled guilty or nolo contendere to, been adjudicated a juvenile violator of, or been incarcerated for any felony involving fraud, theft, larceny, embezzlement, fraudulent conversion, or misappropriation of property or any crime arising from the conduct of a solicitation for a charitable organization or sponsor, under the laws of this or any other state or of the United States, and if so, the name of such person, the nature of the offense, the date of the offense, the court having jurisdiction in the case, the date of conviction or other disposition, and the disposition of the offense;

(e) Whether the applicant or any of its owners, officers, directors, trustees, or employees have been enjoined from violating any law relating to a charitable solicitation or from engaging in charitable solicitation and, if so, the name of such person, the date of the injunction, and the court issuing the injunction;

(f) Whether the applicant is registered with or otherwise authorized by any other state to act as a professional fundraising consultant; and

(g) Whether the applicant has had such registration or authority denied, suspended, revoked, or enjoined by any court or other governmental authority in this state or another state.

(5) The application for registration or for renewal shall be accompanied by the fee established pursuant to subsection (12) of this section. A professional fundraising consultant that is a partnership, corporation, or limited liability company may register for and pay a single fee on behalf of all its partners, members, officers, directors, agents, and employees. In such case, the names and street addresses of all the partners, members, officers, directors, employees, and agents of the fundraising consultant and all other persons with whom the fundraising consultant has contracted to work under its direction shall be listed in the application or furnished to the secretary of state within five days after the date of employment or contractual arrangement.

(6) Each registration is valid for a period of one year and may be renewed, on or before the anniversary date, for an additional one-year period upon application to the secretary of state and payment of the registration fee. Any material changes to the information contained in the application for registration shall be reported in writing to the secretary of state within thirty days.

(7) The secretary of state shall examine each registration to determine whether the applicable requirements of this section are satisfied. The secretary of state shall notify the applicant within ten days after receipt of its application of any deficiencies therein, otherwise the application shall be deemed approved as filed. The secretary of state shall issue each approved applicant a registration number.

(8) If a professional fundraising consultant will have custody of any contribution received during a solicitation campaign, each such contribution shall be deposited within two business days after its receipt in an account at a bank or other federally insured financial institution. The account shall be in the name of the charitable organization with whom the professional fundraising consultant has contracted, and the charitable organization shall have sole control over all withdrawals from the account.

(9) Within ninety days after a solicitation campaign has been concluded, and on the anniversary of the commencement of a solicitation campaign lasting more than one year, the professional fundraising consultant shall provide to the charitable organization a financial report of the campaign, including gross proceeds and an itemization of all expenses or disbursements for any purpose. The report shall be signed by the professional fundraising consultant or, if the professional fundraising consultant is not an individual, by an authorized officer or agent of the professional fundraising consultant, who shall certify that the financial report is true and complete to the best of the person's knowledge. The professional fundraising consultant shall provide a copy of the report to the secretary of state upon request.

(10) No person may act as a professional fundraising consultant and no professional fundraising consultant required to be registered under this section shall knowingly employ any person as an officer, trustee, director, or employee if such person, within the immediately preceding five years, has been convicted of, found guilty of, pled guilty or nolo contendere to, been adjudicated a juvenile violator of, or been incarcerated for any felony involving fraud, theft, larceny, embezzlement, fraudulent conversion, or misappropriation of property or any crime arising from the conduct of a solicitation for a charitable organization or sponsor, under the laws of this or any other state or of the United States, or has been enjoined within the immediately preceding five years under the laws of this or any other state or of the United States from engaging in deceptive conduct relating to charitable solicitations.

(11) All information filed pursuant to this section, except for residential addresses and telephone numbers of individuals, shall be considered public records for purposes of the public records law, part 2 of article 72 of title 24, C.R.S.

(12) Filing fees for the annual registration of a professional fundraising consultant and for amendments thereto shall be established by the secretary of state in an amount that reflects the costs of the secretary of state in administering the provisions of this article. All such fees collected shall be deposited in the department of state cash fund created in section 24-21-104 (3) (b), C.R.S.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective December 31, 1994. (See L. 92, p. 235.)

6-16-104.6. Paid solicitors - annual registration - filing of contracts - fees. (1) (a) No person shall act as a paid solicitor without first complying with the requirements of this section.

(b) Every paid solicitor shall register in accordance with subsection (3) of this section before soliciting contributions in this state.

(2) Every contract between a paid solicitor and a charitable organization or sponsor for each solicitation campaign shall be in writing and shall be signed by an authorized official of the charitable organization or sponsor, who shall be a member of the organization's governing body, and by the paid solicitor if the paid solicitor is an individual or by the authorized contracting officer for the paid solicitor if the paid solicitor is not an individual. The paid solicitor shall provide a copy of the contract to the charitable organization prior to the performance of any material services under the contract and shall make a copy of the contract available to the secretary of state upon request. The contract shall contain all of the following provisions:

(a) A statement of the charitable purpose for which the solicitation campaign is being conducted;

(b) A statement of the respective obligations of the paid solicitor and the charitable organization;

(c) A statement of the specified minimum percentage, if any, of the gross receipts from contributions that will be remitted to the charitable organization, or, if the solicitation involves the sale of goods, services, or tickets to a fundraising event, the specified minimum percentage, if any, of the purchase price that will be remitted to the charitable organization.

Any stated percentage shall exclude any amount payable by the charitable organization as fundraising costs.

(d) A statement of the specified percentage, if any, of gross revenue that constitutes the paid solicitor's compensation. If the paid solicitor's compensation is not contingent upon the number of contributions or the amount received, the paid solicitor's compensation shall be expressed as a reasonable estimate of the percentage of gross revenue, and the contract shall clearly disclose the assumptions upon which such estimate is based. The stated assumptions shall be based upon all the relevant facts known to the paid solicitor regarding the solicitation to be conducted.

(e) The effective and termination dates of the contract.

(3) Applications for registration or renewal of registration shall be submitted on a form prescribed by the secretary of state, shall be signed under oath, and shall include the following information:

(a) The address and telephone number of the principal place of business of the applicant and the address and telephone number of any office located in this state if the principal place of business is located outside the state;

(b) The form of the applicant's business and, if the applicant is not an individual, the place and date when the applicant was incorporated or otherwise legally established;

(c) The name, address, and telephone number of the person that has custody of the applicant's financial records;

(d) If the applicant is not an individual, the names and addresses of the owners, officers, and executive personnel of the applicant;

(e) The names of all persons in charge of any solicitation activity conducted in this state by the applicant or on the applicant's behalf;

(f) Whether the applicant, any person with a controlling interest in the applicant, or any of the applicant's owners, officers, directors, trustees, employees, or agents has, within the immediately preceding five years, been convicted of, found guilty of, pled guilty or nolo contendere to, been adjudicated a juvenile violator of, or been incarcerated for any felony involving fraud, theft, larceny, embezzlement, fraudulent conversion, or misappropriation of property or any crime arising from the conduct of a solicitation for a charitable organization or sponsor, under the laws of this or any other state or of the United States, and if so, the name of such person, the nature of the offense, the date of the offense, the court having jurisdiction in the case, the date of conviction or other disposition, and the disposition of the offense;

(g) Whether the applicant or any of its owners, officers, directors, trustees, or employees have been enjoined from violating any law relating to a charitable solicitation and, if so, the name of such person, the date of the injunction, and the court issuing the injunction;

(h) Whether the applicant is registered with or otherwise authorized by any other state to act as a paid solicitor; and

(i) Whether the applicant has had such registration or authority denied, suspended, revoked, or enjoined by any court or other governmental authority in this state or another state.

(4) The application for registration or for renewal shall be accompanied by the fee established pursuant to subsection (12) of this section. A paid solicitor that is a partnership, corporation, or limited liability company may register for and pay a single fee on behalf of all its partners, members, officers, directors, agents, and employees. In such case, the names and street addresses of all the partners, members, officers, directors, employees, and agents of the paid solicitor and all other persons with whom the paid solicitor has contracted to work under its direction shall be listed in the application or furnished to the secretary of state within five days after the date of employment or contractual arrangement.

(5) Each registration is valid for a period of one year and may be renewed, on or before the anniversary date, for an additional one-year period upon application to the secretary of state and payment of the registration fee. Any material changes to the information contained in the application for registration shall be reported in writing to the secretary of state within thirty days.

(6) The secretary of state shall examine each registration to determine whether the applicable requirements of this section are satisfied. The secretary of state shall notify the applicant within ten days after receipt of its application of any deficiencies therein, otherwise the application shall be deemed approved as filed. The secretary of state shall issue each approved applicant a registration number.

(7) No later than fifteen days before the commencement of a solicitation campaign, the paid solicitor shall file with the secretary of state a completed solicitation notice, on forms prescribed by the secretary of state, containing the following information:

(a) A summary of the governing contract, as specified in subsection (2) of this section;

(b) The full legal name and address of the paid solicitor who will be conducting the solicitation campaign and the full legal name and address of each person responsible for directing and supervising the conduct of the campaign;

(c) A statement, in accordance with section 6-16-111 (1) (f) and (1) (g), of the nature of the intended solicitation campaign, including the means of communication to be used in the campaign, the projected commencement and conclusion dates of the campaign, and a description of any event the campaign will lead up to;

(d) A full and fair statement, in accordance with section 6-16-111 (1) (f) and (1) (g), of the charitable purpose for which the solicitation campaign is being carried out;

(e) Each location and telephone number, if applicable, from which the solicitation is to be conducted;

(f) A statement as to whether the paid solicitor will at any time have custody of contributions;

(g) The account number and location of each bank account where receipts from the campaign are to be deposited;

(h) The address where records and accounting concerning the solicitation campaign are being kept; and

(i) A certification statement, signed by an officer of the charitable organization on the behalf of whom the solicitation campaign is to occur, stating that the solicitation notice and accompanying material are true and complete to the best of his or her knowledge.

(8) If a paid solicitor will have custody of any contribution received during a solicitation campaign, each such contribution shall be deposited within two business days after its receipt in an account at a bank or other federally insured financial institution. The account shall be in the name of the charitable organization with whom the paid solicitor has contracted, and the charitable organization shall have sole control over all withdrawals from the account.

Editor's note: This version of subsection (8) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(8) If a paid solicitor will have custody of any monetary contribution received during a solicitation campaign, each such contribution must be deposited within two business days after its receipt in an account at a bank or other federally insured financial institution. The account must be in the name of the charitable organization with whom the paid solicitor has contracted, and the charitable organization must have sole control over all withdrawals from the account.

Editor's note: This version of subsection (8) is effective January 1, 2013.

(9) Within ninety days after a solicitation campaign has been concluded, and on the anniversary of the commencement of a solicitation campaign lasting more than one year, the paid solicitor shall provide to the charitable organization and file with the secretary of state a financial report of the campaign, including gross proceeds and an itemization of all expenses or disbursements for any purpose. The report shall be on a form prescribed by the secretary of state and shall be signed by the paid solicitor, or, if the paid solicitor is not an individual, by an authorized official of the paid solicitor, and by an authorized official of the charitable organization. The persons signing the report shall certify that the financial report is true and complete to the best of their knowledge.

(10) No person may act as a paid solicitor and no paid solicitor required to be registered under this section shall knowingly employ any person as an officer, trustee, director, or employee if such person, within the immediately preceding five years, has been convicted of, found guilty of, pled guilty or nolo contendere to, been adjudicated a juvenile violator of, or been incarcerated for any felony involving fraud, theft, larceny, embezzlement, fraudulent conversion, or misappropriation of property or any crime arising from the conduct of a solicitation for a charitable organization or sponsor, under the laws of this or any other state or of the United States, or has been enjoined within the immediately preceding five years under the laws of this or any other state or of the United States from engaging in deceptive conduct relating to charitable solicitations.

(11) All information filed pursuant to this section, except for residential addresses and telephone numbers of individuals, shall be considered public records for purposes of the public records law, part 2 of article 72 of title 24, C.R.S.

(12) Filing fees for the annual registration of a paid solicitor, amendments thereto, solicitation notices, and financial reports shall be established by the secretary of state in amounts that reflects the costs of the secretary of state in administering the provisions of this article. All such fees collected shall be deposited in the department of state cash fund created in section 24-21-104 (3) (b), C.R.S.

6-16-105. Written confirmation of contribution - disclosures. (1) A paid solicitor who makes an oral solicitation by telephone, door-to-door, or otherwise shall furnish to each contributor, prior to collecting or attempting to collect any contribution, a written confirmation of the expected contribution, which confirmation shall contain the following information clearly and conspicuously:

(a) The full legal name, address, telephone number, and registration number of the employer of the individual paid solicitor who directly communicated with the contributor;

(b) A disclosure that the contribution is not tax-deductible, if such disclosure is applicable, or, if the solicitor maintains that the contribution is tax-deductible in whole or in part, the portion of the contribution that the solicitor maintains is tax-deductible;

(c) A disclosure in capital letters of no less than ten-point, bold-faced type identifying the paid solicitor as a paid solicitor and containing the statement: "Registration by the secretary of state is not an endorsement of either the paid solicitor or the organization or cause the solicitor represents.";

(d) The address and telephone number of the telephone room or other location from which the solicitation has been or is being conducted if such information is different than that which is provided pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (1); except that this information is not required to be provided if telephone solicitations are being conducted from more than one location and from the residences of the individual paid solicitor;

(e) The name, address, telephone number, and registration number of any charitable organization connected with the solicitation or any organization the name or symbol of which has been used in aid of or in the course of such solicitation;

(f) The amount of any expected monetary contribution;

(g) The name and address of the contributor, as well as the date of the individual solicitation, or spaces where this information may be filled in by the contributor;

(h) A statement that Colorado residents may obtain copies of registration and financial documents from the office of the secretary of state, with a current telephone number and web site address for obtaining such documents from the secretary of state.

(2) If the contributor is absent when the contribution is to be collected, the paid solicitor may comply with subsection (1) of this section by furnishing the written confirmation in a manner previously agreed upon between said solicitor and the contributor.

(3) Except for the amount of the expected contribution, a written solicitation shall contain the same information as is required in subsection (1) of this section.

6-16-105.3. Solicitations by telephone. (1) In addition to any other disclosure required for solicitations by telephone under section 6-16-105, a paid solicitor as defined in section 6-16-103 (7) who makes an oral solicitation to any person by a telephone call received in Colorado regarding a charitable contribution shall make the following oral disclosures as part of the telephone solicitation:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to subsection (1) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(1) In addition to any other disclosure required for solicitations by telephone under section 6-16-105, a paid solicitor who makes an oral solicitation to any person by a telephone call received in Colorado regarding a charitable contribution shall make the following oral disclosures as part of the telephone solicitation:

Editor's note: This version of the introductory portion to subsection (1) is effective January 1, 2013.

(a) A statement that the person soliciting the charitable contribution by telephone is paid to make such solicitation;

(b) The name of the telemarketing company that employs the paid solicitor;

(c) The name and telephone number of the charitable organization on whose behalf the paid solicitor is making the solicitation;

(d) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2001, p. 1247, § 5, effective May 9, 2002.)

(d.5) The first name and surname of the paid solicitor, which must be given in the opening greeting;

Editor's note: Paragraph (d.5) is effective January 1, 2013.

(e) A statement that the charitable contribution is not tax deductible, if such is the case;

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (e) is effective until January 1, 2013.

(e) A statement, which must be made prior to the person's agreement to make a contribution, that the charitable contribution is not tax deductible, if such is the case;

Editor's note: This version of paragraph (e) is effective January 1, 2013.

(f) Upon request by a person from whom a charitable contribution is sought, the percentage of the contribution that will be paid to the charitable organization as a result of such person's contribution; and

(g) Upon request by a person from whom a charitable contribution is sought, the registration numbers of the charitable organization and the paid solicitor.

(2) A volunteer as defined in section 6-16-103 (12) who makes an oral solicitation to any person by a telephone call received in Colorado regarding a charitable contribution is subject to the disclosure required under paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed as restricting, superseding, abrogating, or contravening any state or federal law or regulation regarding charitable solicitations.

Editor's note: Section 6 of chapter 133, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending the introductory portion to subsection (1) and subsection (1)(e) and adding subsection (1)(d.5) applies to actions occurring on or after January 1, 2013.

ANNOTATION

The disclosure mandated by subsection (1)(d) is unconstitutional. Subsection (1)(d) violates the first and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Nat'l Fed'n of the Blind v. Norton, 981 F. Supp. 1371 (D. Colo. 1997).

Subsection (1)(d) is not narrowly tailored to the general assembly's stated purpose of fraud prevention. The state could publish or otherwise publicize the rights of donors to rescind telephone contributions, thereby educating the public without burdening the free speech rights of a specific category of charitable fundraisers, namely paid solicitors. Nat'l Fed'n of the Blind v. Norton, 981 F. Supp. 1371 (D. Colo. 1997).

By mandating that only paid fundraisers tell donors they have three days to rescind their pledge, subsection (1)(d) harms and discriminates against only those charities that rely on paid fundraisers. Nat'l Fed'n of the Blind v. Norton, 981 F. Supp. 1371 (D. Colo. 1997).

6-16-105.5. Solicitations by container - disclosures. (1) (a) No person or charitable organization, or agent of a person or charitable organization, whether paid or not paid, shall place any container offering a product for sale or distribution in a public place for solicitation purposes unless the container is affixed with a disclosure label conspicuously displaying the information set forth in subsection (2) of this section in a typed or printed clearly legible form.

(b) (I) A person other than an organization that has received a determination that it is exempt under section 501 (c) (3) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended, who places a container in a public place for solicitation purposes and who does not direct all of the items placed in the container to a charitable purpose or, if the items are sold, does not direct all proceeds of such sale to a charitable purpose, shall affix to the container a disclosure label that clearly and conspicuously displays the following legend:

DONATED ITEMS WILL BE SOLD FOR PROFIT

The value of items placed in this container is NOT tax-deductible.

(II) This paragraph (b) shall not apply to containers used exclusively for the collection of used paper, cardboard, motor oil, bottles, cans, or other containers or materials for recycling or waste diversion purposes.

(2) The disclosure label required pursuant to paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section shall state the following:

(a) The percentage of annual contributions that are paid to any person or organization to maintain, service, or collect the contributions deposited in all the containers used by the person or charitable organization;

(b) The percentage of annual contributions that are paid to the charitable organization specified on the container;

(c) Whether the person maintaining, servicing, or collecting the contributions deposited in the container is a volunteer or is paid for the services.

(3) For purposes of this section, "container" means a box, carton, package, receptacle, canister, jar, dispenser, or machine.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed as restricting, superseding, abrogating, or contravening any state or federal law or regulation regarding charitable solicitations.

6-16-106. Contributor's right to cancel. (1) In addition to any right otherwise provided by law with respect to the binding nature of an agreement or pledge to make a charitable contribution, a contributor shall have the right to cancel his agreement or pledge to contribute as follows:

(a) With respect to a solicitation in which the paid solicitor knowingly fails to comply with this article, at any time; or

(b) Until 12 midnight of the third business day, or with respect to a nonmonetary contribution, until 12 midnight of the first business day after the day on which the contributor receives a written confirmation of contribution pursuant to section 6-16-105.

(2) Cancellation occurs when the contributor gives written or oral notice of the cancellation to the paid solicitor at the address or telephone number stated in the written confirmation of contribution.

(3) Notice of cancellation, if given by mail, is given at the time it is properly addressed and deposited in a mail box with proper postage.

(4) A particular form shall not be required for a notice of cancellation, and such notice shall be sufficient if it indicates the intention of the contributor to cancel his pledge to contribute.

(5) Within ten days after a notification of cancellation has been received by the paid solicitor, the paid solicitor shall tender to the contributor any contribution made and any note or other evidence of indebtedness.

(6) Allowing for ordinary wear and tear or consumption of the goods contemplated by the transaction, within a reasonable time after an agreement or pledge to contribute has been cancelled, the contributor upon demand must tender to the paid solicitor any goods or items delivered by the paid solicitor in connection with the contribution but shall not be under obligation to tender at any other place than where the goods or items were delivered. If the paid solicitor fails to demand possession of the goods or items within a reasonable time after cancellation, the goods or items become the property of the contributor without obligation to contribute. For purposes of this subsection (6), forty days is presumed to be a reasonable time.

6-16-109. Records - accounts. (1) During each solicitation campaign, a paid solicitor shall create and maintain, for not less than two years after the completion of such campaign, the following records:

(a) Copies of all written confirmations or any standardized written confirmations provided pursuant to section 6-16-105;

(b) The name and residence address of each employee, agent, or other person involved in the solicitation as is on record at the time of such solicitation;

(c) The locations and account numbers of all bank or other financial institution accounts into which the paid solicitor has deposited receipts from the solicitation;

(d) Records indicating the quantity of donated tickets or sponsorships, as described in section 6-16-107, which were actually used or received by donees or beneficiaries;

(e) A complete record and accounting of the receipts and disbursements of funds derived from any solicitation campaign. Said record and accounting shall clearly identify any person or organization to whom or to which any part of such funds are transferred and shall describe with specificity the purpose for which any expenditure is made and the amount of each expenditure. Funds spent directly for any charitable purpose or transferred to any charitable organization as represented in the solicitations shall be clearly delineated as such.

(f) All written records relating to pitches, sales approaches, or disclosures used during any solicitation campaign and all instructions provided to paid solicitors concerning the content or solicitations;

(g) All contracts or agreements made with charitable organizations or other represented beneficiaries of solicitations; and

(h) For each contribution, records indicating the name and address of the contributor, the amount of the contribution if monetary, and the date of the contribution, together with the name of the individual paid solicitor who solicited the contribution.

(2) Any person involved in solicitations who claims an exemption from the definition of paid solicitor in section 6-16-103 (7) shall maintain records of ruling letters and other communications from the internal revenue service regarding tax-exempt status. Failure to produce such records on written demand of the district attorney pursuant to section 6-16-111 (1) (e) shall give rise to a rebuttable presumption that the person does not have a ruling letter granting tax-exempt status pursuant to 26 U.S.C. sec. 501 (c) (3).

(3) Repealed.

6-16-110. Charitable sales promotions. (1) The provisions of this article relating to commercial coventurers and charitable sales promotions shall apply only when a commercial coventurer reasonably expects that more than one-half of all proceeds of a solicitation campaign will be derived from transactions within the state of Colorado.

(2) A commercial coventurer shall disclose in each advertisement for a charitable sales promotion the dollar amount or percent per unit of goods or services purchased or used that will benefit the charitable organization or purpose. If the actual dollar amount or percentage cannot reasonably be determined prior to the final date of the charitable sales promotion, the commercial coventurer shall disclose an estimated dollar amount or percentage. Any such estimate shall be reasonable and shall be based upon all of the relevant facts known to the commercial coventurer regarding the charitable sales promotion.

(3) A commercial entity which purchases at wholesale a product which is created, manufactured, or produced by a charitable organization for resale to the general public as part of the commercial entity's general stock of merchandise shall be exempt from the provisions of this article relating to commercial coventurers and charitable sales promotions.

6-16-110.5. Secretary of state - dissemination of information - cooperation with other agencies - rules. (1) The secretary of state shall take steps to:

(a) Publicize the requirements of this article and otherwise assist charitable organizations, professional fundraising consultants, and paid solicitors in complying with this article;

(b) Compile and publish, on an annual basis, the information provided by charitable organizations, professional fundraising consultants, and paid solicitors under this article to assist the public in making informed decisions about charitable solicitation and to assist charitable organizations in making informed decisions about contracting with paid solicitors;

(c) Participate in a national online charity information system as soon as a system is established, if the secretary determines that participation will further advance the purposes of this subsection (1) and subsection (2) of this section.

(2) The secretary of state may exchange with appropriate authorities of this state, any other state, and the United States information with respect to charitable organizations, professional fundraising consultants, commercial coventurers, and paid solicitors.

(3) The secretary of state shall have the authority to promulgate rules as needed for the effective implementation of this section, including but not limited to:

(a) Providing for the extension of filing deadlines;

(b) Providing for the online availability of forms required to be filed pursuant to sections 6-16-104 to 6-16-104.6;

(c) Providing for the electronic filing of required forms, including the acceptance of electronic signatures;

(d) Mandating electronic filing and providing, in the secretary of state's discretion, for exceptions to mandatory electronic filing; and

(e) Setting fines for noncompliance with this article or rules promulgated pursuant to this article. The fine for soliciting while unregistered shall not exceed three hundred dollars per year for charities or one thousand dollars per year for paid solicitors.

6-16-111. Violations. (1) A person commits charitable fraud if he or she:

(a) Knowingly solicits any contribution and in the course of such solicitation knowingly performs any act or omission in violation of any of the provisions of sections 6-16-104 to 6-16-107 and 6-16-110;

(b) Knowingly solicits any contribution and, in aid of or in the course of such solicitation, utilizes the name or symbol of another person or organization without written authorization from such person or organization for such use;

(c) Solicits any contribution and, in aid of or in the course of such solicitation, utilizes a name, symbol, or statement which is closely related or similar to that used by another person or organization with the intent to mislead the person to whom the solicitation is made that said solicitation is on the behalf of or is affiliated with such other person or organization;

(d) With the intent to defraud, knowingly solicits contributions and, in aid of such solicitation, assumes, or allows to be assumed, a false or fictitious identity or capacity, except for a trade name or trademark registered in this state by that person or his employer;

(e) Knowingly fails to create and maintain all records required by section 6-16-109 to be created and maintained or knowingly fails to make available said records for examination and photocopying at the office of the district attorney or at his own office in this state with copying facilities furnished free of charge, within five days after a written demand for the production of said records by the district attorney, or within twenty days with respect to records kept out of state;

(f) Knowingly makes a misrepresentation of a material fact in any notice, report, or record required to be filed, maintained, or created by this article;

(g) With the intent to defraud, devises or executes a scheme or artifice to defraud by means of a solicitation or obtains money, property, or services by means of a false or fraudulent pretense, representation, or promise in the course of a solicitation. A representation may be any manifestation of any assertion by words or conduct, including, but not limited to, a failure to disclose a material fact.

(h) Represents or causes another to represent that contributions are tax-deductible unless they so qualify under the federal internal revenue code;

(i) Represents or causes another to represent that a contribution to a charitable organization will be used for a purpose other than the purpose for which the charitable organization actually intends to use such contribution;

(j) Represents or causes another to represent that a greater portion of the contribution will go to a charitable organization than the actual portion that will go to such organization;

(k) Represents or causes another to represent that the solicitor is located in a geographic area that is different from the geographic area in which the solicitor is actually located;

(l) Represents or causes another to represent that the solicitor has a sponsorship, approval, status, affiliation, or connection with an organization or purpose that the solicitor does not actually have;

(m) Represents or causes another to represent that the person to whom a solicitation is made is under an obligation to make a contribution;

(n) Represents or causes another to represent that failure to make a contribution will adversely affect the person's credit rating;

(o) Represents or causes another to represent that the person has previously approved or agreed to make a contribution when in fact the person has not given such approval or agreement; or

(p) Represents or causes another to represent that the person has previously contributed to the same organization or for the same purpose when in fact the person has not so contributed.

(1.5) A person commits charitable fraud if he or she, in the course of or in furtherance of a solicitation, misrepresents to, misleads, makes false statements to, or uses a name other than the solicitor's legal name in communicating with a person being solicited in any manner that would lead a reasonable person to believe that:

(a) If the person being solicited makes a contribution, he or she will receive special benefits or favorable treatment from a police, sheriff, patrol, firefighting, or other law enforcement agency or department of government; or

(b) If the person being solicited fails to make a contribution, he or she will receive unfavorable treatment from a police, sheriff, patrol, firefighting, or other law enforcement agency or department of government.

(2) Any person who commits charitable fraud in violation of paragraph (b), (c), (d), (f), or (g) of subsection (1) of this section is guilty of a class 5 felony, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished in accordance with section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S.

(3) Any person who commits charitable fraud in violation of paragraph (a), (e), or (h) to (p) of subsection (1) of this section, or of subsection (1.5) of this section, is guilty of a class 2 misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished in accordance with section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S.; except that a person who commits a violation of any one or more of said paragraphs with respect to solicitations involving three separate contributors in any one solicitation campaign is guilty of a class 5 felony, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished in accordance with section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S.

(4) Charitable fraud which is a felony shall be deemed a class 1 public nuisance and subject to the provisions of part 3 of article 13 of title 16, C.R.S.

(5) Violation of any provision of this article also shall constitute a deceptive trade practice in violation of the "Colorado Consumer Protection Act", article 1 of this title, and shall be subject to remedies or penalties, or both, pursuant thereto.

(6) (a) In addition to any other applicable penalty, the secretary of state may deny, suspend, or revoke the registration of any charitable organization, professional fund-raising consultant, or paid solicitor that makes a false statement or omits material information in any registration statement, annual report, or other information required to be filed by this article or that acts or fails to act in such a manner as otherwise to violate any provision of this article. The secretary of state may also deny, suspend, or revoke the registration of any person who does not meet the requirements for registration set forth in this article.

(b) Upon notice from the secretary of state that a registration has been denied or is subject to suspension or revocation, the aggrieved party may request a hearing. The request for hearing must be made within five calendar days after receipt of notice. Proceedings for any such denial, suspension, or revocation hearing shall be governed by the "State Administrative Procedure Act", article 4 of title 24, C.R.S.; except that the secretary of state shall promulgate rules to provide for expedited deadlines to govern such proceedings and shall bear the burden of proof. The status quo concerning the ability of the aggrieved party to solicit funds shall be maintained during the pendency of the proceedings. Judicial review shall be available pursuant to section 24-4-106, C.R.S.

(c) In addition to other remedies authorized by law, the secretary of state may bring a civil action in the district court of any judicial district in which venue is proper for the purpose of obtaining injunctive relief against any person who violates, or threatens to violate, the provisions of this article.

(d) The rights and remedies available to the secretary of state pursuant to this subsection (6) shall not affect the rights and remedies available to any other person seeking relief for violations of this article or any other applicable law.

Editor's note: Prior to its repeal in 1988, provisions concerning charitable fraud were found in § 18-5-115.

ANNOTATION

Former statute unconstitutional. Former statute regarding charitable solicitations fraud, § 18-5-115 (1)(a), declared unconstitutionally overbroad because speech pertaining to charitable solicitation is entitled to the highest constitutional protection and is subject to strict scrutiny, and may be regulated only when regulation is narrowly tailored to achieve compelling state interest. Statute was not narrowly drawn because less intrusive means of preventing fraud were available. People v. French, 762 P.2d 1369 (Colo. 1988).

6-16-111.5. Investigations. Whenever the secretary of state or the secretary of state's designee believes that a violation of this article has occurred, the secretary of state or the secretary of state's designee may investigate any such violation. Upon demand, records shall be made available and produced to the secretary of state for inspection. Such records shall not be subject to disclosure pursuant to part 2 of article 72 of title 24, C.R.S.; except that public records about persons subject to this article prepared by the secretary of state or the secretary of state's designee are subject to disclosure pursuant to part 2 of article 72 of title 24, C.R.S.

6-16-112. Service of process. Any foreign corporation performing any of the acts prohibited under this article through any salesman or agent is subject to service of process either upon the registered agent specified by said corporation or upon the corporation itself if no agent is maintained pursuant to part 7 of article 90 of title 7, C.R.S. Service of process upon any individual outside this state based upon any action arising out of matters prohibited by this article shall be pursuant to section 13-1-125, C.R.S.

6-16-113. Severability. If any provision of this article is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be unconstitutional, the remaining provisions of this article shall be valid, unless it appears to the court that the valid provisions of this article are so essentially and inseparably connected with, and so dependent upon, the void provision that it cannot be presumed that the general assembly would have enacted the valid provisions without the void provision or unless the court determines that the valid provisions, standing alone, are incomplete and are incapable of being executed in accordance with the legislative intent.

6-16-114. Fine - late filing fee - rules. Any charitable organization, professional fund-raising consultant, or paid solicitor who, after sufficient notification by the secretary of state, fails to properly register, renew a registration, file a solicitation notice, or file a financial report of a solicitation campaign under this article by the end of the seventh day following the issuance of the final notice, is liable for a fine or late filing fee in an amount to be established by rule promulgated by the secretary of state. The late fee for filing a registration renewal, solicitation notice, or solicitation campaign financial report late shall not exceed one hundred dollars per year for charities or two hundred dollars per year for paid solicitors. Sufficient notification consists of at least two notices given to the organization and registered agent of the charitable organization, professional fund-raising consultant, or paid solicitor. The fine or late filing fee is in addition to any other filing fee provided by this article.

PART 3

PROVIDER NETWORKS

6-18-301. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that the rapidly changing health care market provides unique opportunities for health care providers to organize themselves into new forms of collaborative systems to deliver high quality health care at competitive market prices to cooperatives and other purchasers. This part 3 is enacted to encourage such collaborative arrangements and to further market-based competition among health care providers.

(2) The general assembly further recognizes that in order to achieve the most effective use of resources and medical technology to respond to changing market conditions, providers who would otherwise be competitors with each other will need to horizontally integrate in order to develop collaborative arrangements to guarantee an adequate number of providers to service the market and to vertically integrate in order to guarantee that those who receive services will have a continuum of care as appropriate to their care needs.

(3) The general assembly also recognizes that to effect such new forms of collaborative systems and integration of providers to service the market will require an analysis of existing methods of providing services, contracting, collaborating, and networking among providers and the extent and type of regulatory oversight of licensed provider networks or licensed individual providers which is appropriate to protect the public.

6-18-301.5. Definitions. As used in this part 3, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Licensed provider network" or "licensed individual provider" means a provider network or individual provider that is authorized to transact insurance business pursuant to title 10, C.R.S.

(2) "Provider" means a state-licensed, state-certified, or state-authorized facility or a practitioner delivering health care services to individuals.

(3) "Provider network" means a group of health care providers formed to provide health care services to individuals.

6-18-302. Creation of provider networks - requirements. (1) (a) Providers are hereby authorized to conduct business collaboratively as provider networks. Such networks are entities existing on or before July 1, 1994, that meet the definition of a provider network or may be created as any lawful entity under title 7, C.R.S., or as otherwise allowed by law. Provider networks existing on or before July 1, 1994, and provider networks created on and after July 1, 1994, conducting business pursuant to this part 3, in addition to the matters otherwise required, shall be subject to this article.

(b) (I) Except as provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b), if a provider network or individual provider organized on or after July 1, 1994, or organized prior to said date, proposes or is engaged in the transaction of insurance business, as defined in section 10-3-903, C.R.S., or the activities of a health maintenance organization as defined in section 10-16-102 (23), C.R.S., such provider network or individual provider must hold a certificate of authority from the commissioner of insurance to do business as an insurance company under title 10, C.R.S., or to establish a health maintenance organization under section 10-16-402, C.R.S.

(II) The fact that a provider network or individual provider has a capitated contract or other agreement with a carrier, pursuant to which the provider network or individual provider shares some of the risk of providing services to groups or individuals covered under a health care coverage plan issued by a carrier, shall not, in and of itself, be grounds for a determination by the commissioner of insurance that the provider network or individual provider is engaged in the transaction of insurance business.

(III) The commissioner of insurance, in consultation with providers and other appropriate persons, shall evaluate the need for specific legislation or rules for the licensure of provider networks and individual providers and, if determined appropriate, shall make recommendations thereon to the general assembly and governor and shall adopt such rules that are specific to licensed provider networks and licensed individual providers as provided in section 10-1-108 (13), C.R.S. A licensed provider network or licensed individual provider shall be subject to applicable provisions of title 10, C.R.S., except as otherwise provided in statute or rule adopted pursuant to section 10-1-108 (13), C.R.S.

(IV) Every licensed provider network that conducts insurance business in the state of Colorado shall:

(A) Obtain from the commissioner of insurance, before the start of business, a certificate of authority authorizing the provider network to conduct business in the state of Colorado;

(B) Maintain its principal and home office in the state of Colorado, maintain such books and records in this state, and maintain principal banking relationships with a bank chartered by the state of Colorado or a member bank of the federal reserve system;

(C) Hold at least one board of directors' meeting each year in the state of Colorado;

(D) Include in the provider network's management and administrative agreements, for essential insurance services, a provision that allows the commissioner reasonable access to examine such books and records; and

(E) For purposes of this paragraph (b), substantially perform in the state of Colorado the essential functions of the licensed provider network's principal and home office, including, but not limited to, the provision and administration of health care services, the issuance of health care plans, the maintenance of health care provider relations, and the provision of consumer information and services.

(2) If applicable, a network organized on and after July 1, 1994, is organized when the articles of organization are filed by the secretary of state or, if a delayed effective date is specified in the articles as filed with the secretary of state and a certificate of withdrawal is not filed, on such delayed effective date. The existence of the network begins upon organization.

(3) If applicable, each provider network shall file a report pursuant to section 7-136-107, C.R.S., and pay a fee to the secretary of state which shall be determined and collected pursuant to section 24-21-104 (3), C.R.S., in lieu of all franchise or corporation license taxes.

(4) A provider network or individual provider may request that specified information submitted to the division of insurance be kept confidential because it is a trade secret as defined in section 7-74-102 (4), C.R.S. The division shall honor such request unless the commissioner determines that the information is already public knowledge or that its confidentiality would be contrary to the public interest or the provider subsequently authorized the commissioner to release such information.

6-18-303. Effect on scope of practice - limited exception to prohibitions on corporate practice of licensed health care providers. (1) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, the fact that an entity or provider is a member of a provider network shall not exempt such entity or provider from any licensure or regulatory statute, nor shall any scope of practice of any provider be expanded, reduced, or otherwise modified by virtue of membership in or affiliation with any provider network.

(2) Any provision of article 29.5, 32, or 33 of title 12, C.R.S., or any of the provisions of articles 35, 36, and 38 to 43 of title 12, C.R.S., prohibiting the practice of any licensed or certificated health care profession as the partner, agent, or employee of or in joint venture with a person who does not hold a license or certificate to practice such profession within this state shall not apply to professional practice if a professional is participating in a provider network organized pursuant to this part 3 and:

(a) The partnership, agency, employment, or joint venture is evidenced by a written agreement containing language to the effect that the relationship created by the agreement may not affect the exercise of the licensed or certified professional's independent judgment in the practice of the profession;

(b) The licensed or certificated professional's independent judgment in the practice of such profession is in fact unaffected by the relationship; and

(c) The licensed professional is not required to exclusively refer any patient to a particular provider or supplier or take any other action the licensed professional determines not to be in the patient's best interest.

6-18-304. Competitive behavior - restraints of trade prohibited. Organization or operation as a provider network is authorized under this article for the purpose of more cost-effective delivery of health care services, and shall not be construed as permitting any such collaborative system or any member of such provider network to act in a concerted way to restrain trade or otherwise engage in practices which are otherwise prohibited by federal or state antitrust law.

TRANSACTIONS INVOLVING LICENSED HOSPITALS

ARTICLE 19

Transactions Involving Licensed Hospitals

Law reviews: For article, "Attorney General Review of Asset Transfers by Nonprofit Hospitals", see 28 Colo. Law. 37 (February 1999).

PART 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

6-19-101. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that all licensed and certified hospitals provide a service to the public by making health care services available to the communities they serve.

(2) Furthermore, for purposes of the attorney general's authority over the transfer of nonprofit hospital assets, all nonprofit hospitals shall be deemed to hold all of their assets in trust, and those assets shall be deemed to be dedicated to the specific charitable purposes set forth in the articles of incorporation or other organic documents of the nonprofit entities that hold them in trust. The public is the beneficiary of this trust. Nonprofit hospitals have a substantial and beneficial effect on the provision of health care to the people of Colorado, providing as part of their charitable purposes uncompensated care to the uninsured or underinsured and including, but not limited to, providing moneys and support for health-related research and education or other community benefits. The general assembly also finds that transfers of the assets of nonprofit hospitals to the for-profit sector may directly affect the character and extent of the charitable use of those assets or the proceeds from the assets. The public also has an interest in knowing that the transfer of the assets of a nonprofit hospital, or the proceeds from the assets, preserves, to the extent practicable, their charitable purpose. The general assembly believes it is in the best interest of the public to ensure that the public interest is fully protected whenever the assets of a hospital are transferred to a for-profit entity except in the ordinary course of business.

(3) The general assembly further finds and declares that all transfers of hospital assets or control have the potential to impact the communities they serve. This article is intended to protect the public interest, to assure that nonprofit assets of hospitals are preserved to serve the charitable purposes to which they were dedicated, and to provide the public notice of all transfers of assets of hospitals that constitute covered transitions as defined in this article and shall be construed with these purposes in mind.

(4) The general assembly further finds and declares that the addition of the factors to be considered in relation to the term "material change" in section 6-19-203 (1) is intended to clarify the provisions of this article.

6-19-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Covered transaction" means any transaction that would result in the sale, transfer, lease, exchange, or other disposition of fifty percent or more of the assets of a hospital. A series of transactions taking place in any five-year period, which would result in the aggregate of the transfer of fifty percent or more of a hospital's assets, shall in all circumstances be deemed to be a covered transaction. "Covered transaction" shall also include the sale, transfer, or other disposition of the control of a parent company, holding company, or other entity controlling a hospital. For the purposes of this subsection (1), "fifty percent or more of the assets" shall be based on the fair market value of all of the assets of the hospital.

(2) "For-profit entity" means a business corporation, general partnership, limited partnership, limited liability limited partnership, limited liability partnership, limited liability company, limited partnership association, and cooperative.

(3) "Hospital" means a licensed or certified hospital as described in section 25-1.5-103 (1) (a) (I) and (1) (a) (II), C.R.S.

Source: L. 98: Entire article added, p. 521, § 1, effective April 30. L. 2003: (3) amended, p. 700, § 4, effective July 1.

6-19-103. Procedures for covered transactions - notice - attorney general powers. (1) The parties to a covered transaction shall provide notice of such transaction to the attorney general no later than sixty days prior to the transaction closing or effective date of the transaction. The notice to the attorney general shall be in writing, shall include the information required in section 6-19-202, 6-19-302, or 6-19-402, as applicable, and shall contain a certification that public notice of the transaction will be given within seven days after the notification to the attorney general.

(2) Whenever the attorney general has reason to believe that a person has engaged in or is engaging in a covered transaction without complying with the provisions of this article, the attorney general may apply for and obtain, in an action in the appropriate district court of this state, a temporary restraining order or injunction, or both, pursuant to the Colorado rules of civil procedure prohibiting such person from continuing such noncompliance or engaging therein or doing any act in furtherance thereof. The court may make such further orders or judgments, at law or in equity, as may be necessary to remedy such noncompliance.

6-19-104. Attorney general - affect on powers. (1) Nothing in this article shall be construed as limiting the attorney general's common law powers.

(2) Nothing in this article shall affect the regulatory authority of any government agency other than the department of law.

PART 2

NONPROFIT TO NONPROFIT TRANSACTIONS

6-19-201. Scope of part 2. This part 2 applies to covered transactions involving a nonprofit hospital and another nonprofit entity.

Source: L. 98: Entire article added, p. 522, § 1, effective April 30.

6-19-202. Notice. Notice shall be provided by the parties to a covered transaction according to section 6-19-103 and shall include a statement on the charitable purposes of each nonprofit entity entering into the covered transaction as well as a statement concerning the relationship of these purposes to the hospital involved in the transaction. The statement may include a certification by the chief executive officer as approved by the board of directors or board of trustees of the nonprofit entity transferring its assets that there will be no material change in the charitable purposes to which the transferred assets are dedicated as a result of the transaction.

Source: L. 98: Entire article added, p. 522, § 1, effective April 30.

6-19-203. Attorney general review and assessment. (1) A covered transaction under this part 2 that will not result in a material change in the charitable purposes to which the assets of the hospital have been dedicated, and will not result in a termination of the attorney general's jurisdiction over those assets caused by a transfer of a material amount of those assets outside of the state of Colorado, shall proceed without further review. In considering whether a material change results from the transaction, the attorney general shall consider, among other factors, reductions in the availability and accessibility of health care services in the communities served by the hospital.

(2) When a transaction covered by this part 2 will result in a material change in the charitable purposes to which the assets of the hospital have been dedicated, or a termination of the attorney general's jurisdiction over the hospital assets caused by a transfer of a material amount of those assets outside the state of Colorado, the attorney general may exercise his or her common law authority to assess and review or challenge the transaction as deemed appropriate by the attorney general. If the attorney general decides to conduct an assessment or review the following provisions shall apply to such actions of the attorney general:

(a) The attorney general shall perform a review and assessment to the extent practicable and with due consideration to the financial circumstances of the parties to the transaction. The attorney general is further authorized to:

(I) Hire experts, at the expense of the parties to the transaction, as similarly provided for in section 6-19-406 (1) (b) and to accept and expend grants or donations, or both, as similarly provided for in section 6-19-406 (1) (e);

(II) Contract and consult with other state agencies as similarly provided for in section 6-19-406 (1) (a);

(III) Require production of material documentation, such as the proposed agreements relating to the proposed transaction, agreements regarding collateral transactions relating to the proposed transaction, and any reports of financial and economic analysis that the nonprofit entity reviewed or relied on in negotiating the proposed transaction. These documents shall be treated in the same manner as set forth in section 6-19-404 (4).

(IV) Hold a public hearing as similarly provided for in section 6-19-404 (1). The attorney general shall provide a written determination within the time frames or extended time frames as similarly provided for in section 6-19-402 (2).

(b) The attorney general shall have the authority to allow a transaction that satisfies the following criteria:

(I) The assets continue to be dedicated to charitable purposes;

(II) The directors or trustees of the parties to the transaction have not acted unreasonably in light of the financial circumstances of the parties;

(III) The directors or trustees of the parties to the transaction have not acted unreasonably in accommodating the affected community or communities; and

(IV) The directors or trustees of the parties to the transaction have not breached their fiduciary duties or otherwise engaged in misconduct in such transaction.

(c) The attorney general shall liberally construe the criteria set forth in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2) in favor of allowing a transaction to proceed.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Choice of Entity 1998", see 27 Colo. Law. 5 (June 1998).

6-19-402. Notice and filing. (1) The notice and filing provided to the attorney general pursuant to section 6-19-103 shall include all proposed agreements relating to the proposed transaction, all agreements regarding collateral transactions that relate to the principal transaction, any reports of financial and economic analysis that the nonprofit entity reviewed or relied on in negotiating the proposed transaction, and an explanation of how the completed transaction will comply with the requirements of section 6-19-403. The attorney general shall notify the parties to the transaction if the filing is complete or incomplete within thirty days after the initial filing and shall specify the omitted documentation if incomplete. An initial filing that includes a schedule for the submission of subsequently produced or acquired documents may be deemed complete by the attorney general.

(2) Within sixty days after the complete filing required by this section, the attorney general shall notify in writing the parties to the transaction of the results and conclusions of the review and assessment. The attorney general may extend this period for an additional period of up to ninety days if the attorney general determines, for good cause, that additional time is warranted and so advises the parties in writing. The attorney general shall notify the parties of any extension as soon as possible.

Source: L. 98: Entire article added, p. 524, § 1, effective April 30.

6-19-403. Certification and criteria. (1) The proposed transaction shall comply with the provisions of this section, and the parties to the transaction shall include in the filing required by section 6-19-402 documentation and certification from the parties, either joint or several as appropriate, that the covered transaction will comply with the following:

(a) The transaction shall be in the public interest. A transaction is not in the public interest unless appropriate steps have been taken to safeguard the value of nonprofit hospital assets being transferred and to ensure that any proceeds of the transaction are dedicated to the charitable purposes.

(b) The transaction results in continuing access to health care services for the affected community.

(c) No director, officer of the board, chief executive officer, chief operating officer, or chief financial officer of the nonprofit entity submitting the filing or a nonprofit charitable organization receiving the proceeds of the covered transaction shall benefit directly or indirectly from the transaction.

(d) The nonprofit entity proposing the transaction shall use due diligence in selecting the for-profit entity that is a party to the transaction and in negotiating the price and other terms and conditions of the transaction.

(e) Proceeds of the covered transaction shall be set aside in an amount equal to the fair market value of the hospital assets being transferred. Fair market value shall be determined at the time of the transaction and include consideration of market value, going concern value, net asset value, and any other significant relevant factors.

(f) The distribution of the proceeds of the covered transaction shall be made only to one or more existing or new charitable organizations operating pursuant to 26 U.S.C. sec. 501 (c) (3) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended.

(g) Each nonprofit charitable organization receiving the proceeds of the covered transaction, its directors, officers, and staff shall be and remain independent of the parties to the transaction and their affiliates. Except as provided in this paragraph (g), no person who is a director, officer of the board, chief executive officer, chief operating officer, or chief financial officer of any party to the transaction submitting the notice and filing, at the time the notice is submitted or at the time of the transaction, shall be qualified to be an officer of the board, chief executive officer, chief operating officer, or chief financial officer of the nonprofit charitable organization receiving the proceeds of the covered transaction. The nonprofit entity that is a party to the proposed transaction shall include in its notice and filing the proposed membership of the initial board of directors of the nonprofit charitable organization that is to receive the proceeds of the covered transaction that shall represent the diverse interests of the affected communities and include persons from the area affected by the transaction. Notwithstanding the requirements of this paragraph (g), each nonprofit charitable organization receiving the proceeds of the covered transaction may have persons affiliated with parties to the transaction or their affiliates serve on its board of directors provided that such persons do not constitute more than one-third of the members of the board.

(h) A nonprofit charitable organization receiving the proceeds of the covered transaction shall put mechanisms in place to avoid conflicts of interest and to prohibit grants or other actions benefiting its board of directors or management beyond the reasonable value of their services or substantially benefiting the for-profit entity.

(i) The charitable mission and functions of the nonprofit charitable organization receiving the proceeds of the covered transaction shall reflect the historical charitable purposes of the nonprofit entity proposing the transaction.

Source: L. 98: Entire article added, p. 524, § 1, effective April 30.

6-19-404. Attorney general review. (1) No later than thirty days after the attorney general has received the completed notice and filing pursuant to section 6-19-402, the attorney general shall hold at least one public hearing in the service area of the hospital involved in the transaction, at which the attorney general shall allow any person to either file written comments and exhibits or appear and make a statement about any aspect of the transaction, including, but not limited to, whether the proposed transaction complies with the requirements of section 6-19-403. At least seven days prior to each public hearing, the attorney general shall submit a press release providing pertinent information about the hearing, including the time and place of the hearing, to one or more newspapers of general circulation in the affected communities and notify the mayor of the city or city and county and the board of county commissioners of the county in which the hospital is located. The public hearing shall be a legislative rather than an adjudicative hearing.

(2) The attorney general shall have the power to subpoena documents or witnesses, require and administer oaths, and require statements at any time that are reasonably necessary to assess an application or monitor compliance with this section.

(3) If any person fails to cooperate with any investigation pursuant to this section or fails to obey any subpoena issued pursuant to this section, the attorney general may apply to the appropriate district court for an appropriate order to effect the purposes of this section. The application shall state that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the order applied for is necessary to carry out the attorney general's duties under this section. If the court is satisfied that reasonable grounds exist, the court, in its order, may:

(a) Require the attendance of or the production of documents by such person, or both;

(b) Grant such other or further relief as may be necessary to obtain compliance by such person.

(4) Except for documents the attorney general determines to be confidential as a matter of law, the documents filed pursuant to section 6-19-402 shall be available to the public for review and copying during normal business hours at both the attorney general's office and the offices of the parties to the transaction. Reasonable costs of copying shall be borne by the parties if copies are requested at their offices.

Source: L. 98: Entire article added, p. 526, § 1, effective April 30.

6-19-405. Post-transaction requirements. For a period of not less than five years, the nonprofit charitable organization receiving the proceeds of the covered transaction shall provide the attorney general with an annual report of its grant-making and other charitable activities related to its use of the proceeds of the covered transaction received. For a period of not less than five years, the for-profit entity shall provide the attorney general with an annual report detailing its activities to satisfy the requirements of section 6-19-403 at the time of the review and assessment. These annual reports shall be made available to the public at the attorney general's office, the office of the nonprofit charitable organization, and the offices of the parties to the covered transaction. The annual report shall be filed no later than ninety days after the year that the report addresses.

Source: L. 98: Entire article added, p. 527, § 1, effective April 30.

6-19-406. Attorney general powers. (1) The attorney general has the following powers:

(a) To contract with, consult with, and receive advice from any state agency on those terms and conditions that the attorney general and the executive director deem appropriate;

(b) To contract with persons including, but not limited to, attorneys, accountants, actuaries, financial analysts, and health care analysts as is reasonable and necessary to assist in reviewing a proposed transaction. Contract costs shall be borne by the parties to the transaction and shall not exceed an amount that is reasonably necessary to conduct the review and assessment.

(c) To adopt regulations or guidelines as necessary in order to carry out the requirements of this section;

(d) The discretion to determine, consistent with the requirements of section 6-19-404, the degree of administrative review of the transaction that is necessary to determine whether the transaction conforms with the requirements of section 6-19-403. This determination shall be made by taking into consideration, among other things, the size of the transaction, the size of all communities affected by the transaction, the impact on the communities, and the past performance of the for-profit entity.

(e) To accept and expend grants or donations, or both, not to exceed fifty thousand dollars for the purpose of the implementation of this article. Any such grants or donations shall be deposited into and expended from the nonprofit health care entity review cash fund created in paragraph (f) of this subsection (1).

(f) To request and receive from the for-profit entity such sums as may be prescribed by the attorney general to cover the necessary and actual costs for monitoring for the ensuing five-year period to ensure that the transaction remains in compliance with the requirements of section 6-19-403. Any moneys collected pursuant to this paragraph (f) shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the nonprofit health care entity review cash fund, which fund is hereby created in the state treasury. The moneys in such fund shall be continuously appropriated for the direct and indirect costs of such monitoring. In accordance with section 24-36-114, C.R.S., all interest derived from the deposit and investment of this fund shall be credited to the general fund.

(g) To hold a hearing after twenty days' notice to the affected parties if the attorney general receives information that the attorney general deems sufficient to indicate that the nonprofit charitable organization or for-profit entity may not be fulfilling its obligations pursuant to section 6-19-403. If, after such hearing, the attorney general determines that proof of the noncompliance is probable, he or she shall institute proceedings in district court to require corrective action. The attorney general shall retain oversight of the corrective action for as long as necessary to ensure compliance. Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the attorney general's power to enforce compliance with this section after the expiration of the five-year period contemplated by paragraph (f) of this subsection (1).

6-19-407. Attorney general review and assessment. (1) The attorney general may review any notice and filing made under this part 4 and assess whether the proposed transaction complies with the requirements of section 6-19-403.

(2) If, after review and assessment, the attorney general concludes that all of the requirements of section 6-19-403 have been met, the attorney general shall issue a written assessment and conclusion to such effect on the proposed transaction. If the attorney general concludes, after discussions with the parties to the transaction, that all of the requirements of section 6-19-403 have not been met, or if the attorney general is unable to conclude whether or not all of the requirements of section 6-19-403 have been met, the attorney general shall issue a written assessment and conclusion to such effect on the proposed transaction. Such nonconclusive or noncomplying assessment and conclusion shall include specific findings on each of the requirements of section 6-19-403. The attorney general may also issue a written statement that a formal assessment and review has not been determined necessary for the covered transaction or that the transaction does not constitute a covered transaction.

(3) The attorney general may challenge any proposed transaction at any time through injunction, declaratory order, or otherwise, in the district court of the jurisdiction in which the nonprofit entity proposing the transaction has its principal place of business or where the hospital involved in the transaction is located. If the attorney general's assessment and review under this section is challenged in court, the attorney general's conclusions shall be the focus of the review by the reviewing court and shall be given strong deference by such court. The burden shall be upon the proponents of the transaction to establish that the attorney general's conclusions are not in conformance with statutory provisions. The court shall have the power to issue whatever orders are necessary to ensure compliance with the provisions of section 6-19-403.

Hospital Disclosures to Consumers

PART 1

DISCLOSURE OF AVERAGE CHARGE

6-20-101. Provider disclosure of average charge. (1) Each hospital licensed or certified pursuant to section 25-1.5-103 (1) (a), C.R.S., shall disclose to a person seeking care or treatment his or her right to receive notice of the average facility charge for such treatment that is a frequently performed inpatient procedure prior to admission for such procedure; except that care or treatment for an emergency need not be disclosed prior to such emergency care or treatment. When requested, the average charge information shall be made available to the person prior to admission for such procedure.

(2) Other health facilities licensed or certified pursuant to section 25-1.5-103 (1) (a), C.R.S., shall disclose to a person seeking care or treatment his or her right to receive notice of the average facility charge for such treatment that is a frequently performed procedure prior to ordering or scheduling such procedure; except that care or treatment for an emergency need not be disclosed prior to such emergency care or treatment. When requested, such average charge information shall be made available to the person prior to the scheduling of the procedure.

PART 2

NOTIFICATION OF DEBT BY A HEALTH CARE PROVIDER

6-20-201. Definitions. For the purposes of this part 2, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Collection activity" means only those activities provided or performed by a licensed collection agency, using a business name other than the name of the health care provider, for purposes of collecting a debt. The term does not include any standard billing procedures used by the health care provider or its agent in the normal course of business on current, nondelinquent accounts.

(2) "Collection agency" shall have the same meaning as in section 12-14-103 (2), C.R.S.

(3) "Health care provider" includes a health care facility licensed pursuant to article 3 of title 25, C.R.S., and any other health care provider.

6-20-202. Notice to patient of debt. (1) (a) When a person has health benefit coverage to provide payment for care or treatment rendered by a health care provider and the person has notified the health care provider of coverage within thirty days after the date the care or treatment was rendered, and if the health coverage plan, as defined in section 10-16-102 (22.5), C.R.S., pays only a portion of the debt, prior to the assignment of the debt to a licensed collection agency, the health care provider shall mail written notice to the last-known address of the person responsible for payment of the debt at least thirty days before any collection activity on any amount due and owing the health care provider.

(b) The notice required of health care providers by paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) shall include the amount due and owing; the name, address, and telephone number of the health care provider; where payment may be made; the date of service; and the last date or number of days after the date of the notice the health care provider will accept payment prior to the debt being submitted to a collection agency or reporting adverse information to a consumer reporting agency for the debt for which notice was provided.

(2) (a) If the health care provider fails to provide the person with notice of such debt and all other information required by subsection (1) of this section, the health care provider shall not pursue any rights to collect such outstanding amount either through a collection agency or by any further efforts of the health care provider to collect the debt. In addition, the health care provider may not report adverse information to a consumer reporting agency for the debt for which notice was provided without providing notice to the person pursuant to subsection (1) of this section. The health care provider shall assist the person in correcting any adverse credit information because of the health care provider's failure to provide notice pursuant to subsection (1) of this section.

(b) Notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary, a health care provider may remedy a failure to give notice by providing a written report to the collection agency to withhold any collection activity and withholding any of the health care provider's own collection efforts until the provider complies with the notice and time requirements pursuant to subsection (1) of this section.

(c) Nothing in this subsection (2) shall be construed to require a health care provider to perform additional attempts to notify a person of the person's portion of the debt other than mailing the notice required pursuant to subsection (1) of this section to the person's last-known address and maintaining a record of such mailing.

(d) The failure of a health care provider or its agent to provide the notice required by subsection (1) of this section shall not create a cause of action or remedy against a collection agency under the "Colorado Fair Debt Collection Practices Act", article 14 of title 12, C.R.S.

PROTECTION AGAINST EXPLOITATION OF AT-RISK ADULTS

ARTICLE 21

Protection Against Financial Exploitation

6-21-101. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds that:

(a) Financial exploitation of at-risk adults is an area of significant concern;

(b) At-risk adults comprise an increasingly large segment of society, and the financial exploitation of such persons is occurring at an ever-increasing rate;

(c) Persons committing financial exploitation of at-risk adults may be persons known to the at-risk adult or strangers perpetrating fraudulent schemes, and may be in a position to threaten to withhold care, manipulate, or deceive an at-risk adult;

(d) At-risk adults may not report or prevent financial exploitation due to lack of information, fear, or intimidation;

(e) Financial institutions are in unique positions to acquire early knowledge of financial exploitation by noticing indicators such as sudden changes in bank account activity or banking practices; unexplained withdrawals or atypical transactions involving withdrawals; abrupt changes to wills or other financial documents requested by the at-risk adult; the sudden appearance of previously uninvolved relatives claiming a right to the at-risk adult's affairs and possessions; and unexplained, sudden transfers of assets to a family member of the at-risk adult or another person outside of the at-risk adult's family;

(f) While financial institutions are often in a position to notice indicators of financial exploitation, they may be limited in their ability to release financial records immediately to law enforcement and county departments because of their obligations to maintain confidentiality of bank files and records;

(g) By obtaining a signed prior consent form from account holders who are at-risk adults, financial institutions can cooperate and share vital information with law enforcement and county departments, allowing those entities to respond more quickly to known or suspected instances of financial exploitation of at-risk adults.

(2) Therefore, the general assembly finds and determines that it is appropriate to require financial institutions, which may be in a position to observe indicators of financial exploitation, to offer at-risk adults the option to sign a prior consent form so as to facilitate rapid response from law enforcement and county departments.

6-21-102. Definitions. As used in this article:

(1) "Account holder" means a person who opens or has an account at a financial institution established primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.

(2) "At-risk adult" has the same meaning as set forth in section 18-6.5-102, C.R.S.

(3) "County department" means a county or district department of social services.

(4) "Eligible account holder" means an account holder who is or becomes, while holding an account at the financial institution, an at-risk adult.

(5) "Financial exploitation" means the illegal or improper use of an at-risk adult's financial resources for another person's profit or advantage.

(6) "Financial institution" means a state or federal bank, savings bank, savings and loan association or company, building and loan association, trust company, or credit union.

6-21-103. Release of financial information - prior consent - financial exploitation investigations - civil immunity. (1) (a) A financial institution shall offer each eligible account holder, and may offer all account holders, the option to voluntarily sign a prior consent form for placement in the account holder's file or record maintained by the financial institution. The financial institution shall provide notice of the availability of the option, including a description of the purpose of the prior consent as described in paragraph (c) of this subsection (1), when the financial institution establishes a customer relationship with an eligible account holder and at least annually during the continuation of the relationship. The financial institution may provide the notice required by this subsection (1) in conjunction with the disclosure required by 15 U.S.C. sec. 6803.

(b) By September 1, 2010, the attorney general shall develop, with input from the division of banking and the division of financial services in the department of regulatory agencies, representatives of financial institutions, county departments, local law enforcement, district attorneys, at-risk adults, and other stakeholders, a standard prior consent form that may be used by financial institutions.

(c) By signing a prior consent form, an account holder waives the confidentiality limitations related to his or her financial records maintained at the financial institution for the limited purpose of allowing the financial institution to alert or notify the county department and a local law enforcement agency of known or suspected financial exploitation of the account holder and provide the county department and local law enforcement access to the account holder's records to investigate known or suspected financial exploitation of the account holder.

(d) A prior consent form executed pursuant to this section is effective until the financial institution receives written notice of revocation and survives any disability of the account holder that occurs after the execution of the prior consent form. In the absence of actual knowledge of a judicial determination of incapacity, a financial institution may assume that any account holder that executes a prior consent form has the legal capacity to perform the act.

(2) Nothing in this article or in a signed prior consent form obligates a financial institution to report known or suspected financial exploitation of an account holder.

RESIDENTIAL ROOFING SERVICES

ARTICLE 22

Roofing Services - Residential Property

Editor's note: Section 2 of chapter 267, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act adding this article applies to roofing work performed on residential property in this state on or after June 6, 2012.

6-22-101. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby declares that the purpose of enacting this article is to protect Colorado consumers by:

(a) Requiring roofing contractors offering to perform roofing work on residential property in this state to sign a written contract with property owners detailing the scope and cost of the roofing work and contact information for the roofing contractor;

(b) Requiring roofing contractors to permit property owners to rescind a contract for the performance of roofing work and obtain a refund of any deposit paid to the roofing contractor; and

(c) Prohibiting roofing contractors from paying, waiving, rebating, or promising to pay, waive, or rebate all or part of any insurance deductible applicable to an insurance claim made to the property owner's property and casualty insurer for payment for roofing work on the residential property covered by a property and casualty insurance policy.

6-22-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Property owner" means the owner of residential property or the owner's legal representative.

(2) (a) "Residential property" means:

(I) A detached, one- or two-family dwelling; or

(II) Multiple single-family dwellings that are not more than three stories above grade plane height and provide separate means of egress.

(b) "Residential property" does not include:

(I) A structure comprising multiple, attached single-family dwellings, unless maintenance, repair, or replacements of the dwellings' roof is the responsibility of a condominium association, homeowners' association, common interest community, unit owners' association, or any other entity subject to the "Colorado Common Interest Ownership Act", article 33.3 of title 38, C.R.S., regardless of when the entity was formed; or

(II) New construction.

(3) "Roofing contractor" means:

(a) An individual or sole proprietorship that performs roofing work or roofing services in this state for compensation; or

(b) (I) A firm, partnership, corporation, association, business trust, limited liability company, or other legal entity that performs or offers to perform roofing work in this state on residential property for compensation.

(II) As used in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b), "association" does not include a condominium association, homeowners' association, common interest community, unit owners' association, or any other entity subject to the "Colorado Common Interest Ownership Act", article 33.3 of title 38, C.R.S., regardless of when the entity was formed.

(4) (a) "Roofing work" or "roofing services" means the construction, reconstruction, alteration, maintenance, or repair of a roof on a residential property and the use of materials and items in the construction, reconstruction, alteration, maintenance, and repair of roofing and waterproofing of roofs, all in a manner to comply with plans, specifications, codes, laws, rules, regulations, and roofing industry standards for workmanlike performance applicable to the construction, reconstruction, alteration, maintenance, and repair of roofs on residential properties.

(b) "Roofing work" or "roofing services" does not include roofing work or services for which the compensation is one thousand dollars or less per contract.

6-22-103. Contracts for roofing services - writing required - required terms. (1) Prior to engaging in any roofing work, a roofing contractor shall provide a written contract to the property owner, signed by both the roofing contractor or his or her designee and the property owner, stating at least the following terms:

(a) The scope of roofing services and materials to be provided;

(b) The approximate dates of service;

(c) The approximate costs of the services based on damages known at the time the contract is entered;

(d) The roofing contractor's contact information, including physical address, electronic mail address, telephone number, and any other contact information available for the roofing contractor;

(e) Identification of the roofing contractor's surety and liability coverage insurer and their contact information, if applicable;

(f) (I) The roofing contractor's policy regarding cancellation of the contract and refund of any deposit, including a rescission clause allowing the property owner to rescind the contract and obtain a full refund of any deposit within seventy-two hours after entering the contract; and

(II) A written statement that the property owner may rescind a roofing contract pursuant to section 6-22-104; and

(g) A written statement that if the property owner plans to use the proceeds of a property and casualty insurance policy issued pursuant to part 1 of article 4 of title 10, C.R.S., to pay for the roofing work, pursuant to section 6-22-105, the roofing contractor cannot pay, waive, rebate, or promise to pay, waive, or rebate all or part of any insurance deductible applicable to the insurance claim for payment for roofing work on the covered residential property.

(2) In addition to the contract terms required in subsection (1) of this section, a roofing contractor shall include, on the face of the contract, in bold-faced type, a statement indicating that the roofing contractor shall hold in trust any payment from the property owner until the roofing contractor has delivered roofing materials at the residential property site or has performed a majority of the roofing work on the residential property.

6-22-104. Residential roofing contract - payment from insurance proceeds - right to rescind - return of payments. (1) (a) A property owner who enters into a written contract with a roofing contractor to perform roofing work on the property owner's residential property, the payment for which will be made from the proceeds of a property and casualty insurance policy issued pursuant to part 1 of article 4 of title 10, C.R.S., may rescind the contract within seventy-two hours after the property owner receives written notice from the property and casualty insurer that the claim for payment for roofing work on the residential property is denied in whole or in part. The property owner's right of rescission under this subsection (1) does not apply when the property and casualty insurer denies, in whole or in part, a claim related to a request for supplemental roofing services if the damage requiring the supplemental roofing services could not have been reasonably foreseen as a necessary and related roofing service at the time of the initial roofing inspection or the execution of the initial roofing contract.

(b) The property owner shall give written notice of rescission of the contract to the roofing contractor at the physical address provided in the contract within seventy-two hours after he or she is notified of the denial. The property owner may give notice of rescission of the contract:

(I) In an electronic form, which is effective on the date of the electronic transmission;

(II) By mail, which is effective upon deposit in the United States mail, postage prepaid, sent to the physical address stated in the contract; or

(III) By personal delivery to the roofing contractor, which is effective upon delivery.

(2) Within ten days after rescission of a contract in accordance with subsection (1) of this section, the roofing contractor shall return to the property owner any payments or deposits made by or evidence of indebtedness of the property owner in connection with the contract for roofing work on the residential property.

(3) Nothing in this section precludes a roofing contractor from retaining all or a portion of any payments or deposits made by a property owner to compensate the roofing contractor for roofing work actually performed on the residential property in a workmanlike manner consistent with standard roofing industry practices, but the roofing contractor may retain only an amount required to compensate the roofing contractor for the actual work performed.

(4) Nothing in this section abrogates the roofing contractor's right to pursue common law remedies for the reasonable value of roofing materials ordered and actually installed on the residential property pursuant to a contract for roofing work before the property owner rescinded the contract, as long as the roofing contractor performed the roofing services consistent with roofing industry standards for workmanlike performance of roofing services.

(5) Nothing in this section abrogates a property and casualty insurer's duties, responsibilities, or liability under sections 10-3-1115 and 10-3-1116, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2012: Entire article added, (SB 12-038), ch. 267, p. 1388, § 1, effective June 6.

6-22-105. Waiver of insurance deductible prohibited. (1) A roofing contractor that performs roofing work, the payment for which will be made from the proceeds of a property and casualty insurance policy issued pursuant to part 1 of article 4 of title 10, C.R.S., shall not advertise or promise to pay, waive, or rebate all or part of any insurance deductible applicable to the claim for payment for roofing work on the covered residential property.

(2) If a roofing contractor violates subsection (1) of this section:

(a) The insurer to whom the property owner submitted the claim for payment for the roofing work is not obligated to consider the estimate of costs for the roofing work prepared by the roofing contractor; and

(b) The property owner whose residential property is insured under the property and casualty insurance policy or the insurer that issued the policy may bring an action against the roofing contractor in a court of competent jurisdiction to recover damages sustained by the property owner or insurer as a consequence of the violation.

(3) A roofing contractor soliciting roofing services in this state shall not claim to be or act as a public insurance adjuster adjusting claims for losses or damages. Nothing in this article prevents a public insurance adjuster licensed pursuant to section 10-2-417, C.R.S., from acting or holding himself or herself out as a public insurance adjuster. Nothing in this subsection (3) precludes a roofing contractor from discussing, on behalf of the property owner, the scope of repairs with a property and casualty insurer when the roofing contractor has a valid contract with the property owner of the residential property on which the roofing contractor has contracted to perform roofing work.
